

THE FARINGTON DIARY

GEORGE IV, WHO FIGURES IN THE DREAM OF FRENCHMAN WILSON.
From the Painting by Sir Thomas Lawrence in the Victoria and Albert Museum.

THE FARINGTON DIARY

BY

JOSEPH FARINGTON, R.A.

EDITED BY

JAMES GREIG

AUTHOR OF

A "Life of Thomas Gainsborough," and a "Life of Sir Henry Raeburn"

VOL. IV.

(SEPTEMBER 20, 1806, to JANUARY 7, 1808)

With Frontispiece and twelve other illustrations

LONDON:

HUTCHINSON & CO.

PATERNOSTER ROW

1924

F2264

V. 4

VOL. I.

First edition published December, 1922

Second " " " 1922

Third " " February, 1924

VOL. II.

First edition published August, 1923

VOL. III.

First edition published March, 1924

VOL. IV.

First edition published November, 1924.

INTRODUCTION

The fourth volume of Farington's Diary opens with the interesting and pleasant group of a house party in the Autumn of 1806 at Taplow Court, Lord Thomond's riverside residence. In two entries the Diarist gives significant portraits of himself. The first self sketch was made on October 8, before a dinner "all plate" at which champagne was carried round, claret, port, madeira and sherry being served afterwards. "I drank Sherry & Port," says Farington, "Lord Thomond chiefly Madeira." Pascoe Grenfell, M.P. for Great Marlow, was one of the guests and the host warned the others to "touch upon the conduct of Administration delicately as Mr. Grenfell is attached to Lord Grenville," who was then Prime Minister. To Lord Thomond, Farington replied, with characteristic caution, "I never express my sentiments on that subject till I hear those of others."

On the following day a large party was to dine with Sir John Turner, and Lord Thomond said that Dr. Lawrence [or "Roland" Lane], Pascoe Grenfell, and Sir John Turner "wd. have all the talk to themselves so that the others . . . might be silent." Farington modestly answered: "I never liked to hear the sound of my own voice but in small parties of those with whom I was well acquainted." Dr. Lawrence was a glutton as well as a talker, as we gather from the same entry. "It was sd. that we ate to have a poke of 14 pounds weight." Farington [sd] Dr. Lawrence having the reputation of being a large eater wd. make a figure at it. "They sd. His appetite is prodigious." Sir Wm. Scott's wife says that if the Doctor dines where there are sweet things none wd. be left for the next day."

One more personal reference to Farington, this time in relation with Wordsworth. The incident must be given in the Diarist's own phrasing.

"Constable remarked [on December 12, 1808] upon the high opinion Wordsworth entertains of himself. He told Constable that while He was a Boy going to Hawkshead school, His mind was often so possessed with images, so lost in extraordinary conceptions, that He has held by a wall not knowing but He was part of it. He also denied a Lady, Mrs. Lloyd, near Winklesham when Constable was present to notice the singular formation of Her Skull. Coleridge remarked that this was the effect of intense thinking. I observed to Constable if so, He must have thought in His Mother's womb."

Returning to the river party at Taplow, we learn from Lord Thomond that the manners of the Prince of Wales in Society are the most finished that can be imagined. He is captivating in the highest degree, has read much, holds conversations most agreeably, sings and "observes with nice attention any encroachment upon His importance, but does not express it at the time." The picture of the Prince, however, is not wholly flattering, and "Finally our conversation on this subject ended with saying 'Oh, King live for ever.'"

Public schools are severely condemned by Dr. Gretton, who kept a private one at Taplow. "He said the bane of the public schools is that the parents of many of the Boys fill their pockets with Bank notes, and opportunity is allowed for the expenditure of it viciously." He describes the characters of the three great Schools by saying that the "Boys at Eaton are dissipated gentlemen ;—those at Westminster dissipated with a little of the Blackguard ;—and those at St. Paul's School the most depraved of all." Nor is Rugby unscathed. "In it are many of the Sons of Gentlemen but more of those who are the Sons of Manufacturers at Birmingham, Wolverhampton &c., who have little sentiment of the disgrace of any dishonorable act as their inclinations lead them." At Harrow the "Boys are gentlemen, as are those at Dr. Gretton's own school, where they never expend more than two guineas a year." At his request the parents supplied their sons with a guinea and if they required more he gave them "a shilling at a time."

In Chapter III, Dr. Gretton tells an extraordinary story of a Royal Academician who was a greater rogue than painter, and he also speaks of the good society in the neighbourhood of Taplow. "The Commercial men 'bear the Bill.' At Craufurd Bruce's you dine of Plate, and Champagne, Tokay—Hermitage, &c., are proposed to you in succession as soon as you have begun to eat.—Pascoe Grenfell still exceeds Hemmer. His Plate is gilt."

Lord Thomond gives a droll description of the Prince of Orange, who had recently died. "While the Prince was in England He was often treated with most disrespectful levity by the Prince of Wales and His Brothers. They would pluck His Hair, & on His moving His Head round, another would do the same on the other side making Him the sport of the Company. The King, on the contrary, always behaved to Him with kindness & respect."

The sad case of Sir John D'Oyly and the great extravagance of his wife are discussed: "In one year Her Bill to Mrs. Beavals the Dress-maker amounted to £700, and Mrs. Beavals to keep well with the waiting maid of so good a Customer, sent Her a present of a faced Clock, but the maid did not think it of sufficient value & returned it. —Another was sent, but that wd. not do, and a third, worth towards 30 guineas, was presented and graciously accepted." Lady D'Oyly's jealousy and its consequences are made the most of by Mrs. Partington, who also tells us that her Ladyship's passion for dress "continued to the last. Three weeks before Her death she ordered Hats to the amount of £30 when Sir John could scarcely raise 30 shillings."

In further gossip at Taplow interesting reference is made to the Princess of Wales (who figures prominently in the volume), to the love sacrifice of Mr. Penton, of Pentonville Lane, and the romantic story of one of Lord Elgin's amateurs. Fear of the Ministry, political intrigue and captured frigates also form subjects for discussion at Lord Thomond's table, as do the Duke of Manchester's industry, and Mr. Croftell says that if it were not for the Methodist preachers the Cornish people would be "Savage."

In Chapter IX, we read that Lady Oxford never allows a book of any kind except such as she may have read and approved, to lay in a room to which the children have access. The Hayes describes the grief of the mourners at Fox's funeral, where he finds Sheridan "greatly altered & His nobility from His appearance that His liver is much impaired, & thinks it will ere long terminate in Dropsy."

Architects' fees, William Beckford's singularity and pretension, James Barry's character and qualities are talked about, and, throughout the volume, war echoes occupy considerable space. The mention of Bonaparte's victories in Prussia and Poland seriously affected the public and the Press.

On November 24, 1806, it is stated in Bell's Weekly Messenger "that Europe is lost. Russia can only be saved by an immediate Peace, and England, as having no farther object in the war, must from every motive of prudence be a party in the same general peace." At dinner tables are heard despondent remarks that the storm gathering around us must break on us, and "that, seeing the fall of other nations, the people of this country may possibly become reconciled to whatever may happen to them." On the other hand, money is abundant in the City, where the only fear is that "Ministers will give way & not adhere to their resolutions." "The times are critical, but all we require is to maintain our resolution."

Much is heard of eminent men occupied in various spheres of life. Questioned on his death bed by the Bishop of Lincoln respecting religion and prayer, Pitt is supposed to have said, "I leave my situation in life & public affairs weighing heavily upon me. I have not attended so much to those duties as I wished and desired, but God bless my soul!" He afterwards added, "I rely entirely upon the infinite mercy of God, through the merits of my Saviour Jesus Christ."

Fox, on hearing his own "command of words," retorted, observed that "certainly He had a word but Pitt always had the Word." It was also remarked of Pitt that he "never uttered a sentence ungrammatically. Pouson, the Greek professor, said that every sentence uttered by Pitt was as regular and correct as to appear as if formed in his mind before it was expressed. On the contrary, Mr. Fox plunged into the middle and found his way through it as well as he could."

The last illness and death of John Thor, R.A., "the Cornish wonder," are recorded at length, an Epitaph is made of Hoggar's jealousy and childishness, of how he offended Farington and snubbed a lady. Turner is characterized as conceited and his pictures are called "cude blotches, there are interesting anecdotes about Sir Joshua Reynolds, Mr. Coke of Norfolk, is represented as an "incessant talker," politician and clever business man, and Wordsworth, as art critic, "thought Historical subjects should never be introduced into Landscape, but where the Landscape was to be subservient to them," and so on. He thought the Royal Academy of 1807 "a poor exhibition," and upset Sir David Wilkie by proposing subjects for him to paint. Wilkie was then famous and when Sir John Leicester asked Turner the price of his picture of a Forge, Turner answered that he understood Wilkie was to have 100 guineas for "His Blind Fiddler, and He should not rate His picture at a less price." Catalani, the celebrated singer, appeared at the Opera for the first time on Saturday, December 13, 1806, in a new serious work called La Semeuse by Portogallo, and on the 21st, Farington says, "she has Luce for the season—and a benefit. She is about 24 years [she was 26], and is married." Later he informs us that Mrs. Hillington had £2,500, but this is concealed from Catalani, who "produces greater profits to the Opera House than were ever before known, the receipts of the House, exclusive of Boxes, is upon an average between 6 & £700 a night . . . She is very much attached to Her Husband, & cannot be approached by those who would offer temptations to Her."

Ralph Kirtley, Sir Joshua Reynolds' old servant, is responsible for the following pathetic story. "From the time that Sir Joshua found He must die He appeared to wish that no one should visit him, but he could not refuse Mr. Burke. He lay whole nights seemingly without sleep, but silent, except that after a long interval in the night He would hastily call out Ralph as if to assure himself that He was not alone."

The kindness of Princess Sophia of Gloucester is recorded, and we learn that Dr. Fisher, Bishop of Salisbury, got into trouble with the Prince of Wales because he complained of the "great negligence shown in educating and attending the Princess" Charlotte of Wales, whose preceptor he was. As an instance of this neglect "the Bishop noted that Her nose requiring to be wiped, she did not apply Her Handkerchief, but wiped Her nose with Her sleeve, as vulgar people do."

Many more entertaining entries could be summarized, but readers must go to the text itself and find by means of the full index volume to such as "The Prince and Metcalfe," "Coalition against Bonaparte," "Lord Thomond as Waiter," "Sonne cleaned the Shoes," "Artists and Critics," "Holt, a Political Writer," "Women and Art," "Boxer and Duellist," "Indiscretion of the Marchioness," "Greeks Ignorant of Anagrams," "Constable declines," "Freedom of the Seas," "Newspapers and the Public," "Coleridge and Kindness," and "The Lover of Virginia Kauffman."

Editorial interpolations in the text are placed, as in previous volumes, within brackets, and Farington's spelling and punctuation are preserved throughout.

To Mr. T. P. Greig belongs the credit of compiling the Index, and Mr. Robert Harris again helped in the proof reading.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
CHAPTER I
Bull's Statue of Pitt—Trafalgar Court—Oh, King, Live for Ever—Great Robbers—The Prince's Song	1
CHAPTER II
The Prince and Metcalfe—Public Schools—The Chaplain's Table—Not Proud but Proud	5
CHAPTER III
Theater Bogue than Pandor—Doris Not Worth Expense—Bound Out—And Poisons Himself—Induced to Marry Him—She Died Next Morning—An Affected Exclamation—Cruel Society	8
CHAPTER IV
Sir John Fortely—Made to his Wife—The Prince of Orange—They plucked His Hair—William III.—Fortely a Bill—Sir John Argled	11
CHAPTER V
Coalition Against Bonaparte—Pitt and Cast's Mercy—Sir John Fortely—His Unhappy Marriage—Lady Fortely's Jealousy—Wanted Connections	12
CHAPTER VI
Lord Thomson as Walter—Princess of Wales—Merry for our Hearts—Mr. Panton's Coaching—Curled Staff—Commercial Embour—A Bonmouth Story	21
CHAPTER VII
Fear of the Ministry—A Presumed Accident—Political Intrigue—Captured Brigades—Latterton's Caution—Cool Fidelity	24
CHAPTER VIII
A Spanish Banquet—Bull's His own Enemy—A Pocket Party—Savages and Methodists—General Moranda	28
CHAPTER IX
Fox's Funeral—Novels Not to be Born—Influenced with Tears—Architects' Fees—Beckford's Singularity—Sir Richard had No Taste—A Painting by Barry—A Paxing Concert	31

Contents

CHAPTER X

A Doctor's Charges—Language and Insurance—Defeat of the Prussians—A Prototype of Colonel Lawrence—Unarmed and Fearless—He Kept a Diary	PAGE 35
---	------------

CHAPTER XI

Ships in Commission—Lawrence and West—Lawrence and Henry Hope— Business is Business—The Blind Fiddler—Burns and Wordsworth.....	39
--	----

CHAPTER XII

Hoppner's Jealousy—Prussia had Fallen—Dinner with Sir George—Opie's Ingratitude—Sheridan Neglected—Soane Cleaned the Shoes.....	43
--	----

CHAPTER XIII

Artists and Critics—John Linnell—Lawrence and the Princess—West Anti- English—Sheridan Wins—R.A.'s Perplexed—Hoppner Childish.....	47
---	----

CHAPTER XIV

The Hardwicke—The Duke as Visitor—Europe is Lost—Falling Nations— A Crust in Her Hand .....	51
--	----

CHAPTER XV

Lawyer or Attorney—Sheridan's Talents—West and the Presidency—The Prince's Health—The King and the Baronetcy—Cheapness before Art —Paid Large Wagers .....	53
--	----

CHAPTER XVI

Canova and Flaxman—Pitt always had the Word —Farlington and Hoppner— West Elected .....	56
---	----

CHAPTER XVII

West and Wyatt—Holt, a Political Writer—Bonaparte's Blockade—Prince and Lord Grenville—A Younger Brother.....	59
--	----

CHAPTER XVIII

A Great Singer—Peculiar Disposition—E. Edwards, A.R.A.—Picture of Bona- parte—Lady Worsley .....	62
---	----

CHAPTER XIX

Wars and Wealth—Sir John Carr .....	66
-------------------------------------	----

CHAPTER XX

Lord Warwick and a Picture—Women and Art—Art Patrons—Celebrated Banking House .....	69
--	----

CHAPTER XXI

Schoolmasters—A School at Ealing—Professional versus Amateur.....	72
---	----

CHAPTER XXII

Hoppner and Lawrence—Christian Humility—Army Apothecary—Rev. Sydney Smith .....	75
--	----

CHAPTER XXIII

Lord Warwick's Protege —Detestable Conduct—Hoydell and Business— Russian Victory—A Great Project—Libe and Liberty—Safeguarded— Military Defences	PAGE 77
---	------------

CHAPTER XXIV

Shoe and Hopper—Sir Joshua and the Bishop—The Duke of Bronte—A Book Collector—Captain Thomas Mauley—Authors and Publishers	82
---	----

CHAPTER XXV

Catalani at the Opera—Wordsworth—Society of Antiquaries—The Banker and Sir Joshua	86
--	----

CHAPTER XXVI

Capture of Curaçoa—Waggonry—Commerce and Landed Interest—Flaxman— Fully Employed—Herewith and Harry	89
--	----

CHAPTER XXVII

Boxer and Duelist—Wine and Brandv—E. Samuel Pitt—Lawrence's Financial Troubles—Russian Victory at Eylau	91
--	----

CHAPTER XXVIII

Settled at Last—Indiscretion of the Marchioness—Sir Home Esplanet Threats —Pitt's Monument—The Prince's Tailor—A Proud Merchant	95
--	----

CHAPTER XXIX

A Committee of Taste—R.A. Generosity—Sir John Leicester—Wilkie and Tenniers	100
--	-----

CHAPTER XXX

Lord Mulgrave—Political Matters—The Ablest Man—Gordon the Artist—A Famous Edition—Art and Naval Matters	102
--	-----

CHAPTER XXXI

France—Russian War—New Publications—Turners—Napoleon's Amphibious— "Lanning" in the Sky—Turner's Early Patron—Arthur Devis	106
---	-----

CHAPTER XXXII

Reynolds and Burke—On Speculation	110
-----------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XXXIII

A Famous Painting by Turner—An Interesting Performance—Ope Read Every Book—Turner's Conduct—Moral Virtue—Titian's Bacchus and Ariadne —Gauguin's Feeling	111
--	-----

CHAPTER XXXIV

Death of Ope—Poetry Differ—Blessed Him—A Great Feeder	117
---	-----

CHAPTER XXXV

Causes of Ope's Death—Ope's Fortune—Mrs Ope—Ope's Art—The Blind Fiddler	120
--	-----

CHAPTER XXXVI

Vanity of Mrs. Opie—Pencil's Impatience—Hobbes's Opinion—Lawrence's Financial Troubles—Bantam's Letter—Impudent Conduct—Extravagance .....

CHAPTER XXXVII

The Duke and Duchess—Harry and Titian—Wordsworth as Art Critic—Card and Apology—Too Near the Prince—The Prince's Letter to the Duchess .....

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Wordsworth's Opinion—Turner's Circle—Hogarth's Last Letter—Farlington and Pitt's Portrait—Turner and Wilkie—A Letter to the Duke .....

CHAPTER XXXIX

A Rembrandt for £200—Wordsworth's Wilkie Might Make a King's Navy—Mr. Coke Talked .....

CHAPTER XL

Coke of Norfolk—Dishonest Land Steward—Business Lost—Political Politicians—An Expert Engraver .....

CHAPTER XLI

Bishop and Princess—Royal Etiquette—Eggs and Spinach—A Rembrandt .....

CHAPTER XLII

A Shameful Affront—Pocket Burroughs—Gainsborough's Letter—Sir Joshua and the Eight Marbles—Pitt's Head and Portrait—Lawrence and Pitt .....

CHAPTER XLIII

Wine, a Kind of Poison—Too Much Talk about Art—English Isogates—Wilkie and Sir Joshua—A Rembrandt Masterpiece—Irishmen and Pitt .....

CHAPTER XLIV

Rembrandt—Perfection—Bought In—Clergymen's Duty—Anglo-Irish Party Spirit .....

CHAPTER XLV

Sir Joshua's Relatives—Young the Actor—Origins—An Ignorant Affair .....

CHAPTER XLVI

Dramatic Criticism—Kemble and Young—Politicians and Great Men—Marry an Heiress .....

CHAPTER XLVII

Jerningham and Fox—A Scandal Monger—William Pitt—Edmund Burke .....

CHAPTER XLVIII

A Famous Architect—Constable Declines—Ignorance and Acid—Robert and Athol Brose .....

CHAPTER XLIX

A Romantic Story—The Cardinal's Casket—Napoleon Defeats the French—Professional Wits .....

CHAPTER I

Style, Prodigy and Speaking Athletes: R.A. Domestic Troubles: Remarkable Prediction	FAOR 173
---	-------------

CHAPTER II

A Successful Portrait Painter: A Chivalrous Family: Life in Old Quebec: Landlord's Father	177
---	-----

CHAPTER III

Angerstein and a Rembrandt: Tusch and Pili: Jonathan and Penelope: Poet and Actor: Greek's Ignorant of Anatomy	189
--	-----

CHAPTER IV

Ague and Absence: Peter with America: A River Party: Freedoms of the Seas	194
---	-----

CHAPTER V

Lord Thurlow: Sheridan spoke Well: Women	196
--	-----

CHAPTER VI

A Revolted Soldier: Constable: The Best Man in the World: A Seditious Bishop	199
--	-----

CHAPTER VII

Goodnight Lady: Thompson's: A Great Project: He knew Paranoist: Mr. Angerstein's Habits	191
---	-----

CHAPTER VIII

A Famous Banker and Actor: Great Banking Firm: Tusch and the Firm: An Unintended Sale	193
---	-----

CHAPTER IX

Protection in Heaven: Port: Teeth and Eyes: Not Calm Enough: Attack upon Denmark: Ogle's Flaying Condemned	194
--	-----

CHAPTER X

Public Institutions: England: Remonville: By Sea: A Good Landlord: A Norfolk Family: Danby of Time: How to Live Long: Rongel's Fate: Maule of	204
---	-----

CHAPTER XI

The Duke of Clarence: Jackson the Doctor: A Cotton: The Navy	205
--	-----

CHAPTER XII

John VIII. in England: Sir Joshua's Sister: Lawrence's Palette: Claude and Dutch Painters: Lord Waverley	208
--	-----

CHAPTER XIII

War against Denmark: Beauties of Bath: Artists at Bath: Not All	211
---	-----

CHAPTER XIV

Hanbury of Belmarsh: Constable and Military Students: Heppert Soules & Lady: Lord Egremont: Lady Louisa Manservant: French Fête Disrupted: Warning to Neutral	214
---	-----

CHAPTER LXIV

Calumnies—Catalani's Salary—A Curious Case—White Water and the Successor to Burke—A Cambridge Librarian

CHAPTER LXV

A Total Abstinence—A Gloomy Room—Maintain our Resolutions—The W
Pink Ribbons—Ward is Grateful—Denmark and Dittain

CHAPTER LXVI

Disipated Young Men—The Grosvenor Family—Constable's Life to Weeps—R.A. Affairs

CHAPTER LXVII

Sir Francis Baring's House—Russia and England—Art Knowledge—The —Newspapers and the Public—American Censors

CHAPTER LXVIII

Miss Walpole the Actress—Coleridge and Keats—Future Prospects Perspective—Northcote's Declarations

CHAPTER LXIX

Embargo on Russian Vessels—Sheridan's Impecuniosity—The London Hospital—Croft and Catalani—Overcharged with Work—The Music—Wordsworth and Wilkie

CHAPTER LXX

Wordsworth's High Opinion of Himself—Money and Mentality—The King
Smirke—That Damned Academy Business—R.A.'s as Politicians

CHAPTER LXXI

Beckford and his Fortune—Beckford and Persecution—In Love with the ford—Lawrence's Bravura

CHAPTER LXXII

America Desires to Remain Neutral—Art in France—He Meant England
West and His Taxes—Hubb Doddington—Story of a Portent

CHAPTER LXXIII

Extravagance—Application—A Nation of Traders—Led Astray—The Family Leave—Death of Angelica Kauffman

CHAPTER LXXIV

Pitt's Cont—"The Sea-Sick Minstrel"—He Related a Joke—Secret —Lord Melville's Nephew—Pictures by Richard Watson—Secret
in Painting

CHAPTER LXXV

An Artist's Income—Passing Rich—Manner not Mind—The Enraged Angel
Kauffman—Buonaparte in Germany

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

George IV., who figures in the Poem as Prince of Wales. From the Painting by Sir Thomas Lawrence in the Vatican, Rome. . . . . .	Frontispiece
Queen Caroline as Princess of Wales. From the Painting in the Victoria and Albert Museum. . . . .	Facing p. 48
Angelica Catalani. From a Print in the British Museum. . . . .	62
Sir Joshua Reynolds. From a Self-portrait in the National Portrait Gallery. . . . .	88
Princess Sophia Matilda of Oldenburg when a child. By Sir Joshua Reynolds. From a Print in the British Museum. . . . .	107
J. M. W. Turner. From a Drawing by F. Phillips in the National Portrait Gallery. . . . .	114
John Opie, Esq., R.A. From a Print in the British Museum. . . . .	124
Duke of Holkham. From a Portrait by Rembrandt, the property of the Earl of Farnham. . . . .	148
The Rt. Hon. Lady Eschsch Manners. From a Print in the British Museum. . . . .	210
Two Drawings by Luttrell, from Pictures by his master, Richard Wilson. . . . .	220
William Wordsworth. From a Print in the British Museum. . . . .	249
William Beckford (Vathek). Painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds. From a Print in the British Museum, engraved by F. A. Dean. . . . .	262

THE FARINGTON DIARY

CHAPTER I

1804

Rubb's Statue of Pitt

September 20. Rossi's letter. He informed me that on Thursday last, the Court of Common Council decided in favour of a model by Rubb of a monument to Mr. Pitt. Rubb's estimate of expense was four hundred pounds less than that of any other candidate, which influenced many of the Citizens to vote for it. It was decided by a show of Hands & He had a great majority. Rossi had the next greater number. Rossi said that with the able assistance Rubb is not qualified to execute it.*

Lawrence called on at His house to see His progress in the picture of Lady Thacker's Children &c. I told him his plan was very good, but that there was too much middle age in it, & that it wanted splendour, but I expressed an apprehension of giving Him trouble & taking up His time in making alterations. He said "that a revision was very desirable, but He had not yet received his annual gratification &c."

[Morning Post stated that the expenses of Lord Nelson's funeral amounted to £14,000 for the use of Mr. Pitt to £100,000. From small note book.]

* J. C. Rubb contributed regularly to the Moral Academy from 1804 to 1811. The Pitt monument referred to in the Landfill, where also is a statue of Mercury by the same sculptor. See entry under December 24th. "A Leagues before Art."

I Maria Weston was married on 11. Oct. 9, 1806, to her cousin, Sir Samuel Rudenell Fildes, second Baronet, and he has left one son, second third Baronet, and two daughters, Maria and Caroline Fildes. See Walter Assheton does not refer to their picture in his "Life" of Lawrence, and hence, apparently, was being inhibited.

See Harrod, the first Baronet, when Lord Mares of England, entertained George III and several members of the Royal Family in 1761. He was ground landlord of Blythe Street, Westminster, which was cleared away to make room for the new Farington Office. See Vol. III, page 130.

Taplow Court

September 23.—I left London a little after one in the Morning & got to Taplow Court [Lord Thomond's residence] at 10 o'clock. I arrived past 5 in time for dinner.—

We had a fine Haunch of Venison at dinner. I believe that Lord Thomond no longer drinks Port Wine. He drinks Madeira & that in moderation. Mr. Hayes said that in the year 1786 He was in Paris to improve Himself in the French Language attended by Lord Albemarle. —There was at that time a disposition to undermine Louis 16th the King.—Mr. Hayes observing 5 busts placed in a row in the Hall, asked Him who one of them represented. The Albemarle replied it was a Bust of Louis 16th & He had placed Him between two Busts, one of Henry 4th.—the other of the Duke of Sully, Henry's minister. He had done it that being so placed a little sense might be put in to Him.

Mr. Hayes is Son to Judge Hayes, one of the Welsh Judges. I travelled abroad with Lord Brome.*

Lord Thomond expressed a full belief that the story of the Harriet Pan related of James 2nd's Queen was true & that the child, afterwards called the Pretender was not born of Her Body.

Oh, King, Live for Ever

September 24.—After the ladies retired Lord Thomond spoke of the Prince [of Wales] and said His Manner in Society is the most polished that can be imagined. His look, His address, the tone of His voice, is captivating in the highest degree. He has read a great deal, & is a great quotation; Has a respectable share of classical learning, and holds conversations most agreeably.—He is very high, has much pride, and observes with nice attention any encroachment upon His royal prerogative, but does not express it at the time. He has a disposition to make people laughable to others, and does it skillfully, by exaggerating any weakness or weakness and leading the person on "to ridicule Himself." He is high & from his extensive intercourse with a variety of characters has an abundance of anecdote.—I asked what His temper appeared to be?

* Viscount Brome, only son and heir of the first Marquess Cornwallis, was born at or Byo, 1795-96; for Suffolk, 1796-1801; and Master of the Buckhams, 1801-1802. In 1797 he married Louisa, fourth daughter of the fourth Duke of Devonshire. She was born in 1776 and died in 1850; he died on August 20, 1802, aged 50, and the Marquessate of Cornwallis became extinct.

On February 13, 1792, Mrs. C. Cornwallis wrote. "Lord Brome is, I suppose, for everything you can wish. He has left London, and is just now on horse back going on his journey to Yverdon, [accompanied by young Mr. Hayes], where, by all accounts, he will be to pass some time to great advantage, in learning French. He goes with a great deal of money, and will be able to do so." The Hon. Vicary Gibbs states that Lord Brome, having expressed an intention to marry the daughter of the Hon. Gordon some hesitation about marrying her daughter on account of her excessive wealth.

the bottom peevish, & not the most pleasant; and no reliance can be had upon Him. I observed that it seemed to be a proof of a bad taste to associate, as He does, with ordinary, & even despicable men, giving them a preference in making up His habitual Society. His Lordship sd. it was His misfortune to have been vitiated while He was young. Finally our conversation on this subject ended with saying "Oh King live for ever".

His Lordship desired me to inform Him what He stood indebted to me for the picture I have painted of "Tophaw Woods". Upon my hesitating a little, He urged to express it in two words & to speak as if it was to Mr. Anagnoster. I mentioned 40 guineas; He sd. it was less than He expected. He spoke in the same liberal manner abt. the Frame, & on my telling Him the price was £5,000. sd. it was very moderate.

September 25. We dined at the Spring most agreeably a little after 4 o'clock. I walked to it from the House in 25 minutes. They call it near two miles. Our dinner consisted of Cold meats, excellent, and fruit afterwards. We returned home in the Bayonet abt. ½ past 6, but the latter part of the way, Lord Thomond got out & I walked with Him to the next House & to some other points by moonlight. He told me He had known the place 20 years, not being so long since He first came from Ireland. It was at that time in the possession of His Uncle whose eldest daughter He married. Tophaw was purchased in 1726 by the Earl of Orkney & Chisholm in 1712. His Uncle married the Heiress of that family.

Great Riders

Lord Thomond said that all the walks in Tophaw Woods had been made by himself, & every time He came into them He felt new pleasure. He told me He was now 84 years old, & on my remarking upon His fine Constitution, He said that peace of mind, contributed greatly to it. He lived well with others & without pride. He expressed much pleasure at a speech of the King to Him. His Majesty with whom He was much accustomed to Hunt, said to Him one day, "You and I rule more than any other two gentlemen in England." He said He had always felt sensibly the honour of having been so addressed by His Majesty, it conveying a sentiment of His Majesty's opinion of Him.

The Prince Sang

After dinner the Prince of Wales was spoken of & Lady Thomond was warm in Her admiration of His grace and manner. Once when the Prince & a Party dined with them after the Ladies retired much conviviality prevailing, the Prince sang a Song with which the Company were much delighted. Lord Thomond in His rapture expressed a fervent wish that Lady Thomond had heard it, on which the Prince being willing to gratify His Lordship Lady Thomond was brought in & the Prince again sang the Song, after which, feeling the awkwardness of Her situation, He gallantly took Her Hand and walked with her to the door.

The conduct of the Duchess of York* was mentioned by Mrs. Dees [from Lisbon] as giving much more occasion for remark. She has walked to Kensington Gardens with a Servant, arm in arm with Culling Smith,† whose wife, Lady Anne Smith has a situation in Her establishment. She has also walked with 20 others. The D. spoke to K. 12 months ago abt. Her manner of going on and of a Divorce. K. remonstrated with Her. His own infidelity in that respect & sd. He wd. only bring trouble upon Himself.—

* In "The Greville Memoirs" "the Duchess is strong and well informed, she likes society and dislikes all form and ceremony, but in the midst of the most familiar intercourse always preserves a certain dignity of manner." At her death on August 7, 1807, Foxcliffe says, "She is deeply regretted by her husband and her friends and her country. But at the same time no person in such a situation was ever more really liked."

† Charles Culling Smith was Parliamentary Under Secretary to the Treasury, and died in 1853.

Lady Anne Culling Smith, daughter of General Wellerby, first Earl of Mornington, was born in 1768, and married in 1799 the Hon. Henry Fitzroy, afterwards Earl Fitzroy. In 1814 she married Culling Smith, and died in 1844. Fitzroy granted a Pension of £1000 a year to her and her children by her first husband, George Fitzroy, later Earl Fitzroy, and Anne Caroline Fitzroy, who died unmarried in 1840.

CHAPTER II

1866

The Prince and Metcalfe

September 25. Lord & Lady Thomond now concurred in saying that the Prince never oppresses His company by assuming importance but gives His countenance to those who stand most in need of it. It is only when He sees a disposition to intrusion, or improper familiarity that He shows anything repulsive. Mr. Philip Metcalfe, member for Hantsburg,* felt the ill consequences of having made an inconsiderate remark. He was during His annual residence at Brighton for the Season, well received by the Prince, & was very often of the dinner parties; and also of Mrs. Fitchard's parties.

One day when at dinner with the Prince, He happened to sit next to Lord Petersham, who remarking to Him the insignificance of the utter comment, Metcalfe replied by quoting a Spanish proverb, signifying, "Luxury abounds, but who pays for it?" The next day Metcalfe met the Prince accompanied by Lord Petersham. The Prince, as usual, spoke cheerfully to Metcalfe, but Lord Petersham did not notice Him, which the Prince observed, & after parting from Metcalfe asked Him why He did not speak to Metcalfe? Because, replied His Lordship, I will not speak to any one who shows disrespect to your Royal Highness, & then told Him what passed the day before. The Prince from that time has never noticed Metcalfe, & to mark His disapprobation, on the following day invited to dinner a person who was on a visit to Metcalfe, without including Him.

It was agreed that Metcalfe acted independently, Lord Petersham ungenerously or rather unschickously, and the Prince not with much dignity in regarding it.

September 26. Mrs. Partington said she has been told that Dr. Bullie, the Physician gets fat every year. She said His manner is coarse, & He has a Scottish Brogue, but has an honest mind.

* See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

[Probably the wife of Partington, the fashionable dentist, referred to by J. T. Smith in "Nolleken and His Times," and the Mr. Partington who, according to Lyons, owned the house at Barnes, of Twickenham in which Henry Fitzling resided. In 1811 Partington's niece, widow of Admiral Stanier, was the proprietor of this house.

Sir John Turner's we dined at. I had not seen Dr. Gretton since the year 1792.* We were in the Autumn of that year at the Hotel de St. Rose's in Scotland together. He proposed to me to visit Scotland tomorrow.

Public Schools

Public Schools were spoken of. Dr. Gretton says that the boys at Taplow. He said the boys of the public schools in that country of many of the Boys fill their pockets with Bank notes, & that it is allowed for the expenditure of it viciously. He also said that of three great Schools by saying that the youth at Westminster (the gentlemen)—those at Westminster dissipated with the Black Guard;—and those at St. Paul's School the most dissipated of all. Dr. Gretton at present is upon a bad footing; the Master, Dr. T. D. D. has lost much of His Authority from want of resolution. He resigned a long time since, which being opposed by the youth of the school, he gave way & recalled the Boy & of course he was obliged to object to objections of that form. He said Rugby School is also upon a bad footing. In it are many of the Sons of Gentlemen, but many who are the Sons of Manufacturers at Huddersfield, Warrington, &c. who having little sentiment of the disgrace of wearing a bad coat, set as their inclinations lead them. He said, in His school, though some are 18 years of age, expends more whole at school, than guineas a year. He desires the parents not to give them more than guinea & if they require more, He gives them a Shilling at a time. Henrow also, He said, the Boys are gentlemen.

The Chaplain's Table

He spoke of the abolition of the Chaplain's table at St. James's & sd. the allowance to each Chaplain, instead of the table, is a gain but though a gainer by it, as instead of being required to preach a fortnight in each year, He only goes to town one day in the year, to preach, which is all the duty required from a Chaplain. As a quantity of Plate has been accumulated it being the custom for a Chaplain on being advanced in the Church to give up His Table to give a piece of Plate,—with His name upon it.

September 27.—At Eleven o'clock Lord & Lady Thames & Farington went upon the water in a fishing party having agreed to dine at the Spring. His Lordship lent me a Horse & I rode to Dr. Gretton's at Hitcham House, one mile from Taplow. I walked abt. the grounds with Mrs. Gretton who showed me some of Her Children, Her eldest Son, a clergyman, aged 25, & Her youngest Child, a Boy, 4 years old. She said she had had 15 children. I then rode with Dr. Garton through Butcher Wood, & by Drapmore till 2 o'clock. He spoke of His general good fortune in life, & told me that He was very happily circumstanced in respect of property. He set out in life without leaving anything & now could retire to a House in Notting-hamshire, near which He has a small estate, & could sit down possessed of £2000 a year.

* The Rev. George Gretton, B.D., 11th Wrangler, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, was inducted rector of Hedder Parish Church near Cambridge in 1792, on the presentation of Frederick, Lord Boston. He resigned and afterwards became Bishop of the King, and Dean of Hereford from 1809 to 1810. Dr. Gretton had a large library, he and his wife Mary were buried at Hitcham, Bucks.

He said He has now 26 Boys under His Tuition. The vacations are 6 weeks dated from the 20th of July, and a month from the 20th of December. He spoke of Lord St. Asaph, and said that would take Him to be proud but He does not think Him so. He said His Lordship understands no coach, & He knows no person to whom to present Him, women yet in a difficult case. But His Constitution is delicate & unstable, which made Him very unsuitable to the studies now being pursued. He sd. Lady St. Asaph is all suited to Him; she is rapid, intelligent; but has little judgment; She is gay, while He is sober. He has 8 Children by this marriage. His eldest Son by a former marriage is almost 24, & possesses a constitution like that of his father, but has not His mental ability.

CHAPTER III

1806

Greater Rogue than Painter

September 27.—[Dr. Gretton] complained much of the great loss He had sustained by His Brother who was connected with Thos. [R.A.] in a Bank which they set up at Dartmouth * He said His Brother had great abilities for His profession but had become drunken & dissipated. After the death of Hodges He allowed His Brother ~~£2000~~ a year to maintain Him so as to enable Him to proceed in His profession as an Architect after the Bank had stopped; but all His wishes were frustrated by the habits He had adopted, & He now allowed Him a pittance regard of what may become of Him.— He spoke of Hodges with great bitterness saying that He had neither religion in principle nor that he was a swindler & a cheat.—He sd. His Brother unfortunately became a partner with Hodges in the following manner.—John Carr, brother-in-law to Hodges, had been placed with an Attorney in London of the name Pugh, who proved to be a slimy man, & in other respects such, as caused Hodges to be dissatisfied with Him. At that time Dr. Gretton had a living at Dartmouth, & His Brother was established there as an Attorney.

Doods Not Worth Sixpence

Hodges prevailed upon the Doctor to induce His Brother to induce John Carr to be His clerk, which caused an intercourse between Him & Him, and the former made a proposal to the latter to set up a It * William Hodges, son of a blacksmith in Clare Market, Street Lane, was born in 1761 and studied first at Shipley's Drawing School in the Strand, and afterwards under R. Wilson, the landscape painter. In 1772 he accompanied, as draughtsman, Captain Cook in his second voyage round the world, and his sketches were published in the course of the expedition. He was elected an Associate of the Academy in 1780, and a member in the following year. Hodges published in 1791 an account of his travels in the Pacific during 1780-3, and, settling at Dartmouth, in 1791, he opened the book which Dr. Gretton's story of Hodges's depredations, which is wholly true.

Hodges was married first, on May 11, 1776, to Miss Matthea Nesbit, who died in a bed within a year; second, on October 16, 1781, to Miss Lydia Wrentham, and she died in 1783.

at Dartmouth & shewed to the latter Deeds not worth sixpence to prove that He was worth £14,000, all of which He offered to lodge as a foundation to begin their Banking business upon. The matter was communicated to Dr. Gretton who objected to it, but without the Doctor's knowledge an agreement was made & the Bank was established. At that time a Mr. Seal, a gentleman of good property, engaged with them, His name was 12 months in the firm, but He seeing something which He did not like, withdrew from it, and left Hodges, & Gretton the only partners. Gretton attending to his business as an Attorney left the Management of the Banking business to Hodges & a Clerk & looked at the books only occasionally. Thus matters went on. Hodges went to London & called on Dr. Gretton and told Him that they had discounted some Newfoundland Bills to a considerable amount which had reduced their Cash, and desired the Doctor to accept two bills of £500 each payable in a few months, upon which Hodges could procure money, to suit their convenience till the Bills did become due. After some hesitation the Doctor consented but required to have the Bills as a security. Hodges sd. they were in the Country, but He wd. send them. Soon after Hodges informed Him that He did not require His acceptance of the Bills He had proposed to draw.

Found Out

The Doctor afterwards discovered that it was owing to Hodges's flimsy relying to give Cash for the Bills if drawn which they did because they expected that ultimately the Doctor would be obliged to pay them & they wished to prevent His sustaining such a loss. He also discovered that no Newfoundland Bills had been discounted & it was all a fiction contrived by His private account-keeper. The final blow up was revealed as follows. Gretton looking into the Books one day discovered that Hodges had drawn bills in the space of one fortnight, to the amount of near £2000 for the purpose of paying His own debts incurred in London before He left that place. Among the rest was one to a Taylor for upwards of £100, the Taylor name something like Marshall. Gretton immediately expressed His astonishment at the transaction, & naturally, Hodges present, gave a charge to the Clerk, never again to draw a Bill at the request of Hodges without his knowledge & consent, and other words expressed Himself strongly. Before they parted Hodges told Gretton privately, "That He might as well have put Him in His Chou as what He had done to & before the Clerk." The next day Gretton went to London & in a few days information was sent Him that Hodges was dead.

And Poisoned Himself

Dr. Gretton then said, Hodges poisoned Himself. In the night before His death Mrs. Hodges told Him that she perceived by His breath & calling upon Hodges the next day had further conversation with him respecting it. — On this conduct being condemned Hodges became warm & insisted that Gretton should see Her & He took Him to Her Bedchamber & addressing Her said "Isidro, do you know who this is?" She took little notice, and only said "Eneph!" and then put Her hand to a pot & drank. — Thus the Doctor said was Brandy which was supplied as often as wanted. — The next morning He died.

Of the late Mrs. Hodges, the 4th wife, the Doctor spoke in warm terms of regard, saying she was a pious and excellent woman.

I asked the Doctor what He thought of the Understanding of Hodges. He said, He never could understand How come to judge; He touched, hard words, and Her conduct, & had such an effect that He could form no conclusion as to His understanding.

An Affected Coxcomb

He said that after He fully discovered His Character, He called of Him to Lord St. Asaph, who expressed much surprise that the Doctor should not sooner have seen through Him. — The Lordship thought any one might have done as much and He said — "For my part of the Lordship, I thought Him an affected Coxcomb in manner, and I found that in his dealing with respect to the prints of vases in India, that He had no principle, — and I soon discontinued the work."

Such was the Doctor's statement respecting Hodges, who in many respects acted wrong, & very imprudently, which reduced Him to a situation in which He certainly had neither wisdom, integrity or honour enough to cause Him to do that which He ought to have done: but the knowledge I had of Him enabled me to see that He had many good qualities & felt a sorrow to want of a better Head and to extravagant notions caused by pride & ostentatious humors.

The Gretton gave me a list of Dr. Enghelb,* late one of the masters of Eton, who also acted on a sort of Debt accounting, it is said, to gossamer. — Her income from Honours & from Parliament was so large the Doctor said He ought to have been worth gossamer. — It is now reported that He is in Some glumshire & parties under the assumed name of Doctor Isid.

Good Society

Dr. Gretton speaks of the good Society that I see in the neighbourhood: but in respect of being too young, He said the "Converted men" beat the Bull. — At Cranford Road did you dine of Plate, and Champagne, * William Enghelb, was grandson of Edward Enghelb, of St. Albans, and Mary, his wife, last Heir of the "White Hart" of that name, was a scholar of King's College, Cambridge, of which he was a Fellow, 1619. — Jan 20, 1622, became master of Eton, 1720-1651, and Canon of Windsor, 1620-1644. — He died on 14th of April 1651. — See Eton College Register and Vols. I. and III. of the Library.

Tokay,—Hermitage, &c. are proposed to you in succession as soon as you have begun to eat.—Pascoe Grenfell* still exceeds Bruce; His Plate is gilt. He began the world without any fortune & is now supposed to be in the rect. of £20,000 a year, from His share & Concern in Copper works, being a partner with the Williams's.—

* See Vol. III., page 102 and note.

CHAPTER IV

1806

Sir John D'Oyly

September 27. The Spring [on the Thames] we dined at. At Dunk we returned home, Lord Thomond & myself by water. At tea time we had conversation respecting Sir John D'Oyly.* Mr. Partington was at school with [him] & their intimacy has continued. Sir John remitted from India through the hands of Child & Co. £25,000, and afterwards recd. £25,000 more; but all was wasted by a most expensive wife and hanger-on of Her Family. When Sir John first came to England He told Mr. Partington He wd. not expend more than £2000 a year, and indeed had Himself no inclination to expense. Mrs. P. said He is but a weak man, but has good intentions, Lord Wellesley just before His Lordship left Calcutta, appointed Him a Receiver in one of the Districts which brings Him in £4000 a year, & He will probably remain in India during the rest of His life.

September 29. Being Michaelmas day we had Gablet Soup, & a Goose, with other things for dinner. The comfort of a small social party was acknowledged & Lord Thomond bid me remember that He engaged me for the next Michaelmas day.

Maid to his Wife

We had a bad account of the state of Mr. Penton who lives near I. He had three Physicians with Him & it was proposed to cut off His Hair & apply a Blister to His Head. He is 70 years of age; has been a handsome man, with a fine head & Hair, of which He has always been * Sir John Hadley D'Oyly, sixth Baronet, of Calcutta and D'Oyly Park, Hampshire born in 1754, was a Bengal merchant, Collector of Calcutta, M.P. for Ipswich, 1799-1806, and intimate friend of Watten Hastings. In 1780 he married Diana, widow of William Coler, of Calcutta, daughter of William Rockliff, niece of Robert Rockliff, first Earl of Belvidere, and granddaughter of George and Lady Elizabeth Rockliff, who was daughter of Henry Moore, third Earl of Drogheda. Sir John died at Calcutta in 1818, and was succeeded by his son, Sir Charles D'Oyly, who was a distinguished amateur artist.

† Henry Penton (who gave his name to Pentonville) was M.P. for Winchester and a Lord of the Admiralty. He died in 1812. On his estate the first buildings of Penton Street were erected about 1773.

careful; so that Lord Thomond said in whatever state of Health He might be He never appeared but with His Hair in nice order. His manners are very courteous & gentle. Lord Thomond spoke of the great sacrifice He had made by forming His present connexion with a Woman who was maid to His Wife which caused a separation. By this woman He has two daughters now grown up, who are in some degree settled, but their mother is not seen by Ladies. Lord Thomond said, She is a fine woman, & that Mr. Penton has spoken warmly in Her praise for Her attention to Him. But it has caused Him, who was formerly much in the world, Member for Winchester, & a Lord of the Admiralty, to live many years in, comparatively, a secluded state, in which He has appeared to be obliged to those who called upon Him.

The Prince of Orange

After the Ladies retired, Lord Thomond talked of the late Prince of Orange, who, while He was in England, His Lordship was much acquainted with.—He said the Prince was very plain in His person, at least often seen Him and had a thickness in His pronunciation, but He had a very good understanding, and most extensive Historical information having read much.—His Lordship said that while the preparations were making for the Duke of York's expedition to Holland, He called upon the Prince at small lodgings which He had near the Chapel in Convent St. The Prince expressed Himself very strongly against the Plan of the Expedition, saying, That the Duke was going to land in that part of Holland which was filled with His (the Prince's) enemies: That He had no friends at Amsterdam, or Rotterdam, &c. and that it was in North Holland only where any success could be expected. The expedition notwithstanding made an attempt and as the Prince predicted wholly failed.

They Plucked his Hair

While the Prince was in England He was often treated with most disrespectful levity by the Prince of Wales and His Brothers. They wd. while He was sitting at table, when His Head was turned from them pluck His Hair, and on His moving His Head round, another would do the same on the other side making Him the sport of the Company. The King, on the contrary, always behaved to Him with kindness & respect.—The Princess of Orange, Aunt to the King of Prussia, had great dignity. When after the Peace of Amiens, it was necessary for the Prince & Princess to go to Germany to take possession of their newly allotted Territory, they set off with much heaviness of Heart. The Princess, on leaving Hampton-Court, where they had resided, was so much distressed that the blinds of the Carriage were drawn up to prevent Her from being seen.—Their eldest Son was a fine, and accomplished young man. While He was in England He became desperately in love with the Princess Mary, but the King, under the circumstances in which the Orange family were, would not consent to their Union, & married a German Lady, but did not live long. The family, in the person of the Second Son, is now established in the possessions allotted to them at the peace of Amiens, & in the new Confederation of the Rhine, He is made the Head of the College of Princes.

William III

Lord Thomond spoke most warmly of the Character & great abilities of William the Third, who saved Holland & preserved the liberties of England. He said that however much William was attached to Holland, He never after He became King of England, allowed those feelings to operate against the interests of this country. William suffered much mortification here. Those men who had been the cause of His coming over, afterwards turned against Him in opposing His measures. Lord Thomond sd. History does not produce another instance of three men of one family following each other in Succession, who possessed such great talents & other high qualities as William the third, His Father, & Grandfather.

Lady D'Oyly's Will

At tea Mrs. Partington spoke of the great extravagance of Lady Doyley. In one year Her Bill to Mr. Beaumont the Dressmaker, amounted to £500. Mrs. Beaumont, to keep well with the waiting maid of so good a Customer, sent Her a present of a Gold Clock, but the maid did not think it of sufficient value & return it. Another was sent, but that wd. not do, and a third worth ten or twelve guineas was presented and graciously accepted. Such is the way in which a good understanding is kept up between a dyemaiden and the mark of an expensive Lady to induce Her to encourage that disposition. Sir John Dwyler, she sd. expended £40000 to be returned Member for Ipswich, & only by that obtained a Seat for one parliament. With all this prodigious expense everything was so well ordered that they never kept a good table. Mrs. Partington reminded Lady Thomond that at an entertainment Hacked Wood cocks were sent up. For one entertainment, a Supper & Ball, given by Sir John at His House in Portland Place, He expended with a person for the whole expense & paid £500. Rochester, Brother to Lady Doyley, used Sir John's House as He sd. have done a Tavern, & when Sir John & Lady Doyley were out of town, would invite Her acquaintance & call for Champagne &c. with the best consideration.

Sir John Neglected

When Sir John had but little left of all that He brought from India, He was induced to enter into partnership in Dublin with a Mr. Spurling who married a Sister of Lady Doyley, Gustavus Richmond, Her Cousin, and one Giranget, Her nephew. Their object first was to establish a great Distillery, but they overhailed themselves at a vast expense, & the Union taking place and the advantages of Distilleries in Ireland having become thereby comparatively less, they found it necessary to convert their establishment into a Brewery. Sir John advanced £12,000, and his leaving England to go to India settled with His Partners, that they shd. retain His £12,000 and pay Him no interest for Six years, but if at that period the Concern shd. be prosperous He was to be paid interest and to have a share of the profits. He was not, however, to be bound beyond His £12,000 for any disappointments which might happen. — Since this concern has failed; Sir John has lost His £12,000 & Spurling £70,000. —

Mrs. Partington said that it was painful to see how much Sir J. was neglected, after His circumstances declined, by most of those who had courted Him while He was in affluence. Very few indeed appear to notice Him.

CHAPTER V

1846

Coalition Against Bonaparte

September 30. Breakfasted ½ past 10. We were much gratified to find in the newspapers that the Blockade has been taken off the Ports of Prussia, which gives hope that a strong Coalition may again be formed against Bonaparte's aim at Universal Control.

Sir John & Lady Turner I called upon. He had gone out in the Carriage. Yesterday He had the gout in His Head & Stomach, but relieved Himself by taking Cognac.

I sat sometime with Lady T. We talked abt. the G's. She said V.G.* was an odd man: That He is in his family suspicious, & looks up, & looks into matters which are quite out of His province, and such as a man should manly know. Mrs. Thomson, formerly Mrs. Alworthy, had been long known to Sir John Turner. She had one Boy & three girls by Mr. Thomson & has one Child by V.G. While Mr. Thomson lived she was humoured in the extreme, every attention being paid to Her, but in V.G. she finds one who will rule. She spoke most warmly of the great kindness she & Sir John receive from Lord & Lady Thomond, with whom they were made acquainted by Sir Wm. Scott, on their first coming to Taphew. She said the open & cheerful manner of Lord Thomond & his cheerful reserve & makes every Society more which He goes pleasant. But she observed that His high rank which gave Him authority to address others as He does enabled Him to produce an effect which persons of less pretension ed, not with any propriety attempt. On my leaving Her she expressed a hope that I would dine with them on Monday next with Lord & Lady Thomond. Lord Thomond told Sir John this summer that He is 83 years of age.

On my way back I met Lady Thomond and Mrs. Partridge & she asked me to go with them to call upon Mr. & Mrs. Grenfell but they were not at Home. Mr. Grenfell has two Sons & a daughter by a former * Valentine Gardner (brother of Alan, first Lord Cardigan, who married Frances, second daughter of Samuel Hulworth, of Plymouth, and widow of Farnborough Throston (formerly Wilks), of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law.

1 See Index, Vols I, II and III.

2 See Vol. III., page 1029.

marriage, & Six Children by His present Wife. Lady Thomond shewed me the eldest girl, an elegant child, but the lower part of Her face appeared as if the Skin was off from a Scald, or having been burnt. She sd. the Child was born without a Skin, and though all the other parts were now covered, the lower part of Her face remains in the state I have described.

Pitt and God's Mercy

We dined at 5 o'clock. Lady Thomond had a Dinner for 12, made of mutton and apples. Lady Thomond spoke highly of the Bishop of Lincoln saying He is an excellent man. Mrs. Rose wife of Thos. Rose M.P. related many particulars respecting the death of Mr. Pitt which she had received from the Bishop's wife. It was at 4 o'clock one morning that Sir Walter Farquhar* awoke the Bishop to inform Him that Mr. Pitt could not live. The Bishop immediately arose & said how long ought then to be lost but that Mr. Pitt shd. be acquainted with His situation. After this was done The Bishop, when alone with Mr. Pitt spoke to Him respecting religion & prayers. Mr. Pitt in substance said to the Bishop "From my situation in life & public duties weighing heavily upon me I have not attended so much to those duties as I ought to & should, but you know my mind." He afterwards added "I rely entirely upon the infinite mercy of God, through the merits of my Saviour Jesus Christ."

Lady Thomond spoke of the great disregard of religion in many fashionable persons. She said Sir Willoughby Aston happening to be at Taplow on a Sunday She asked Him to go to Church. He replied, He wd. go to oblige Her Ladyship, but He had never been at Church since He was married which was twenty years ago. She told Him if He had no better motive than to oblige Her she wd. not desire Him to go, & He did not.

Sir John D'Oyly

October 1.—Before breakfast I walked with Mrs. Farlington & she spoke of the unhappy state of Sir John D'Oyly during His residence in England. He brought from India £80,000 & £15,000 was afterwards remitted to Him, the whole of which was wanted so that He had but money sufficient to sit Him & His daughter out & to pay His expenses when He returned to India. She, Lady Thomond, & Mrs. Boscawen, to save

* Of whom it has been said: "A man whose integrity is scarcely done justice to, though he was sought after, trusted, and courted in life. It were there was a man, one who had the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove. That man was Sir Walter Farquhar."

Sir Walter, born in October, 1738, was son of the Rev. Robert Farquhar, Minister of Carlisle, Scotland. Educated at King's College, Aberdeen, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, he entered the Army Medical Service, and took part in Lord Howe's expedition to Belle Isle in 1761. Leaving the Army, he settled in London, where he became eminent as an apothecary and physician. He was created a Baronet in 1796, and appointed Physician in Ordinary to the Prince of Wales. Sir Walter died in London on March 1st 1819. Sir Henry Raeburn's third contribution to the Royal Academy (1798) was a portrait of Sir Walter, which was engraved by W. Sharp.

expenditure made use of Cloaths left by Lady D'Oyly at Her death, and turned them to the best acct, they could in Clothing & decorating the two daughters, who soon after their arrival in India were married, one to a Son of Sir Walter Farquhar, the other to a Son of Sir Francis Baring; they are both very amiable. Accounts from Bengal lately recd. from His relations state that Sir John who has a strong impression of religion on His mind, has become low in spirits, & they are apprehensive that He may proceed to something like religious melancholy. He declines Society, and, when He walks, which He does two or three Hours every day, He seeks to be alone. He wrote to Mrs. Partington that having seen His Children settled He felt that He had nothing more to do in this world & was resigned to leave it.

His Unhappy Marriage

All His misfortunes & Unhappiness proceeded from His unhappy marriage with a vain & weak woman. The weakness of Her mind rendering her incapable of rational conversation, He sought for it in others who might happen to be associated with them. This created in Her a violent Jealousy, not of anything criminal, but of His preferring others to Himself. Mr. Johnson at Calcutta was employed in the Law & His Sister resided with Him. Having occasion to go to Moorshedabad, Lady D'Oyly warmly requested that He would bring His sister with Him. This Mrs. Johnson wd. only agree to upon Condition that she & Her Brother shd. not stay more than a fortnight; Lady D'Oyly was so much delighted with Her that she wd. not allow Her to return to Calcutta, and the acquaintance having become established Miss Johnson was induced to return with them to England, where Sir John said He would be Her protector. During several years, except when upon occasional visits, she continued to reside with them, & in Her Sir John finding a rational companion, directed much of his conversation to Her.

Lady D'Oyly's Jealousy

This made Miss Johnson an object of Lady D'Oyly's Jealousy on acct. of that notice & preference, it was also the same with respect to Others, & she made His life unhappy. She often bewailed the loss of Her first Husband, saying He shewed her more attention. She was not satisfied unless He was fondling & kissing Her in a manner disgusting to those who saw it. She once became so affected by passion in consequence of that jealousy as to cause a man stroke, which Sir John felt so sensibly that He had resolved to separate from Her & to travel abroad, saying that passions carried to an excess as to cause such consequences was murder, & He was made in some degree a participator. At different times He resolved on separation, and His temper was sometimes so worked upon, that He wd. say very bitter things to Her. When He resolved to dispose of D'Oyly park, He did not inform Her of it, and an advertisement appeared of which the first knowledge she had was from the Apothecary who attended the family who mentioned it concluding she knew of it.

On the whole Mrs. Parlington and Sir John is a very good kind man & had He married a woman of better understanding & a different disposition He would [have] passed through [his] happily & respectably.—Lady Doyley died of a Dropsy. Her passion for dress continued to the last. Three weeks before Her death she ordered Hats to the amount of £30 when Sir John could scarcely raise 10 shillings, that inconsiderateness which had ruined His fortunes continued to the last.

Ill-suited Connections

Lady Doyley's Brother, Wm. Rochford got an estate from Sir John valued at £7000 in an extraordinary manner & settled it upon Mr. Spurling* of Essex, who He married. She had abt £10,000. They lived very unhappily and ill usage broke His heart, after being long a slave to Commands.—He might have married the daughter of a rich farmer with £40,000. Her name was Lacey. She was a Roman Catholic. Such are the effects of ill-suited connections, imprudence, folly & humours.—

* Probably Miss Spurling, of Hense Hall, Essex

CHAPTER VI

1866

Lord Thumond as Walter

October 1. At breakfast Lady Thumond said that when the Queen dined with Her at Taphay, Lord Thumond stood the whole time behind Her Majesty with a Napkin under His Arm, & changed Her Majesty's plate.

The Prince of Wales, Father to the present King, resided at Cheltenham. He carried state very high in some respects, never admitting any persons of whatever rank to dine with Him & the Princess at Cheltenham House, but when He chose to associate more familiarly, He went with the Princess as incog; to a small House where Crawford Bruce now resides & there admitted a few to dine with them.

Princess of Wales

Lady Thumond does not think the Princess of Wales has much sensibility. She has been of that opinion from the time of Her being married, when she appeared to be so easy & unaffected during the ceremony, more like one who was a spectator than one who was changing Her state in life, as to show great want of feeling. We all agreed that the familiar manners of the Princess are not suited to Her station in this Country. She called one day at Mrs. Cholmondeley's who resides at lodgings in Jetmyu St. Mrs. C. & her daughter were at dinner. The Princess bid them go & not mind Her, & sat down waiting till they had finished their meal, & then proceeded to conversation. She calls at Houses in Her neighbourhood at times when it is not convenient to them, & has when she has found them at dinner, said she would walk in the garden till they had finished; in the meantime if persons who happened not to be of the family were at dinner they were obliged to go away.

Lord Thumond passed a pleasant day at Mr. Cummings' Carr, Turtle &c. Hock, Claret, Madeira. The Turtle was dressed too high & His Lordship suffered inconvenience from it.

* See entry under October 1.

Merry be our Hearts

After the Ladies retired Lord Thomond, as usual, gave His first Toast "The Ladies,"—His last toast is always "Merry be our Hearts." He always has a toast to each round of the glass.—He continues to drink Madeira or Port moderately, in all, barely a pint. He told us He went to Germany as an Officer in the year 1746 & carried the Colours of the Guards at the battle of Laffeldt in 1747.—He said that at that battle the Corps to which He belonged would have been cut to pieces by a Corps of French Cavalry, which was within 50 yards of them, when most opportunely the Scotch Greys dashed in upon the French and broke them. That battle He sd. was lost owing to the misconduct of the Prince of Waldeck, who being jealous of the Duke of Cumberland having the Chief Command, kept back the German troops & left the English to be overpowered.

Mr. Penton's Sacrifice

Lord Thomond & Sir John spoke of the great sacrifice in respect of Society which Mr. Penton had made in forming His present connexion. Miss Judd who lives with Him was Mrs. Penton's maid. After His separation from Mrs. Penton, in consequence of Her having discovered the connexion, He took Miss Judd to Italy, and had her taught Music & languages.—Her voice is fine, and she sung so well that Mr. Penton said 1500 a year was offered to Her if she wd. appear upon the Italian Stage. The offer was made at Rome.—She is a fine woman, & now abt. 43 years old. She sits at the head of His table, and is extremely civil & attentive, but Sir John observed that you perceive that she had not always been in the situation of a gentlewoman, in Her manner there is still something which expresses Her to be of a lower order. Lord Thomond & Sir John have often dined with Mrs. Penton when she has been at table.—The daughters are very modest & pleasing.—

Curged Stuff

We dine at 5 and drink tea abt. 8.—At tea Burke's book upon the French Revolution was spoken of.—Lady Thomond said that admirable & highly esteemed as that work now is, when it was first published The Prince of Wales asked Lord Thomond "How the Devil could your friend Burke publish such a Farrago of Nonsense?" Lord Thomond verified what Her Ladyship had said & repeated the words.—Fox also said "It was Curged Stuff!"—Such is the effect of Party spirit, which suppresses truth & overpowers judgment.—

October 1.—I went with Mrs. Partington to Sir John Turner's, and heard Lady Turner's relation of the conduct of Devillet the French Priest, who resided with them abt. 18 months. He first came to them in 1790 having been recommended by Dr. Scott, Rector of Simonbura. Devillet was abt. 33 years old, & had officiated as a Priest at Evreux in Normandy.—After having resided with them 18 months, He persisted against all request & urging in remaining with them & said He would do so till after the Revolution. They then resided at Swale House in Northumberland abt. 9 miles from Alnwick & 2 from Fenton. After having got rid of Him there with extreme difficulty, He entered their House in London repeatedly so as to oblige Sir John to apply to the Marlborough St. Magistrates, & three times He was taken away by Constables. The last year they did not see Him.

We dined at 5 o'clock. Lord Thomond spoke to me of the good neighbourhood which they have at Taplow, and of the great commercial fortunes of some of them. I have sd. The Lordship one side Chained Bridge, & on the other Pascoe Gentell, and am only a mile between them. But Your Lordship is at the top of the Hill, I replied, & He smiled.

October 1. At breakfast Mrs. Patterington read part of a letter from Mr. Patterington mentioning that He had been informed the Prince of Wales during His present Tour has been much out of spirits; has said little to anybody; after eating a or 3 bits He has ordered His plate to be taken away; & in return for the great preparations made for Him, He has expressed little acknowledgments, to those who have entertained Him. A medical gentleman who formerly attended Him has expressed much surprise at the great alteration in His appearance.

A Romantic Story

After breakfast I mentioned to Lady Thomond my intention to stay till the day next, she sd. they sd. they sd. be glad if I wd. stay a month; and that I wd. come whenever it may suit me.

We dined at 8. Four Servants wait at table every day. One ant (ot) livery & 4 in livery. There are always two Waiters & a Debut. When there is no company Lord Thomond does not drink at dinner more than two glasses of wine.

Lady Thomond mentioned that at Lord Elliot's* in Cornwall the dining room is filled with family portraits. Among others an Ancestor of His Lordship who was a Colonel in the Service of Charles 1st. The Army in which He happened to be was defeated & He with others fled. Being close pursued He entered a House to which He was a stranger & running up stairs opened the door of the first room that was before Him. It was a Bedchamber in which two Ladies were in Bed. He told them that He had no chance of escaping from the enemy who were in pursuit of him but by being permitted to hide Himself in their bed. They granted it, & very soon some of the enemy entered the room & demanded the Colonel. The Ladies denied having any knowledge of Him & exclaimed against the outrage of coming into their Bedroom. Every part of the room was however searched, but not finding Him they retired. When the Colonel could make His acknowledgments He did so, & told the Ladies who he was, that he could not marry both of them, but if either of them would accept Him He sd. be most happy. One of the Ladies accepted Him & they were married.

* Edward Elliot Craggs, Lord Elliot, of St. Germans.

CHAPTER VII

1846

Fear of the Ministry

October 3.—A note was brought from Mr. Russell's house, just arrived from London to inform the Law Society that a Buenos Ayres, & of them full of troops, are taken. It is supposed that some of the troops of Buenos Ayres, Sir David Hood had sent on them in the engagement, but was doing well. This raised our spirits, & I said that I should not be too much of Mr. Fox's exceeding disposition with regard to the Ministry & France, from the unaccountable way of Lord Melbourne's as it was.

It was said that the troops in the French language were the Sir David Hood consist of Benbentons, Swiss &c. when required to go as soon as they captured.

A Dreadful Accident

October 4.—Sir Francis Hartwell, a Commissioner on the Court of dinner He informed us of a dreadful accident which had happened. The Princess of Wales accompanied by Lady Sheffield & Mrs. Cholmondely were going in a Barouche to Mr. Lush at Strawberry Park & having some where on the road taken Post Horses the Driver was so much over Leatherhead drove too close & the Barouche was overturned. The Princess was much bruised. Lady Sheffield was also hurt, but Mrs. Cholmondely pitching upon Her Head was killed on the spot. Her only opened Her eyes once.

Our party was much struck with this news. Mrs. Cholmondely Lady Thomond who had lived long in habits of intimacy with Mrs. Cholmondely, who was daught. to the late Revd. Mr. Cholmondely, Uncle and Lord Cholmondely, & Sister to Lady Bellingham. Lord Thomond and Mrs. before she was read by Her & that she had become a constitutional friend to Her. The sad event which has happened shows how little we can foresee what our wishes may lead to. Lady Thomond was very true all the evening. She seemed to pity Lady Bellingham most, as the survivor. Mrs. Chalmersdely, the Mother, seemed to be thought by Lord T. & Sir Francis to be of a disposition not likely to feel very pungently.

Pollent Intrigue

After the Ladies withdrew Sir Francis informed us that when Lord Grenville proposed to Lord Howick to leave the Admiralty the latter urged that Lord St. Vincent should be appointed. Lord Grenville did not approve it, but after they parted Lord Howick with Lord Grenville's permission drove to Windsor and proposed it to the King, who said "No, No, Lord St. Vincent does very well at Sea, but is not so proper to be at the Admiralty." This step taken by Lord Howick is supposed will not be very well thought of by Lord Grenville, as it was not with his inclination proposed, though He left it to Lord Howick.

Sir Francis said, Lord Howick was not much attached to His situation at the Admiralty, to which He bound Himself in many respects incontinent. The unhandsome behaviour of the Ministry in refusing the thanks of Parliament to Sir Thomas Popham & Sir David Hood for taking the Cape of Good Hope was mentioned. It was ascribed entirely to Lord St. Vincent's dislike of Sir Thomas Popham & His influence with Lord Howick caused the thanks to be withheld. Lord Grenville signified that it was a determination of the Levies, with which He had nothing to do.

Whitbread is proposed to be Secretary at War, but insists upon a Seat in the Cabinet because Windham had one while He was in that situation. The opinion now given was that the Ministry is not formed of persons who will be very cordial.

[Cantabrig] Bruce thought the capture of Buenos Ayres a great acquisition to commerce, but He sd. the markets will at first be greatly overstocked for He believed the value of a mallow wd. be sent at the first burst. He sd. it would be attended with the good effect of discriminating our manufactures into every corner of South America. That Country it was agreed can never again be held by Spain & the true policy to keep it out of the hands of the French wd. be to induce them to establish themselves, under our Naval protection, into a free, independent, government. It wd. require too many troops for England to undertake to attach it to herself. Mrs. Bruce is a native of Roshdale in Lancashire, where she was much admired while Miss Polly Smith.

Captured Frigates

Sir Francis told me that captured Frigates are upon an average purchased at the rate of about £12,000 each, but to render them fit for British service, in which the internal equipments are very different and much more complete, it usually costs £12,000 more to make them fit for our service, so that the profit to the Country is little or nothing. The value of Captures is in depriving the Enemy of that force, & also of having vessels which may be much sooner prepared for service be built.—He sd. the French never equip their Ships as often so equipped as to be enabled to keep the Sea for together witht. going into Port; whereas the French to remain out of Port more than 6 or 8 weeks. He said East Indies, was never more than 2 months witht. going or the Cape of Good Hope.—

October 5.—Sir Francis Hartwell remarked that while acted with Mr. Pitt He appeared to be a very able man, became first Lord of the Treasury He has done nothing great ability.—

Farington's Caution

Lord Thomond informed me that Mr. Palmer, who is Mr. Grenfell resides in Windsor Forest. A few months
Lady Madelina Sinclair, a widow, daughter to the Duke
We dined off Plate as yesterday.—Champagne was carried After dinner Claret, Port, Madeira, & Sherry.—Four were drunk. I drank Sherry & Port & Lord Thomond chiefly

Lord Thomond told me before dinner that we must conduct of Administration delicately as Mr. Grenfell is at Grenville.—I told His Lordship that I never express my that subject till I hear those of others.—

Sir Home Popham was spoken of & the great services He at the Cape of Good Hope & Buenos Ayres. Mr. Grenfell be hoped that He could show some authority for the expedition Ayres, and that He had not undertaken it witht. orders, the great advantage to this Country. A Precedent of His going judgment wd. be dangerous.—Lord Thomond sd. Sir Home had things for the Country & the people felt it, and had expressed in London, at Manchester &c. He thought the thanks having been withheld from Him after taking the Cape was very —Sir Francis said that the ill disposition of Administration had been fully shewn by one circumstance. It was not of Ministers to fire the Tower & Park guns, or to publish an Gazette, upon receiving information of the capture of
They actually sent to the Gazette Printer to have it put in Gazette.

* Lady Madelina was a clever girl and was married first to Sir Robert baronet. He died six years afterward, and her mother failing to match her of Aberdeen, Lady Madelina became the wife of Charles Fyshe Palmer Berks. She died in 1847 and is buried at Finchampstead with her second Constance, Lady Russell, in her "Three Generations of Beauifull that he was the son of Henry Fyfe, of Ickwell, Bedfordshire, who assumed Palmer on being left East Court, Finchampstead, by his kinsman, Charles John Gordon Sinclair succeeded to East Court at the death of his mother, Fyshe Palmer, but sold it shortly afterwards to Mr. John Walter, of Bear family it now remains.

Lawkily a friend of Sir Home Popham happened to be there at the time & it being at a late hour, He suggested to the Printer that it was to be put into the Ordinary Gazette the Gazette wd. not be ready for the Mail Coach. This the Printer availed himself of, & it signed it, on a reason in a communication to Minister, who then to that Dilemma ordered the Gazette to be hired at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, though they had recd. the information at 7 o'clock in the morning. An Extraordinary Gazette was also then ordered. The above fully shows how much Lord Howick &c. partake of the envy & Malignity which Lord St. Vincent is known to bear to Sir Home Popham. The desire of Lord Howick to have Lord St. Vincent again at the Admiralty was mentioned. Mr. Grenfell in this concurred with us by saying "Good for him!"*

* In the expedition against the Cape of Good Hope in 1806, Admiral Sir Home Popham (1763) the 1st in operated with the land force under Sir David Baird, and the Colony surrendered on January 10. He then called for Buenos Ayres to liberate the inhabitants of that place and Monte Video, who, he was told, were "garrisoned under the banner of their Government". Accordingly he, accompanied by a small English force, left Table Bay, and in the terrible June arrived in the Rio de la Plata. The Spanish troops offered little resistance, and, the Governor of Buenos Ayres having fled, the town surrendered on July 2, but was retaken a few days later, and some thirteen hundred British troops were made prisoners. Popham was helpless, apart from blockading the river, until October, when reinforcements arrived and enabled him to occupy the harbour of Montevideo.

On January 15, 1807, Popham was superseded, and on his return to England he was arrested, tried for mutiny, and "severely reprimanded". His action, however, was popular in the city, and Lord is now holding that it was a brave attempt to secure the markets, presented him with a sword of honour. Popham was afterwards promoted to the rank of Rear Admiral, and was made a 1st Baronet. Besides being a fine seaman, he was also a student of the scientific phases of his profession.

CHAPTER VIII

1806

A Cornish Baronet

October 8. Sir Francis & Mr. Grenfell spoke of Trelawny* a Cornish Baronet of an Old family. He was at School with Sir Francis.—He was born in 1756. At 20 years of age He was a decided Methodist & was accustomed to preach publickly. Mr. Grenfell while a school boy, in 1776, Has heard Him preach in that character. He was afterwards ordained Deacon & Priest of the Protestant Church, but is now a Rigged Roman Catholic. I asked whether there appeared to be abt. Him anything of insanity or flightiness, to which they said No.—Sir Francis said He was a very handsome Boy & indicated nothing of what has since appeared in Him. At Truro, I think, Mr. Grenfell sd. He heard Him.

Built of his own Timber

Mr. Palmer spoke of the Duke of Manchester having been employed during the last summer in superintending the building [nd] a vessel of 50 tons in Kimbolton Park, of Timber growing on His own estate.—After the whole has been put together it is then to be taken in pieces, & conveyed by land & water carriage to Bermondsey. Upon the Plan upon which it is built He expects that it will be a prime sailor, but shd., it not answer, He proposes to sell it to be used as a Cod Smack.—His passion for sailing induced Him to this attempt. Thus is life passed, some employ is necessary.

Mr. Palmer told me that the Marquis of Tavistock informed Him that the Duke of Bedford's anxiety abt. Mr. Fox was relieved after He had undergone the first operation by some of the Medical Men assuring His grace by letter that they entertained strong hopes of his doing well.—Mr. Palmer mentioned the great strength of Coll. Vicers of the Horse Guards. He said the Coll. bore Him upon His Arm held out & moved His arm round with Him. He sd. the Coll. was a very

* The Rev. Sir Harry Trelawny, bart., who married Anne, daughter of the Rev. James Browne, rector of Portsmouth and vicar of Kingston, Somerset.

St. Mary Hill parishioners, appoint a Minister alternately.—His Salary, as Secretary, was abt. £90. a year, and an apartment, Coals, and Candles.—His Books, & Prints are supposed to be worth between two & three thousand pounds.—His Collection of Prints of Portraits is judged to be worth a thousand pounds.—He was much mortified at Lawrence not having finished the picture of Mrs. Lysons & Mrs. Price which was begun in May 1801.—

Lawrence set off on Sunday last with Mr. Angerstein for Sir Francis Barings in Hampshire to paint three portraits.—

General Miranda

October 10.—Harker, a respectable man, came to cut my Hair. He told me that general Miranda* has at this time a House in Grafton St. Fitzroy Square, where a Lady who lived with him while He was in England, & Her Child, now reside.—Harker dressed the Generals Hair more than two years, and said He is a stout man, about 5 feet 11 Inches high, and is towards 60 years of age.—He speaks English so as to be perfectly understood. He frequently attended at Mr. Pitt's Office, and was for a considerable time doing business there, though it was so managed as not to be made public.—He bore an inveterate hatred against Buonaparte & frequently sd. He had neither honor or principle.—It is undoubted that Miranda is supported by this country in his attempt against South America, though it has been done secretly. He is a Spanish subject & for sometime served in the French Army.

* Francisco Miranda (1750-1816), a Spanish-American General, served under Dumouriez in Flanders, but, accused by the Jacobins of treason, was ultimately banished from France. In 1806 he went to Guatemala, where he had previously taken part in a revolutionary movement, but was arrested in 1812 and died in a dungeon at Cadix four years afterwards.

CHAPTER IX

1806

Fox's Funeral

or 10.—Mr. Fox's funeral took place to-day. I walked to ; saw that street lined with people, & the street generally [wait] to see the procession.

Novels Not to be Seen

or 13.—Robert Smirke drank tea with me. Lady Oxford's greatest attention is to the education of Her children. She sits with them from ten o'clock in the morning till one, when they receive instructions. Lady Jane, a child of 15, has made such advance in learning various things as to be remarkable. Oxford never allows a book of any kind except such as she reads and approved, to lay in a room to which Her Children & her lovers & such like are not permitted to be seen. Lady Oxford's Brother for having introduced Arthur O'Connor to them, of character they had no idea.

Oxford has £13000 a year, but at present pays £4000 a year.

His mother possesses an estate of £5000 a year adjoining this.

This will come to His Lordship at Her death.

is insanity in the family of Mr. [Verdala] Price. His eldest son, or 3 years old, has been confined, but now seems well, & is informed & has many singularities. Price is answering [Hansard's] book.—A decided coolness has subsisted between them. Lady O is as apprehensive of Knight remaining with them till the day came, which she shd. have felt herself obliged to prevent. Knight of it had He continued with them till the day Lady O: sd. Knight is not liked in the country.

Inflamed with Teuma

or 15.—[Dr.] Hayes called. He was at Mr. Fox's funeral, & a Member of the Whig Club. He sd. that at the grave He

il. II., page 36.

sd. with whom Lady Oxford went about in Paris in the autumn of 1804.

Vol. II.

observed several who were greatly affected; particularly, Lords Holland, Fitzwilliam, & Howick,--also Mr. Whitbread, all of whom had their faces inflamed with tears. The Duke of Norfolk also appeared to be much impressed,--also Lord Grenville & Lord Carlisle.--Sheridan also,--Hayes thinks Him [Sheridan] greatly altered & Has no doubt from His appearance that His Liver is much inflamed,--& thinks it will ere long terminate in a Dropsy.--

Russell* died at Hull, aged 61.--His habit of life had for sometime been very singular.--Finding that if He eat a dinner at the usual time it made Him very heavy & incapable of application during the remainder of the evening, He was accustomed to eat His substantial meal in the morning at breakfast time.--His professional application was very great, & to that & to His study of the appearance of the moon, He often devoted the Hours of the night till 2 or 3 oClock in the morning.

Architects' Fees

October 16.--Jeffery Wyatt called to mention his being upon the list of Candidates to be an Associate.--On the back of his Direction Card He had put a list of Houses built for various persons to shew that He was a Regular Architect.--He talked a good deal abt. His Uncle James Wyatt, now President of the Royal Academy.--He sd. He had now been out of town 4 months witht. once having come to London. He has moved from Mr. Codringtons† to Mr. Beckford's & from thence to Lord Pembroke & the Marquis of Hertford, backwards & forwards, neglecting all his business in other places. For the distance He travels He charges Half a Crown a mile, but does not charge for time while travelling; but when stationary at any House He charges five guineas a day.--I, said Jeffery charges two shillings a mile for travelling, and three guineas a day while stationary.--He said His Uncle is a very singular man. He will often employ Himself upon trifling professional matters which others could do, while business of importance is waiting for Him.--When a Commission to build a house or to do other professional business is proposed to Him by a Nobleman or Gentleman by whom He has never before been employed, He will eagerly attend to it till He has got all the Instructions necessary for the commencement of the work, but then He becomes indifferent to it & has lost many great commissions by such neglect they having after long delay been put into the hands of others.--At times He will when at the House of an employer work very hard in making designs & will frequently leave the Company & house after dinner to go to His Clerk.--Such is the irregularity of his habits.--

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† Christopher Codrington obtained the vast estates of his uncle, Sir William Codrington, second baronet, who disinherited his own son. The baronetcy, created in 1721, was in dispute for some years, but in 1876 a fresh baronetcy was conferred on Sir Gerald William Henry Codrington, of Dodlington Park, Gloucestershire.

‡ William Beckford. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

Beckford's Singularity

211

y sd. that abt. 4 months ago He (Jeffery) was at Fonthill & Abbey which is so strictly forbidden to be shewn that He could, then there, could not undertake to shew it to Him. He there w Himself in the way of Mr. Beckford who asked Him to go to the Abbey where He dined & staid the night. The Mrs. Beckford's then reside at the Abbey or at the Old House at Fonthill, but se in a neighbouring village. Such is Beckford's singularity since Sir Richard Hoare of Stouthhead* applied to Mr. Beckford Abbey which Mr. B. granted and attended Sir Richard when for that purpose. These civilities which passed between them ported to the neighbouring gentlemen who took such strange conceiving that Sir Richard was giving countenance to Mr. that a gentleman wrote to Sir Richard in His own name & f others to demand of Him an explanation of that proceeding meant to regulate themselves towards Him accordingly. Sir applied to His friend the Marquis of Bath upon it, & represented had no further desire but to see the Abbey & the meeting with fford was accidental & to Him unexpected. Such is the tion of the Wiltshire gentlemen with respect to excluding om all gentlemanly intercourse.

Sir Richard had No Taste

y said that He concluded Mr. Beckford had heard something ad passed, as at breakfast He said before Jeffery "He wonders I could be such a d---d fool as to allow Sir Richard to see the -With respect to the stain upon Mr. B's character He seems e an innocent man & does not avoid a subject of that nature. fford ad. that Sir Richd. Hoare while looking over the ade some good observations but He afterwards ad. "He ad no taste."—

Wyatts sons have been very improvident. The eldest had ned at Calcutta wd. have been appointed by Marquis Wellesley, to the Governor General, a place of £10000 a year. He com f ill-health, but it was ad. to be only a Home fever, a Home me.—

A Painting by Harry

ior 17.—Carlisle, the Surgeon, called, & proposed to me to im to Dr. Fryer's House in Newman St. to see Harry's picture Birth of Pandora." A picture which had been his chief study during 33 years at least. I went & saw it & found it to be oduction as I might have expected. Ingenious in the Design, index, Vol. II.

Anthony Carlisle. See Index, Vols. II. and III.

rd Fryer (1761-1826) studied in London, Edinburgh, and Leiden, graduating a Dutch University town on January 20, 1786. He came to London as a but nothing extraordinary & a great deal of Mythological circumstance attended to, but in respect of power of execution & colouring very deficient. Powerfully & ill drawn, disproportioned figures;—and the colouring as bad as well could be. On the whole I told Carlisle that I thought it far short of anything extraordinary & very much indeed below those great works of the Old Masters, which Barry had attempted to rival.—I told Carlisle that in the hands of a man who had more power in the practise of the art the design would appear to much greater advantage & do Barry more credit, that Lawrence for instance would be able to make much of it. He admitted this. Carlisle told me that Barry died of an inflammation of the Lungs, & named the species of the disorder, saying it was such as people who are advanced in years & asthmatically inclined are subject to. Barry was in that state. He sd. had Barry been bled at an early period of his disorder He might probably have been saved. He wd. He was surrounded by Roman Catholics.—

We then talked of the character & qualities of Barry & I found from the information I recd. from Carlisle that I had not been mistaken in the judgment I had formed of him. I had long been of opinion from the knowledge I had of his disposition, that He had saved money, although He allowed it to be reported that He was in a state of necessity, and permitted a Subscription to be opened for his benefit at the Society of Arts room in the Adelphi. Carlisle now told me that being one of those who have the management of his affairs He sd. inform me that Barry at his death, possessed £1500 in the American Fund, £500 Bank Stock, —and had £400 at Wright, the Bankers in Henrietta St. Covent Garden, which had laid there 3 years. Yet in these circumstances & possessing such a misanthropical contempt of the world & the utmost independence of spirit, He anxiously encouraged the above Subscription, which was made as for one Destitute. His affectation of independence on mankind was carried to a ridiculous length.

A Paying Guest

When He has drunk tea with Stubbs the painter, He wd. lay Six pence upon the tea-board, because He wd. be under no obligation to Him but for his company.—He wd. do the same at Houses where He occasionally dined. Carlisle said Barry wd. in the midst of his blustering of independence and disregard of mankind suddenly change His manner of Behaviour if a Person of some weight & authority came in & would then assume a courteous address. He was very unsteady in His resolutions, was easily impressed with an opinion & as readily was converted to its opposite by the person He next met.—He read Latin pretty well; and from some papers found in His possession appeared to have been at the latter part of his life studying the Greek language.—At the bottom He was of a timid disposition & had no real reliance upon Himself.—He dreaded a rival in his desire of acquiring fame; & only began to profess to adulate Sir Joshua Reynolds when that great Artist, from infirmities, ceased to practise.—

CHAPTER X

1806

A Doctor's Charges

October 17.—Carlisle told me that in his practise as a Surgeon when He goes out of town He charges at the rate of a guinea a mile; and that for every day He might be detained at any place He should charge Ten guineas a day, or Seventy guineas a week; which He observed was not too much as more than that might be lost to Him eventually owing to His being absent when persons might apply to Him & thereby losing their custom.—

Language and Insurance

October 23.—J. Offey's I dined at.—Minet, who was born in Portugal,* told me that the affinity of the Portuguese to the Spanish language is such [that they] understand each other so far that the people of either country could travel in the other by the use of their respective languages, or Lingo as He called. The Portuguese, however, wd. better understand the Spaniards than the latter wd. the former. It is by the ear they understand each other, making out the signification of the words. When written the languages are very different.—Minet told me that an Officer ordered to go abroad and wanting money for His outfit &c. may insure His life at any one of the Public Offices of Insurance. That at 31 years of age He might insure His life on a policy for 7 years at the rate of 5 pr. [cent.] per annum viz: £50 a yr. for £1000 insured.—The Policy thus obtained the Officer may obtain money upon [it] by offering it at the Stock Exchange or elsewhere, and wd. there probably obtain £500 upon it. Not more because the person who might advance the £500 wd. have to pay annually the £50 premium till the Officers death to secure Himself.

* Joseph Minet, wine merchant, was born in Lisbon, and baptised in St. Catherine's Church, in that city. His family were Huguenots, and two of its members came to England in 1686, Isaac (from whom comes Mr. William Minet, of Fountain Court, barrister, and author of the "Huguenot Family of Minet"), and Thomas, ancestor of Joseph. James, Joseph's father, went to the Azores, married Maria Dupont, and apparently must have reverted to the Roman Catholic faith, for his three children were all baptised Catholic. Joseph came early to England, and married a Huguenot lady, named Brissault, and his descendants live at Ealing to-day.

The 1st of October 1870. A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

October 18 A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

Defeat of the Prussians

October 18 A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

The 18th of October 1870. A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

October 19 A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

The 19th of October 1870. A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

October 20 A fine day. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant. The wind is from the west. The sun is shining. The weather is very pleasant.

• Young Men's Meeting at the School - On the 21st of October 1870
 • Young Men's Meeting at the School - On the 22nd of October 1870

[The Hamburg paper of the 21st inst. brought the Prussian account of the disastrous battle fought near Ayrsladt on the 14th. of October, on the High road between Navenbergh & Erfurt. The attack was made at 3 in the Morning by the French. The Conflict lasted till 5 in the afternoon, when according to the information recd. Marshal Ney's division of reserve men, coming up fresh, gave a decisive turn to the affair. It was the Center of both Armies which were particularly engaged. Buonaparte directed the whole of the French operations. The killed and wounded on both sides are generally estimated at 200,000 men. The strength of the Combined Armies united is computed at 200,000 men. On the receipt of the above account at Berlin a number of the following Bulletins were circulated: "The King has lost a Battle. The first duty of a Citizen is to be transported. This is what I, the Governor, demand of all the inhabitants of Berlin. The King and His Heir are living!" The issue to the above battle the battle of Schleitz, with which the Campaign opened, was fought, on the 10th of October, in which Prince Louis Ferdinand, of Prussia, Com-in to the King, was killed. He was abt. 15 years of age. On the 11th of October an action also took place at Saalfeld. The troops on both these actions, on the Prussian side were under the general orders of Prince Frederick. From small note book.]

October 31. Danell mentioned the unhappy death of Sutton Sharpe who abt. three weeks ago was found drowned at the bottom of one of His Fats in His Brewery. He had been sometime in a state of low spirits.

A Prototype of Colonel Lawrence

November 1. Henry Salt,* formerly my Papah, died. He landed on Sunday last at Portsmouth from the Neptune Man of War, in which He came with Lord Valentia a passenger from Gibraltar. He had accompanied His Lordship in a very extensive tour in India. They left England in 1802 in the month of June. Salt was six months in Abyssinia, and met with several persons in that country who remembered the Traveller Home. He sd. much of what [James] Haime published was authentic, but He also added a good deal of the fabulous. He described * Henry Salt 1780-1860, an agent son of a doctor, was born in Exeter. Intending to be a portrait painter, he studied painting under Faber, the water colour painter, and, coming to London in 1804, he became a pupil of Langton, and, in 1805, entered the studio of John Hoppner. Drawings made by him illustrate "A Voyage and Travels in India," 1806, by Lord Valentia, in the same year. "Excursions into Abyssinia, Helicon and Egypt" were published by Salt himself, at first singly published. "A Voyage to Abyssinia" for which he received £200, with a share in the profits. In the following year he was appointed Consul General in Egypt. During his period of office there he took a great interest in excavation, and secured for himself three large collections. The first was bought for the British Museum for £1,000 Salt sold it out for £1,000, the second went to the French Government for £1,000, and the third was sold after his death at Sotheby's, and realised £2,100 15s. 2d. Salt, who was a man of strong phrenque and restless temperament, died from a disease of the spleen in October, 1860, and was buried in Alexandria.

Abyssinia to be in a true Federal state but were both in a perpetual Hostility is kept up by what in Southern Italy is called the banditti & are constantly at War with each other. Assosa, a town of 10000 inhabitants Salt visited, & there He found some of the greatest Chiefs of the country & threw some light upon a controverted point of History. He was dressed in Abyssinia in an Arab dress, but as an Esquire and not as a Slave but suffered great privations & underwent much of the hardships of the wretched & unprovided state of the country. He also mentioned the Religion established in Abyssinia, it is a species of Christianity but is nearer to the Koptic. He mentioned a single stone column 100 feet high, 80 feet high. Bruce gave a very interesting description of the

Unarmed and Fearless

Lord Wellesley provided every accommodation for the Esquire to accomplish the object of His voyage to the Coast. He left the Coast by which means His Lordship had a view of the Coast of part of the Coast with which our Mariners were not acquainted in consequence of which many vessels had been wrecked. He was so sure that there are several excellent Harbours in the Coast that in case of bad weather may find safety. An apprehension of the Coast had prevented any attempts from before long going to the Coast. A party landed & presented themselves as the Esquire & his party, having perfect confidence in them which had been given to them, & created an equal degree of confidence in the party who were to visit the Ship unarmed & fearless.

Salt spoke of the many circumstances which had attended his absence. He had not heard from any of his friends for the last years. He saw in an English newspaper, which he had bought of his Brother Dr. Salt. On coming to London He met a person who told him His Father had again married. He also told him that His Sister, widow of Dr. Hall, was married to a Man & that they make up four a great family. He also told him that He found in London that in four years & a half that the Men he knew had become men, & young girls Women.

He Kept a Diary

He did. He had kept a regular Journal & had also kept a Diary & preserve every drawing and all that He had written. He also had also been very industrious in writing a Journal & was also very proper persons as to the best mode of preparing the Journal. His Lordship did not go too far into the Journal. He had too great a stake in life & was not willing to risk it by having His life risked by it, but for Himself it was a great advantage & consequence. He did. He was to go this night on the Ship to see His Father. He was 26 years of age in June last.

CHAPTER XI

1806

Ships In Commission

November 1. [The Naval returns, up to this day, state the number of Ships, In Commission to be

On the Line	139.
Fitters	12.
Frigates	164.
Sloop &c	180.
Gun Brgs & under	261.

747.

In Dockyard

On the Line	52.
Fitters	14.
Frigates	60.
Sloop &c	40.
Gun Brgs & under	5.

921.

Building:

On the Line	48.
Frigates	30.
Sloop &c	51.
Gun brgs & under	8.

Total: 1051.

[From Small Note-book.]

Lawrence and West

November 3.— Lawrence called having returned from Sir Francis Baring's, Stratton Park, in Hampshire this morning, —where He had been from the 5th. of October. He painted portraits of Sir Francis,—

His Brother, and His Sister, I saw & I thought, each figure a half length. Before He spoke, I saw that He was not what He was indebted to Him. I saw that He was not what Francis said, it did not go to the heart of the matter, but He ought to have as His friend, I saw that He was not what He was but moderately paid for his work. His portraits (the Heads being his chief work) were quite good. A little more as from being compared with the work of the West. He then asked Lawrence whether West ever painted a portrait of a person in his works? adding that while West was painting the portrait of a person, he made a few observations but West paid no regard to them.

Lawrence and Henry Hope

Henry Hope* of Churchfields Regent, a man of letters, a friend of Lawrence spoke of the Royal Academy, and of the fact that when becoming a Member was planned, that Henry Hope, a friend of his, had told him short. — Hope said it was the only way to get a portrait of a person not professional, but a man of letters, a man of letters, a man of letters. He then named, —

November 8. — Thursday [1814] — I called on Henry Hope, who was President in the room of Wyatt, A. R. C. He told me that he had resigned the Chair. — He asked whether I thought it was a good thing that I replied that all I knew was, that Mr. West's painting was the comfort He had felt from having painted it as a portrait. He asked "Why might not the members have each one of their own portraits, each to have a power of nominating and getting a portrait of a Member might vote for himself and the others." He said I was engaged in that; but I saw that old and I answer except West's portrait, which would cause much heart burning in others.

Lyaons & Lawrence dined with me. — I saw that the result of it was manifest to Him that Shee & Hoppner did not like to be compared together.

* Henry Hope, wealthy merchant and art collector

† Mr. W. Roberts writes: "In the Foreigner's Diary, I have been reading the statement: 'Lawrence told me that it was manifest to him that Shee and Hoppner did not like to be compared together.' Of course, the statement of the Diary is a mere statement. It may have caused at least a temporary disturbance among some of the members. I have, nevertheless, if Lawrence was justified in his observations, I have a copy of Hoppner's 'Oriental Tales, translated into English Verse,' which, under the head of 'Oriental Tales,' the following inscription to Shee: 'James P. 1814. My dear Sir, I have the pleasure of presenting to your virtues and talents, which cannot be regarded with greater affection than with more affectionate zeal than yours ever beautifully, J. Hoppner' on the fly-leaf of which was written: 'My dear Hoppner, I have been very glad to hear of your success in your work, and I am sure that you will accept this little work as a testimonial of my esteem and friendship. While the two books remain they will prove that we are not only friends but also that there were two points at least when we were in the same mind.'

In the George Daniel Library there was a copy of Shee's 'Oriental Tales,' which on the fly-leaf of which was written: 'My dear Hoppner, I have been very glad to hear of your success in your work, and I am sure that you will accept this little work as a testimonial of my esteem and friendship. While the two books remain they will prove that we are not only friends but also that there were two points at least when we were in the same mind.'

November 6. Mr. Pucke & Reyd. Mr. Whalley called. They spoke highly of Mr. Fawkes the new Member for Yorkshire,* saying that He is a man of great abilities & information; a Scholar, acquainted with Arts & Sciences & likely to make an excellent member. He was supported [by] the Duke of Norfolk & Lord Fitzwilliam.

Belvoir Castle stands in Leicestershire, the Stables in Lincolnshire. The Duke [of Rutland] has caused His Brother to offer for Leicestershire. The Duke has a large estate in that County. Altogether His property is reckoned to be £100,000 a year & He is disposed to take care of it. He lays out money in building, but does not game, or squander His money idly. A subscription was made in the County for the Volunteers. The Duke subscribed £400, but He took for His Corps £800 from the general funds of £8000 & thereby saved His own pocket. It is remarkable that in that family it has been usual to portion the younger Brothers by giving to each an annuity only & that £5000 a year, the rest to be done by the family interest. The Duke gave the Receivership of the County of Leicester to Mr. Marshfield a Banker in Leicester, it is worth £3000 a year, but He conditioned that His Brother shd. be paid from it £1500 a year, viz: one half.

Sir G. & Lady Beaumont called having come to town yesterday. We talked a little about pictures. He sd. He cd. scarcely bear to read the acts, from Germany. They were going to Wilkie's to see the picture painted by Him for Sir George "The Blind Fiddler." Sir George had been a month at Lord Moulgrave's in Yorkshire where Wilkie & Jackson also were. Sir George said Wilkie painted well anything that He saw & understood to represent, "Cattle, more justly than Raphael, less of the Manufactory."

The Blind Fiddler

November 7. Being engaged to dine with Sir G. Beaumont He called upon me before dinner & we walked to Wilkie's in Soho row, Not to, but did not find Him at home. We saw His picture of the "Blind Fiddler" which He painted for Sir George. I was surprised at the merit of it viz: truth of expression, judicious arrangement, and agreeable tone of coloring. I had only two remarks to make viz:

excellent, who could contend without enmity, and associate without suspicion. That this variability may long exist between us is the sincere desire of, dear Hoppner, your ever faithful, Martin Archer Sher. — Examiner, square, December 7, 1804.

I think it will be concluded that Examiner was in all probability entirely mistaken in supposing that "Sher and Hoppner shared full intercourse together."

[Mr. Roberts said in Vol. III., page 311, a reference to the Sher-Hoppner quarrel, and in the present volume, in the February, 1805, it is stated that Sher "has no longer intercourse with Hoppner." The probable cause of the estrangement also is given. — Ed.]

* Charles James Pucke, of Pockwood Hall, born 1746, High Sheriff Co. Leicester. He died in 1816, and was succeeded by his eldest son. His second daughter (by his first wife) was the mother of the first Lord Bateman. The Rev. T. Whalley, of Eaton, near Northampton, Mr. W. B. Pucke, of Pockwood Hall, Leicestershire's great friend and patron. See Index, Vol. II.

that the colour of the ground was rather too green, and that there was a some of the Harlequin a little of a commoner colour. Sir George told me that when He gave Walker the Commission He proposed 24 guineas a Walker, but when He met Walker, at Lord Manners's in Yorkshire being informed that the picture was finished, and that the painting of the Mulgrave how much it had been improved, and that the painting of the "Messenger" He gave Walker 30 guineas. He is a very good man, and a very
 I told Sir George that I hoped Walker had been a great deal better than Walker himself, that his pictures are good, and that he should keep all the advantages He is entitled to.

Sir George said, that Jackson says Walker is very good, and that he is a Sir George apprehends the greatest danger to him is his own becoming fond of money. He says that He may sometimes be generous as He does at present with care & attention, studying nature. He said that he was from the time He painted the "Exiles of Russia" He said that he was extraordinary man & not have fallen into that vulgar prejudice manufacturing made of painting when He has nothing to say.

Burns and Wordsworth

At dinner Sir George speaks of Mr. Burns & Mr. Wordsworth. When in company He seldom proposes a subject for conversation. There was Lady Henrietta read some parts of a very good poem of Burns's. A Word-worth. The latter is now with the family in the Countess's room. He is at Cambridge. Wordsworth's House at the moment is very cold. He is family & too cold in the winter. He is very intelligent and a great deal of progress at his own mind, viz: How He was often led by his own mind to the as He advanced in life. This work He proposes to publish gradually with He shall have made Himself much acquainted with the history of the progress of them more interesting, by some previous time and a different time.

CHAPTER XII

1866

Hoppner's Jealousy

November 8. Hoppner called on me, — on the state of the Academy. He sd. it was impossible to go on with Wyatt [P.R.A.] if the Academy did, he felt on supported it must fall. He sd. difference of opinion in the Academy on certain points had prevailed but He always had a great respect for me. He sd. that He had sd. with a belief that it was my wish to have Lawrence elected President, but that not thinking it at present practicable I was willing to fix upon some one who wd. not interfere with Lawrence. He said it seemed extraordinary that a man of my Character shd. be so partial to one so different from me in His conduct as Lawrence was. I replied to Him that His notions were bounded on jealousy; that I had while I held intercourse with Him seen more of Him than I did of Lawrence & never gave to the latter a preference. Our conversation on this point concluded with His agreeing to vote for West which I sd. wd. be the best thing possible to prevent jealousy & difficulties.

Lawrence I called on. Kimble has informed Him that Stafford cost Sheridan much money. Every Election drained His purse. Each time not less than £8,000.

Prussia had Fallen

November 9. Went to St. James's Chapel, and while I was walking before the time of going into the Chapel Edwards [P.R.A.] came up bring on His way to Harrogate. He told me His indignation at the lives of the Painters is in great forwardness. . . . He noticed the state of affairs in Europe saying to the overwhelming power of Bonaparte, & said it must have an end 'ere long. That Prussia had fallen a sacrifice to Her want of a good principle & that if that Monarchy should be abolished it must be recollected that it was but a new war.

Lytton called. At Ralph Price's* yesterday He met the Editor of the Navy Mutiny to support the Administration by His speeches in the House of Commons.

* Third son of Sir Charles Price, Bart. Baronet, of Spring Grove, Richmond, Surrey.

Sir Francis Baring spoke of Lord Castlereagh and said: "He had done business with him and found him a man with a very clear head, who once saw into the marrow of a subject. That he was a man of a cool, equal temper & is not ruffled by speeches in the House of Commons or by any attacks upon him, & does not aim at more than plain speaking."—Sir Francis has much anecdote & is very conversational, & I am sorry to regret that he had not at the time made more notes of the things which he said.

Soane Cleaned the Shoes

November 12.—Dance showed me a letter recd. by Henry Thomas Sturt dated Oct. 4th. expressing the greatest regard for him. The letter was forwarded to Dance at Sir G. Beaumont's residence. He showed it to Dance did not reply to it, & said he should not allow what he had received from Soane ever again have any correspondence with him. After that he made Charles Dance write a copy of it, which he gave me. For Dance said, he well remembered Soane being a boy and his father's friend when a youth & had himself been with him when in the kitchen while he was cleaning the shoes &c."

* George Dance and Sir John Soane were architects and Royal Academicians. Sir Nathaniel Dance, George's nephew, was a commander in the service of the East India Company. See Vol. II., page 172 and note.

Mr. Arthur T. Bolton, Curator of the Sir John Soane Museum, writes: "I repeat that you will allow me, in the interests of historical students, to suggest the very interesting fact that to-day's extract from Farlington's Diary may give us the real exterior of Soane and Soane. Tea-table gossip is notoriously unreliable, and writers on the past are bound in cooler moments over the things they say about each other under the stress of party feelings."

The relations between Soane and Dance, although no opponents under the Act of 1753, remained intimate to the latter's death in 1825. I have read letters (not shown above) from Dance to Soane, expressing his thanks in the warmest possible terms. The acquisition of Sir John Soane was the Dance Cabinet. Sir N. Dance wrote to Soane to purchase it, frankly for the benefit of his family, and the veteran architect in his 83rd year travelled down to the country for that purpose. As the object was not the entry of Soane into Dance's office I regard it as a legend. I have not seen evidence in that effect, but think that it was effected through James Peacock, Dance's secretary, who remained an intimate old friend of Soane's.

[Mr. Bolton is, of course, entitled to his opinion as to what is legend and what is not. He is an obstinate opponent. Our correspondent says, for example, that Sir Nathaniel Dance does he mean Sir Nathaniel Dance-Holland or his nephew? . . . and the veteran architect in his 83rd year travelled down to the country for that purpose.]

Now Soane was not 83 until 1836, whereas both Sir Nathaniel Dance and his nephew died in 1811, the other in 1827, so that neither could have been engaged as an errand boy by George Dance, the younger. It is surely no wonder that he rose from being an "errand boy and cleaner of boots" to be a Royal Academician and a knight.—Ep.]

CHAPTER XIII

1806

Artists and Critics

November 12.—Sir George Beaumont & Mr. [Uvedale] Price called on Dance yesterday & requested Him to go with them to-day to call on Robert Smirke to see His design for the front of Lord Lowther's intended House at Lowther. This was in consequence of Price having told Sir George that He had seen a drawing of Robert Smirke's, a design for that House, which He did not approve, & Sir George being hastily affected by what Price sd. considered Himself to be called upon, having united with Dance in recommending Robt. Smirke to Lord Lowther, to prevent a design made in a bad taste from being executed while it was possible to do it.

They accordingly went, and on Robert Smirke shewing them the drawing of the House, as it is intended to be executed, Price declared it to be quite another thing & professed to approve it much.—Robt. Smirke also showed them several drawings of Greek antiquities to which He had put backgrounds in water colours. Dance sd. He was much disgusted on observing Sir George took no notice of the buildings, the objects which the drawings were made to represent, but employed all His attention to the tinting of the Skies & backgrounds, those secondary matters, which He criticised & recommended improvements of the effects in a way, that shewed Dance how much He was filled with an opinion of his own taste & judgment in such matters, a weakness which Dance was sorry to see.

I told Dance that in this & such like ways Artists are seriously affected by these Critics, who run abt. & in many respects do much harm to the Professors.—Dance said He thought Price had no taste or true feeling for works of art, that it was all assumed.—

John Linnell

November 14.—Sir George Beaumont called today. He came to town with an intention of remaining a month, but finds He cannot apply to anything & therefore proposes to go to His Mother at Dunmow.—Yesterday He took Hearne to Wilkie's to see the "Blind Fidler," which Hearn commended in the highest degree. But Sir George says there is not everywhere a disposition to approve what Wilkie may do. Sir George thinks the beauty of Wilkie not strong. He had a strong complaint at Lord Mulgrave's. He has advised Wilkie to walk every day.—He spoke of Haydon as being a very promising young artist and also of the Boy (Linnell), whose paintings of Alex's & now Wilkie's are admirable, & the Skies blended with the other colour of Canaletto.—

Lawrence and the Princess

November 15.—Lawrence called to enquire about a felony matter. He is still apprehensive that a Manoeuvre may be attempted to get Hoppner into the Presidency.—He told me that Mr. Perceval, the late Attorney General,* came to him on Wednesday the 24th of Sep with two Magistrates & He deposed on oath to the truth of the Declaration He had made respecting His attendance upon & intercourse with the Princess of Wales.—Mr. Perceval told him that after having given deposition respecting His intercourse with the Princess Captain Macl had added a general declaration of His ignorance of any improper conduct with respect to Her Royal Highness & He wished Lawrence to do the same.—Lawrence said that He thought that would be fully done by stating that once only He was left alone with the Princess and that nothing took place but what all persons might properly have been witnesses to. The Conclusion of this business has been as follows. When all the examinations of persons had been gone through to oppose the resolutes against the Princess given before the Commissioners, Lord Eldon, J Perceval & I understood Mr. Plumer† drew up an answer for the Princess which was carried to the King by Lord Eldon, who to His great surprise after what had before passed between the King & Him on that subject refused to receive it, and said He could not receive anything but what came to Him through the hands of the Commissioners. Such is the true state of His Majesty's mind, and so fearful is He of increasing difficulties

West Anti-English

November 16.—[Smirke] mentioned that Haynes who has been in contact with West had spoken to him of the excessive indiscretion of West situated as He is with the King, in speaking in the manner He does the state of Europe & His partiality to Buonaparte. He talks in a way as cannot be agreeable to the feelings of Englishmen & He says to be advised to the contrary. Smirke told Haynes that I was the man * Spencer Perceval (1762-1812), fourth son of the Earl of Egmont, was Attorney General under Addington (Lord Sidmouth) and in Pitt's last Ministry and Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Portland Government. Premier in 1809, he carried the Regency Bill in 1811, and was shot the following year in the lobby of the House of Commons by Bellingham, a Liverpool broker.

† Attorney-General Sir Thomas Plumer.

proper person to speak to Him. I told Smirke that West certainly has not an English mind, & is kept to this country only by the Income He receives from the King, & by His Son having married here, - in this He fully agreed.

[In the illustration of the Politics of Europe, in Bell's Weekly Messenger this day it was predicted " That if Russia come into Contact with France, that is to say, unless Russia make an immediate peace, - Petersburg will, in all probability, be in the hands of the French, and one of the House of Bonaparte become the Emperor of the North." - From small note book.]

November 18. Called on Smirke & sat with Him near three Hours during which time He was employed in tuing two pictures with Asphaltum mixed with Japanners Gold Size to make it dry & a little Wax to fix it, and Prussian Blue.

C. Dilly's I dined at. Forrester* who is a native of Perth said that Paul the candidate for Westminster Father is now a Taylor at Perth. Paul is now about 46 or 48 years old. His conduct, while He was a youth, was irregular, and He left Perth to go to India, having lost an indifferent character at that time. About 6 years ago He returned from India & on His going to Perth was but indifferently recd. by respectable people, but He was generous to His Father on whom He also settled an Annuity, and established His Brothers in business, and for such acts was respected & acknowledged. He returned to India after that period & the last time came back supposed to be worth £80,000.

Sheridan Wins

Lawrence came to tea. Sheridan [three day ago] carried His election for Westminster with which they were much pleased.

[The Election to Westminster terminated - the 15th day.

For [Abraham] St. John, Hood .....	5178
Mr. Sheridan .....	4758
Mr. Paul .....	4481

Majority for Mr. Sheridan 477.

- From small note book.]

R.A.'s Perplexed

November 19. [Thomson, R.A], &c. He is fully sensible of the dislike to Hopper & that it has arisen from his own conduct, which has been intemperate & offensive to most of the Members. Lawrence, on the contrary, has not been complained of for calumniating the members or anything directly offensive, but His cold, distant, reserved manner has disgusted many. On the whole He should rather choose to vote for Hoppner however convinced of His feelings. He admitted that the Academy is circumstanced it wd. be best to vote for West, though He did not like Him. I asked Him what it wd. be best to do in case West should decline the offer made to Him. He did not know. I told it as my opinion that it wd. be most prudent then to vote for Dan. He sd, it had not occurred to Him but certainly as a man He did not prefer Dance to West, and however little they wd. He might be to vote for an Architect as an example had already been set perhaps it may be best circumstanced as the Academy is.

* Edward Forrester of London, partner in the Dilly firm of wine merchants. See Vol. III, page 10.

He said that while He was at Sir John Lubbock's, in the form, the Duke of Gloucester was there & talking of a new Plan for the Royal Academy He sd, He had in His mind those members who were most likely to be elected. Sir John knowing who He meant said He differed from Him in opinion and a wager of five guineas was laid on it to name His men.--The Duke named Hopner, Bouverie, & Southburgh. Sir John named Hopner & Lawrence. The Duke indeed sd that Bourgeois & Beechey had told Him that unless it was at the request they would not accept the Office. Lawrence laughed at his self importance.

Hopner Childish

He acknowledged fully that no dependence can be placed on Hopner. He may be led like a Child while you are with Him, but the next day may be outrageously of an opposite opinion. He said Hopner had at all times expressed great respect for me notwithstanding He had been towards me with so much jealousy. He said that he had been saying that Wynt's party look for the reelection of Went, & I was to be expected it, as being our intention. I sd, that must have arisen from his jealousy—the necessity for it,—and not from any real intention of reelection as it could not have been communicated to Him.

CHAPTER XIV

(1856)

The Hurdwicks

November 19. Lyons came to tea. He and His Brother were last week at Lord Hurdwicks in Cambridge-shire and were much pleased with the family. The daughters in number are from 17 to 20 years of age, and are very easy & pleasant in their manners & not at all affected by their late situation in Ireland while their Father kept a Court being Lord Lieutenant. Lord Royston, the eldest son is now at Peterborough.

Lyons mentioned that it is now ascertained that the infant daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Richd. Price is totally Blind*. Mrs. Price attributed it to her having often seen at Church, during her pregnancy, a woman who in a remarkable manner perpetually rolled her eyes about. Mrs. Price in consequence made an observation before she was delivered "whether she might be affected by it."

The Duke as Visitor

After Lyons was gone we talked abt. the Academy & I communicated to Him what had passed with West & that His answer had not yet been given. I told Him of the Duke of Gloucester having named Bungeade for President. He said the Duke had been on a visit at Lord Crewe's in theshire & had made them very weary of Him by His tediousness and the trouble He gave. At table the Bottle is never passed by Him so that others wait till it has been returned from Him. The Prince of Wales, & His Brothers knowing His disposition, oppose it, & endeavour to get the better of his tediousness habits. At Crewe Hall, He did not relieve the family from the trouble of having Supper, but a Hot Supper like a dinner was each night to be provided. Mrs. Crewe and Her young female friends would sometimes retire from the general apartment to another sitting room & there sit down familiarly to work. The Duke wd. come into the room & they according to Etiquette wd. stand up, from which He would not relieve them, but after saying a word or two to them, would continue for a quarter of an Hour keeping them in that situation.

* Richard Price, of The Lanes, South Lambeth, was fourth son of Sir Charles Price, and married on October 4, 1854, Elizabeth Nigel, daughter of Henry Heyman, Consul-General for the Hans Towns.

The present baronet (the sixth) is Sir Charles Rugge-Price.

Europe is Lost

[November 23. In Bell's Weekly Messenger this day it is stated, "That Europe is lost. Russia can only be saved by an immediate Peace, and England, as having no further object in War, must from every motive of prudence be a party to the same general peace." From small note-book.]

Falling Nations

November 27. J. Osley's Edward at 10 o'clock brought us from the City an acct. of two of the Hamburgh Mails now due, having arrived. --That the Duke of Brunawick is dead of his wounds. -- & that the City of Labeck had been taken by storm. C. Osley's notes were, that the storm gathering around we must expect it [to] break upon us, and that seeing the fall of other nations, the people of this country may possibly become reconciled to whatever may happen to them.

[The following passage in a Proclamation addressed to His Majesty was issued Oct. 26th. 1806 and signed Napoleon, from our Imperial Camp at Potsdam: "My whole people have risen, in indignation at the unworthy capitulation which the Prussian Ministers, on their side, proposed to us. Our roads & frontier towns are full of our troops, who burn to march in our footsteps. We will no longer be the sport of treacherous peace, and we will not lay down our arms until we have obliged the English, those eternal enemies of our nation, to renounce the scheme of disturbing the Continent, and the tranquility of the East." From small note-book.]

November 29. -- C. & Mrs. C. Osley called to invite me to dinner. He brought an acct. of Hamburgh being taken possession of by Gen. Mortier for Napoleon.

A Crust in Her Hand

November 30. -- J. Osley's I went to dinner. Mrs. Thompson told us of Dr. Walsby a prebend of Canterbury having had the strange story told him abt. a year & half ago by an old woman of the name of H. a remarkable character for penuriousness. She was accustomed to attend the Cathedral Service, & one day went up to Dr. Walsby & told him she wd. leave him £100 in her Will. From that time he kept up communication with her & for some years told her at his table every Sunday at dinner, though she was so dirty as to be disgusting to her Servants. -- When the Doctor was informed of her Death it is said he went to Her House & shut himself in it. She was found dead with Crust in Her hand. Her penury was excessive & her character so bad having it is said, defrauded a relation of £1500. She left the £100 nearly Her Sole Heir. His view in His conduct to her was excellent a very unfavourable opinion of him has been since entertained, which Mrs. T. thinks has affected His spirits & His looks. -- He gave nothing to Her relations. --

CHAPTER XV

1806

Lawyer or Attorney

December 1. Lysons called. He told me the Revd. Mr. Dibdin* who solicits to be Secretary to the Antiquary Society, is nephew to Dibdin the Musical Composer. He was a Senator of St. John's College, Oxford, & was afterwards sometime at Worcester, where He issued notices that He wd. act as a Lawyer or Attorney at certain prices, for whoever might be disposed to employ Him. He was afterwards sometime at Gloucester where He had the management of a Sugar Baker concern.

Willis [F.S.A.] of Kensington, is Dibdin's great friend in endeavouring to procure the Secretaryship. He has known Him abt. 3 years.

Lysons very much repudiated the manner in which the outside of the new Gothic Buildings near Westminster Abbey are completed. It is not with stone but with a Composition, not much cheaper than stone. It is said Wyatt has a concern in the Patent & therefore urges the use of it.

Sheridan's Talents

Lawrence I called on, & saw His picture of Sir Francis Baring &c. We talked of the situation of public affairs. I observed that there is no one to whom we can look up with much feeling of confidence as possessing superior wisdom and abilities. In reckoning up the different political men He mentioned Steele as having the best talents. I agreed with Him that if the talents He has displayed in preserving considerable importance through a career of profligacy which wd. have overcast any other man, had been productly applied to politics He must have been at the head of affairs. He thought highly of Lord Castlereagh & ad. Canning is much to be reckoned upon, and is allowed to have great integrity.

* Thomas Frogal Dibdin, B.D. (1776-1843), nephew of Charles Dibdin, the song-writer, was author of the popular "Bibliographical Decameron." He was unsuccessful in his application for the secretaryship of the Antiquarian Society.

West and the Presidency

December 2.—Mr. West called to speak to Mr. Boydell respecting His again accepting the Chair of the Royal Academy. He said He had not heard anything from Windsor of the state of the King's mind with regard to the Academy & Wyatt. For a little time past the King has appeared to be rather hurried in his manner, dresses Him self 4 or 5 times a day, & is on the whole in such a state as those about Him whom they observe it do not like to address him upon any subject but what is absolutely necessary, but wait till He is more calm. That the Queen & Princess Elizabeth are very much disgusted with Wyatt's return, & West believes the Queen wd. be glad to hear of His [West] being chosen in the Academy Chair.—He then went into the business of His own picture, intended for the Chapel at Windsor, & sd. that His taking the Chair, ought to be followed by an Order to Him to complete that work. But He sd. that Wyatt had converted that part of the Castle intended for the Chapel into Cloisters.—He sd. He considered the pictures in their present state as only prepared for finishing and said, that if they were put up it would require two years to enable Him to complete them to their proper effect. He added, "That time was now to Him becoming precious. He was Three years (two years He sd. have sd.) He should be 70 years old."

He then sd. that what He had experienced in the Academy & the abhorrence in which He held many of the members of it, rendered it hateful to Him, and that there was one on the spot (His Lady) who had been a chief cause of all the troubles & who was a spy upon it, which increased His dislike to the place; that His troubled plan of life wd. be broken in upon by His again taking the Office upon Him, & that He could not think of holding it more than 12 months, but that as it wd. afford the members an opportunity to make a proper representation of what had been experienced since Wyatt was in the Chair, & to that order, He wd. accept it.—I replied to Him that it appeared to me that He might with propriety decline the Chair after the expiration of 12 months, if He shd. then be so inclined, as at His period of life it was reasonable that He should consult His own comfort & convenience. I was now authorised to communicate His consent to accept the Chair & that I shd. give Him information of what might pass upon it.

The Prince's Health

December 4.—Boydell spoke of the great interruption to Commerce which wd. be experienced by the taking of Hamburg. It is also sd. in the City that [the] administration have sounded leading men in the City to know, whether a £20 per cent. Income Tax wd. go down. A report prevailed He sd. that the Prince of Wales is dead. It was then added He that He cannot live, at least so says an Eminent Medical Man. That He can never recover from the stroke He is in. The last report is that

He told me that a person who was Secretary to Lord Sidmouth while He was Speaker of the House of Commons had informed Him, that sometime since a long list of persons proposed to be made Baronets was laid before His Majesty, among whom the Foxites had put down Alderman Combe, Bate Dudley, Perry, Proprietor of the Morning Chronicle, & Dennis O'Brien. The King sd. He would consider abt. Combe & rejected the others peremptorily.*

Clapnetmen before Art

Woulthorpe, the City Town Clerk, is indignant at the letter written to Him by Rossi, & reported it to be of a most scurrilous kind, Burch, the Common Council Man, also very much disapproved it. Boydell had not seen it. It will be read to the Committee of Common Council but not to the general Body. In deciding on the Models offered for Mr. Pitts monuments, cheapness was the first consideration. Bulke who has obtained it canvassed the Members of the Common Council and gave Cards on the back of which He put the mark which He had put on His model that it might be known.

Paid Large Wagers

Boydell sd. that Harvey Combe had been guilty of what might be called a swindling transaction in respect to obtaining a majority at His Election. He had laid large wagers that He wd. be at the head of the Poll, and to secure it privately canvassed & brought up Votes after He had with the other candidates disclaimed it, and while they in consequence were inactive.

He desired me to ask West for the use of 5 of His drawings by Claude to make up with those belonging to Lord Spencer a set. He spoke with great indignation of a proposal made to Him by Schiavonetti the Engraver, for engraving a Plate from David's picture of the Death of Lord Nelson. Schiavonetti proposed to engrave it in three years, to have £500 down upon receiving the Picture & Plate; £500 more when it should be half finished; & £500 more when it should be completed. He also stated that having but indifferent Health, He should be allowed to take the picture & Plate with Him to France, & there to execute it.— This unreasonable & unsafe proposal Boydell rejected, and has since entered into an agreement with Brumley, the Engraver, who is to undertake it, & to finish it in two years for £800.— Woollet had only £2500 for engraving the Death of General Wolfe, & this plate is to be the same size.

* Harvey Christian Combe, brewer, Alderman of Aldgate Ward in 1790, and Lord Mayor in 1799. The Combe Delafield Brewery, largely extended, still exists in Castle Street, Long Acre. He died at Margate on August 13, 1832. Bate Dudley, first editor of the Morning Post and founder of the Morning Herald, was created a Baronet in 1813. Dennis O'Brien (1733-1832), dramatist and political pamphleteer. Fox appointed him, in 1806, to the Patent Office of Marshal of the Admiralty at the Cape of Good Hope, at a salary, it was said, of £4,000 a year.

CHAPTER XVI

1864

Canova and Flaxman

December 5.--[Flaxman, R.A.] said He had been informed that an offer had been made to Canova the Italian Sculptor, to execute a statue of Mr. Pitt for Cambridge, but that Canova had refused. He said Lord Elgin had told Him (Flaxman) that on His way from Greece, being in Rome, He shewed several articles of Greek Sculpture to him, & proposed to Him to restore such parts as were wanting. Canova advised His Lordship to let them remain as they were, but added if you wish to have them restored there is one in England (Flaxman) who can do it as well as he should be able to perform such a task.

Pitt always had the Word

Dr. Haynes sd. that He had learnt among His Political friends that Mr. Fox always spoke highly of Mr. Pitt's powers. Jekyll, the Common Lawyer, saying one day before Mr. Fox, that He had well considered a certain point of Law & had prepared Himself to speak upon it, & wished Mr. Pitt wd. afford Him an opportunity to meet Him upon it. Fox, in answer recommended to Jekyll first to try His powers against Pepper Arden.*

At another time Fox hearing some of the Company in which He happened to be extolling His great Command of words, observed to them that certainly He had a word but Mr. Pitt always had the word. It has been commonly observed that men eminent at the Bar as Pleaders do not make much figure in the House of Commons, it has been noticed that there is a manifest difference in this respect between the Pleaders in the Kings Bench & those in Chancery, the latter have frequently been distinguished in the House of Commons, the former scarcely ever. The mind is narrowed by the habit of pleading upon the principle they do the Kings Bench, while in Chancery the principle is more liberal & extended.

* Pepper Arden (1745-1804) was Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and entered the House of Lords as Baron Alvanley, Cheshire. He was a great orator and ready which made him a master in debate. His name is still famous in the law.

It was observed of Mr. Pitt that He never uttered a sentence ungrammatically. Porson, the Greek Professor, said that every sentence uttered by Mr. Pitt was so regular & correct as to appear as if formed in His mind before it was expressed; on the contrary Mr. Fox often plunged into the middle of a sentence & found His way through it as well as He could.

December 6. [Mr. Thornton, the late Minister at Hamburgh arrived & brought intelligence that all the British Merchants at Hamburgh had been declared by Buonaparte prisoners of War. That British property of every description is to be confiscated. England is declared to be in a state of Blockade.

December 7. The proposal suggested of attacking foreign Property in the English Funds strongly protested against in Bells Weekly Messenger, contending that with out Integrity we should lose our Liberty; our character wd. be gone, our feelings debased. Honesty the best Policy. [From small note book.]

Farlington and Hoppner

December 8. I had a good deal of conversation with Owen & went over many particulars of Hoppner's conduct to me, & told Him that though I had & should receive Hoppner frankly & civilly, I certainly should not while His mind continued to be what it has long been, go to His House & promote intercourse with Him, & that my communications with respect to Mr. West had been made through Thomson. He said that Hoppner could not be depended upon. Went out of the question (who was the most proper man to be President), Hoppner & Lawrence were the persons most proper for the situation. I spoke to Him of the unfounded jealousy of Hoppner, of my having a great desire to make Lawrence, President, & declared to Him that I had never held conversation with Lawrence upon such a subject.

West Elected

December 10. A general meeting of the Royal Academicians was held. Mr. West was elected President.

FIRST BALLOT.

West ..... 16
 Lautherburgh ..... 4
 Hoppner ..... 1
 Beechey..... 1

SECOND BALLOT.

West ..... 17
 Lautherburgh..... 4

I told Lawrence I had now fully experienced that Fuseli was incapable of real attachment or gratitude & shd. act towards Him accordingly. We conversed abt. Him & His manners, which have been frequently such as to make His friends afraid to introduce Him in Company.--Win. Locke took Him from the Annual Academy dinner the Opera & introduced Him into Lady Templemans House, where He behaved so ill, & talked so improperly, that the next day the Ladies were all exclaiming against Him.

Decomhor 11. Baker called. Had been sent to by Mrs. Edwards & had been with Her, and given Her £5. sd. He wd. if Sir Wm. Blizard wd. bear one half of the expence of the Funeral, pay the other Half did not like [to think] that Poor Edwards* shd. be buried by Charity even from the Academy.--I shewed Him that we must look to Mrs. Edwards His Sister, & do what shd. be best for Her & might obtain from the Academy more than wd. be required for the funeral to enable Her to pay on, & that a pension might be secured for Her. He agreed to this, being prudent, & went to an Undertaker, Mr. Edmunds, & with Him came back to me. It was then agreed that Edmunds shd. make an estimate of the expence & send it to me & Baker shd. call on me in the evening.

Betty I sent to Mrs. Edwards, the acct. she brought was that abt. five weeks ago Her Brother was suddenly struck with a pain between His Shoulders which He believed to be Rheumatism. For a time I suffered a good deal of pain from it but it gradually subsided, but He had a fixed uneasiness on His Breast & a shortness of Breath, such as He had never been accustomed to feel, unless when He had walked fast in the weather.--Yesterday He was up, & walked abt. His room, and had dinner, but did not eat well, which caused His Sister to say as He had made a bad dinner He shd. have his tea early. His Bed was in the Front Parlour. Milbourne Junr. a young man, was sitting with Him in the other Parlour in conversation when abt. 4 past 3 at back in the afternoon He suddenly complained & desired Milbourne to assist Him to the other room, who being alarmed called out & let Him slide to the ground; & an old woman who was assisting Mrs. Edwards in washing being in the Back Parlour, came to them. they placed Him on the bed where He died immediately.--His sister said He had of late grown fat so as to be noticed for it, & His friends had remarked how well He looked.--

Yesterday morning I recd. a note from Him with some good News of His Lives of the Painters, He complained of shortness of breath but hoped it wd. go off as He recovered strength.

* Edward Edwards, A.R.A., author of "Anecdotes of Painters" See Index, Vol. I. and III.

CHAPTER XVII

1806

West and Wyatt

December 11. West was very well pleased with all that had been done. He did not know how the King wd. take it, but sd. should His Majesty strike His pen through His name He shd. not be uneasy abt. it but leave it to the consideration of the people. He wished Dance to go up with the papers of Election, as the King had a high opinion of Dance and after what He had experienced from Wyatt there was no knowing what effect it might have on His Majesty's mind. He sd. that Wyatt owed His situation with the King, and the place of Surveyor General of the works, to the Queen & Princess Elizabeth, which was to make Him a compensation for the trouble & loss of time which He had suffered in attendance upon the Queen & the Princess, building Frogmore &c. &c., for which it is believed He never recd. any pecuniary recompence. Indeed Wyatt told a person with whom West is acquainted that His expenses & great loss of time, in attending upon the Royal Family had been the ruin of Him.

Holt, a Political Writer

West expressed a desire that T & Dance with Smirke wd. draw up some statement of what had passed at the Academy & the state of the Society. I told Him that might be best done by telling the facts simply in a paper with whom He is acquainted & had a high opinion of viz: [Holt]* the Political Writer in Bell's Weekly Messenger. He immediately gave me the highest commendation of him; said He is a very extraordinary man; that He was born in Norfolk & is the Son of a Clergyman who has a living somewhere, He believes, near Holkham; that He is not more than 25 or 26 years of age; was educated at Westminster School & was in the same Class with Lord Henry Petty. That He is much patronised by Mr. Windham, & ere long will probably be in Parliament. I said the Political writing in Bell's Messenger had often been almost Prophetic. He replied that He has excellent information.

* See Index, Vol. III.

and is the Author of a Pamphlet which now makes a great noise "The Story of the Negotiation of Lord Lauderdale," but it is not known that He wrote it.—He said that Mr. Holt speaks of Mr. Windham with great admiration saying "He has a most elegant mind," but of His Judgment He smiles when He speaks.—

Holt thinks the Emperor of Russia acted a very bad part in His negotiation with France. D'Orbigny* was certainly sent to Paris with unlimited powers, but the administration of Russia at that time was what is called the "Peace administration." During this negotiation another set of persons came into power and formed what was then the dispositions called "The War Administration." These induced the Emperor to disavow Dombri's Treaty, which being known encouraged Prussia to present herself; but Buonaparte did not allow time for conjunction of their forces but destroyed by His superior power of Prussia singly, —the Negotiation of Lord Lauderdale went on but & openly, till towards the conclusion when there was something not quite consistent.—

West then spoke of the able manner in which Holt had written the claims on the last Exhibition. He said that He had known Holt through His son Ralph, and that Holt had said to Him, that it was His desire to obtain some knowledge of the Public Arts of which He declared Him to be quite ignorant. West recommended to Him to read the discourses of Sir Joshua Reynolds, & Vasari's lives of the Painters, &c. which He could do in six months.

Buonaparte's Blockade

December 12.—Baker called. We talked of Buonaparte's Blockade of the British Islands. Baker said that finding the British power the only obstacle to His universal sway & that which prevents the full establishing His usurpations, He has become desperate & will subvert the Continent to any difficulties in order to distress us. Baker added that it will be to our interest never to make peace with Buonaparte while He holds His present position. He remarked on Fox and the great loss He had done His Country while in opposition.

Prince and Lord Granville

December 15.—This day I sat to Edridge who began a sketch of me for His Collection of Portraits of friends. He told me that Long is held in such respect by His friends that He had an offer of a seat in Parliament from three different friends. He accepted that of L. Lowther & is returned for Haslemere.—Upon the formation of a Ministry after the death of Mr. Pitt, an offer was made to Mr. Long by Lord Castlereagh of such a place as might suit & be agreeable to Him. Mr. Long told this to Edridge. He declined the offer, as He could not, with propriety, quit the friends of Mr. Pitt viz: Lord Castlereagh, Canning &c.

There is certainly a difference subsisting between the Prince of Wales & Lord Grenville, ad. to be owing to Election arrangements. The Prince is not popular. In some companies a toast is given, "The Prince of Wales for ever."

C. Olley's I dined at. Wm. Burroughs told me there are now abt. 260 Boys at Harrow School. The young Duke of Dorset is there. He is abt. 14 years old, is a good tempered Boy & well liked. He is called by the Boys, Dorset only*. Mr. Burroughs informed me that Hughes† is made a Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's, in consequence of which He gives up all His other preferment.

A Younger Brother

December 16. Am: Carlisle called to speak to me respecting His Brother [Nicholas] offering Himself for the Office of Secretary to the Antiquary Society. He sd. His Brother is younger than Himself & was born of a different mother, a second wife, sister to Captain Scutower, formerly in the East India Company's service; that He inherited a fortune of abt. £16000, which unfortunately [he had] been induced to engage in Shipping speculations for the Slave trade, but the connexions He formed proved to be bad, & eventually He lost the whole of His property. He has since been engaged with Mr. R [ ] Secretary to the Speaker of the House of Commons, in estimating the population of Great Britain; which has led Him on to Topographical studies & He has been assiduously employed in forming a Topographical Dictionary. He had a good school education, & is a very good Scholar. He had, said Carlisle, a great advantage over me in that respect. I was taken from School at the age of 14, but He remained there till He was near 19. He is unmarried, continued He, & having been kind to me when He had property & I had not, He now lives with me. I told Him that my vote had not been engaged & I desired to vote with those of my friends who are the best judges of what the Society requires; that Lyons appeared to be inclined to His Brother, & that must have a great effect in His favor. That I understood His Brother's name is now hung to be balloted for to be a member & wd. be elected towards the end of January. Carlisle came in a handsome Chariot.

[In the Herald this day it was stated, that John Carr, Author of "The Stranger in Ireland," on the 16th inst. recd. the Honor of Knighthood at Dublin Castle from the Duke of Bedford, Lord Lieutenant. From small note book.]

* Lord Hesse, who was one of his school fellows at Harrow, commemorated him in a set of verses, beginning, "Dorset, whose early steps with mine have strayed."

† Rev. Dr. Thomas Hughes. See Index, Vols I, II. and III.

CHAPTER XVIII

1806

A Great Singer

December 17. - Madame Catalani* the celebrated made her first appearance on the English Stage on the new Serious Opera called La Semiramide, [by Portogallo] appeared and excited admiration at Madrid, Lisbon, Ne-

On December 21 Farington wrote, I went to the Madame Catalani sing in the Opera of Semiramide. She the Season, - and a benefit. She is abt. 24 years of age, - -Des Hayes, Madame Des Hayes, & Parisot† danced. - Wales I saw with Lord and Lady Melbourne in their Box Belasis‡ was also in it.

Dr. Mow§ Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's, is expected new Bishop of Oxford. He is a son to [Charles Moss]

* Angelica Catalani was born on May 12, 1780, at Sinigaglia, and years of age her fine voice attracted the attention of the nuns at the Convent at Cubbio, a town famous for its pottery. In 1793 she made her first stage at the Fenice, Venice, as Lodovica in Mayr's opera of that name spread, and, as Farington records, she made her debut in London on a salary of £1,000 for the season, with £100 to cover the expenses of the journey and "one Benefit Night free of expense in the month of March, at which would be performed." She received enormous sums while in England 200 guineas for singing "God Save the King" and "Rule, Britannia" festival, £2,000. Catalani was a great singer. Her voice, we are told, ordinary purity, force, and compass . . . with a sweet, clear tone." She mainly to careless training at the convent. She died of cholera at Paris

† Mlle. Parisot, when dancing at the Opera in 1798, wore a dress Shute Barrington, Bishop of Durham, denounced as indecent. In 1800 Hughes, of Golden Square.

‡ Lady Anne Belasye, daughter and co-heir of Henry, second and last baron, by Charlotte, sister of Peniston, first Viscount Melbourne. She died July 19, 1791, to Sir George Wombwell, and died on July 7, 1808. See portrait in 1791.

§ Dr. Charles Mow was appointed Bishop of Oxford in 1807. He died of Bath & Wells, & possesses property to the amount of £3000 a year, so that He wants only Dignity.

[Daniel] Gardner who painted in Crayons & lived in Bond Street formerly, died July 8th, 1805 of a Liver Complaint. He had been much accustomed to quack Himself & did not know his disorder.—He was ill abt. Six months.—He died possessed of 15 or £1600 a year, which His Son, an only Child inherits. He is abt. 29 years old, & is a Barrister. Gardner's disposition was peculiar. He was extremely parsimonious. His great delight was in arguing in which He occasionally brought upon Himself severe animadversions, which generally caused Him to be more respectful to His opponents afterwards.—Hearne said He had experienced it.—

E. Edwards, A.R.A.

Poor Edwards's funeral I was called upon to attend at two oClock by Mr. West, Hearne & Edridge. We found at the House several persons. Sir Willm. Blizard, Cousin to Edwards, & an eminent Surgeon in the City, desired to read a paper, during which time Mrs. Edwards withdrew. It stated the character & merits of Edwards, & then proceeded to state the great comfort and assistance which He had derived from His Sister who had passed Her life in serving Him, and trusting that Her good qualities wd. render Her an object to be assisted by those of Her Brothers profession who had regard for Him.—After He had finished Mr. West spoke His kind sentiments, & I told Him that tomorrow night a Council wd. be held at the Royal Academy for the purpose of taking Her situation into consideration.

Sir Wm. Blizard, who is an eminent Surgeon, said, that the Body of Poor Edwards had been opened & some water was found in the Chest, which to a stronger constitution might not have caused much difficulty, but He had not [the] power to contend with its effects, at least that is probable.—Sir William did not open Him but proper persons were employed & made that report to Him.—I told Sir William privately that I hoped the Academy wd. give £50 to Mrs. Edwards at present, & put Her on the Donation list for £12. a year.

Humphry called in the even'g having dined with Daniell & there [had] been first informed of the Death of Edwards.—He sd. Edwards was as much n character as any man He had ever known, & proceeded to recapitulate several of His acts of Heroism & resolution, so disproportioned to His bodily distortion & weakness, & said it were to be wished that His excentricities & peculiarities could be recorded, they wd. make a History as entertaining as Don Quixotte.—He sd. all things considered He thought it was well that His life had thus terminated, as He had thereby been saved from any exposure to difficulties at an advanced period of life.—

December 18.—Mrs. Edwards I called on & talked with abt. Her late Brother & His affairs in order to be prepared for the Annual Council to-night. She told me he owed as follows:

To Mr. Young, the Landlord of His House	114.
To His Taylor, abt.	15.
Half a Year's Taxes	7.
And sundry small debts, the whole not exceeding	15.

151.

To pay this she had nothing but Her Household furniture, Her prints, & pictures. I told Her I hoped to obtain £50 from the Com. which wd. defray the funeral expenses & leave to Her about £15. I felt assured she would next Summer be put upon the Pension for 10 or 12 guineas a year, which wd. be continued to Her. That I no doubt of the intended publication of W. Agnew's Series of Points Engravers which Her Brother had prepared would pay her part. She said, His work on Prospect had not been printed, but that of a very different nature & less likely to sell. She told me she was years old, Oct. 17th, last.

She told me her Brother set off for Italy in July 1874 and returned to England abt. the end of Sept. 1876. She sd. she had remark. decrease of His bodily strength during the last 12 months. He could walk long, or fast as before, without being fatigued. Abt. 3 months He said to Her, Sally, I should be sorry to go before you, as you will have difficulties to experience; but it would also be bad for me were to go first, for I should much want your assistance. It was abt. a month since He complained of a pain in one of His arms, which ascended His shoulder, & afterwards in His back; He thought it Rheumatism. He did not appear to be seriously alarmed at any point of His indisposition. On the Monday even'g before He died, He had his bed moved but was so much fatigued with walking up two pairs of stairs, that sister, the next day, had his bed brought down & placed in the front par. He slept in it that night, & died the next day. She said she had much struck with the appearance of His complexion, which had a uniform gradually decreasing colour, but all appeared to be of a pale almost to white, except a circular spot of red on each cheek.

Picture of Buonaparte

After breakfast I called on Masquerier* & as I intended to attend Mr. Dibdin's last Lecture at the British Institute. Masquerier told me that He had profited to the amount of £1000 by the picture of Buonaparte. He had been enabled to purchase the House which He now resides & after having accommodated Himself with parlours & others for Domestic purposes, had let the front of his house and her annuities with others. In 1752 Worsley claimed £2000 against George III, then, of the Hanoverian Militia, for £1000,000 with his wife, but was awarded only one shilling damages on the ground of his conspiracy. Lady Worsley by royal Grant changed her name to that of Lady Fleming, and according to the Gentleman's Magazine for 1808, she was married a month after her husband's death, not to Howard, but to J. Louis Couchet.

* A life of Masquerier was published by the Connoisseur in 1912. See also Index, Vol.

CHAPTER XIX

1844

War and Wealth

December 18. [The following table is taken from a report of the

THE WAR OF

No. of Wars.	Who With.	When Began	In What King's Name	By What Treaty
1	France .....	May 2, 1669	William III	1674
2	France & Spain	May 4, 1701	Anne	1713
3	Spain .....	Dec. 16, 1740	George I	1763
4	Spain .....	Oct. 19, 1759	George II	1763
5	France .....	May 18, 1756	George II III	1763
6	America ....	April 14, 1775	George III	1783
7	France .....	Feb. 11, 1791	George III	1802
8	France .....	March 9, 1803	George III	1802

In the year 1664 a computation was made of the wealth of the Kingdom by many able writers:—Sir W. Petty,† estimated the value of the Kingdom which it appeared the total value of all properties, consisting of Houses, Lands, gold & Silver, Corn, Plate, Merchandise, Furniture &c. amounted to the sum of £15,000,000, and the annual profits of the same to £15,000,000.

* In this peace of nine years the Debt increased £16,000,000.

† Sir William Petty (1623-1687), physician, mathematician, and Surveyor-General of Ireland.

of people, the then population of England, amounted to £3 each person's clear yearly income, on a plan of equalization.

In the year 1800 the yearly income amounted to 402,000,000 being the profits of the landed & personal, at 15 per cent, arising from 2,700,000,000, viz: 1,250,000,000, landed property, and 1,450,000,000 personal of every denomination; which among 15,000,000 of people, the present population of this nation, be abt. £27 to each person's share, on the above plan, which is nine times more, at the present time, than 150 years ago. And, in order that each person may have as much income yearly as they enjoyed then, allow this £15,000,000 per year at that time to be £45,000,000, because the present population of this nation is 3 times greater now than at that period. There will then (when this £45,000,000 is taken from £402,000,000, the present yearly income) remain £357,000,000 as the yearly income and clear profits are <sup>to</sup> above what we then enjoyed. Could the nation be prevailed on to contribute 12 months of that their

REVOLUTION OF 1688 TO 1805.

Year Ended.	Where Fought and By Whom	Debt Contracted in Each War.	Total Debt at End of Each War.	Duration of Each Peace.	Debt Paid Off During Each Peace.
1688, 1689	Earl Pembroke, at Ryswick.	£1,452,117	£1,452,117	4. 2. 43	4,000,000
1713, 1714	Earl Stanbford, at Utrecht.	£150,000	£150,000	5. 9. 1	4,000,000
1714, 1721	Duke of Somerset, at Madrid.	£6,000,000	£6,000,000	18. 4. 6	6,000,000
1748, 1748	Earl Sandwich, at Aix la Chapelle.	£8,000,000	£8,000,000	7. 2. 0	4,000,000
1761, 1761	Duke of Bedford, at Fontenoy.	£10,000,000	£14,000,000	12. 2. 0	14,000,000
1781, 1781	Mrs. Carville, at Paris.	£10,000,000	£46,000,000	9. 3. 8	From the beneficial effects of the Sinking Fund there had been paid off in the year 1781 to Feb. 1805, the sum of £110,000,000
1805, 1805	Marquis Cornwallis, at Arcis.	£10,000,000	£14,000,000	0. 11. 11
		To Feb. 1805, £14,000,000
		£14,000,000

£14,000,000 the National Debt, Feb. , 1805.

clear profits only, it wd. be sufficient to discharge the whole of the present National Debt; which as £100,000,000 of Stock £400,000,000 sterling wd. nearly accomplish. This might be done by contributing the profits of one month in the year, for 12 years only, and this on nothing else but our clear profits only, all kinds of labour is entirely out of the question. If any should say we are paying our debts of our Ancestors, by paying the national debt, it may with truth & justice be said so we ought, for it is by their labour, since that period, that we have those extra riches which we now enjoy; for before that time they were not in existence to be enjoyed, but handed down gradually, since the above computation was made in 1664. Were this patriotic act to be accomplished, let us see how we shd. stand.—Deduct the then total riches, £250,000,000 from the present property of the nation, £2,700,000,000 there will then remain the enormous Balance of 2,450,000,000. Here is a balance of above 10 to 1 in our favour. It would be therefore equally ungrateful in us to refuse to contribute to discharge the debt as for a rich heir to a great estate refusing to pay a tradesmans bill of £10 contracted by his father, who had left him £120 to pay it with.

Our present taxes are under £40,000,000 yearly, with all the burden of the War, and our clear annual income, and profits £402,000,000, which is above 10 times this demand; therefore, even the whole of our present taxes, National Debt included (if equitably laid) would only be a tenth part of our clear profits; and three fourths of this goes to pay the interest for the National Debt. Between the years 1664 and 1700 our annual taxes were abt. £3,000,000 on the average, and our yearly profits abt. £15,000,000, which is one fifth part. Thus our ancestors were paying a fifth and we only a tenth, with all our National Debt.—[From small note book.]

Sir John Carr

Sir John Carr* was mentioned to me by Westall. He returned from Ireland two or three days ago & dined with Westall yesterday. He went to Ireland abt. a month ago at the Solicitation of several persons of rank, and was introduced to the Duke of Bedford, & recommended to Him to receive some distinction, on which the Duke knighted Him, and used many very obliging expressions.—It is probable He will long receive more solid advantages. Lady Downger Moira told Him she expected His title wd. be followed by something more substantial. His favorable acct. of the Irish nation in His late publication "The Stranger in Ireland", has made Him many friends in that Country, viz: The Ponsonby's†—[Henry] Grattan,—Lord Moira &c. &c.—

He told Westall an Anecdote yesterday. When He was in Prussia in 1804 He visited the Palace at Potsdam, where He was shewn a very fine Chrysal valued at £3000, which made part of a Chandelier. On His admiring it, the person who shewed it said to Him very gravely in French, "It will not be two years before this will be in Paris".—A remarkable proof of the known disposition of many in that Country.—

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† Ancestors of the Earl of Bessborough.

Lord Warwick and a Pleuro

December 19. Battersee [the banker] called having come to town for His daughter. He told me Lord Warwick does not reside at Warwick Castle & probably never will again. His affairs are in the hands of Trustees. His Son, Lord Brooke, on whom the estates are entailed will not do anything while His Father continues to employ Canover as His Agent. His Lordship pressed Battersee much to lend Him £2000 but He had the prudence to decline doing it. His Lordship borrowed £2000 of a person with whom Battersee is acquainted, and such is His inconsiderateness that though He borrowed it for family purposes, being in the greatest need, He that very day gave the whole of it for a picture.

The Marquis of Hertford* lives magnificently at Ragley, 9 miles from Stratford on Avon. When Battersee has dined there with only His Lordship & Lady Hertford & the Chaplain, there has been two full courses & a desert, and 8 servants waiting. He has made Ragley a very fine place. There is so much wood that it is estimated He might cut down £200000 worth but He will not touch a tree. He is considered near in what respects money notwithstanding, & frequently pays His Bills by drafts on Ransom & Mordaunt at two months. He is very attentive & obliging & Lady Hertford particularly so withit. pride.

December 25. In the even'g J. Olley [wine merchant] mentioned to me His intention of no longer keeping a Carriage & Horses.--He

* The second Marquis. His share in forming what is now known as the Wallace Collection was the "Nelly O'Brien" by Reynolds, and Romney's "Mrs. Robinson (Perdita)."

† His second wife, who was the eldest daughter (and co-heir) of Charles Ingram, ninth Viscount Irvine (see Burke's Extinct Peerage).

The third Marquis was their son. When the latter was, in 1827, Envoy-Extraordinary, carrying the Order of the Garter to Nicholas I. of Russia, the magnificence displayed by him made a sensation even in a Court which outshines all in Europe and partakes of Asiatic splendour. It was, however, the fourth Marquis and his heir, Sir Richard Wallace, who collected the bulk of the treasures at Hertford House.

shewed me that the Portrait of a Lady was a copy a year that he had not been painted by him. He said that the original continued to live as well as the copy. He said that he might retain the Portrait of a Lady if he gave up the Portrait of a Lady & have horses whenever he could get them. I strongly recommended to him to adopt the Portrait of a Lady.

Women and Art

December 30. Hoppner speaks to Hoppner in which He spoke freely of Madame Le Brun was a great artist. Mr. Pitt said He had wondered that more women had not studied the Arts. He seemed to be a pursuit so well suited to their disposition. I had before observed that it had been proved by Michel Angelo & Raphael & that it was a study which required the greatest powers. Mr. Pitt mentioned Mrs. Damer. Edridge said, both of her pictures, Her, & the Angelica who had done much better in a more difficult branch of art was but weak compared with masculine execution.*

Mr. Pitt did not then drink more than a glass of water & a glass of drink Coffee & tea but in evening there was also a great dinner which He wd. eat a wing & afterwards drink a glass of this mixture of strong port wine & water. There was nothing particular in His manner & He conversed easily & talked a good deal but there was always something abt. Him that prevented farther approach.

1807

January 2.—Smirke called in the even'g. He did not like Edridge's drawing of me, saying it had a mean & pensive expression. He thought that by Dance much superior to it. He did not have known that Edridge.

January 3.—Smirke spoke with much approbation of my picture of "The Ouse Bridge," & said "I ought leave that to our Monument"—C. Olley said it did not look like a modern picture.

January 8.—Hoppner has established a kind of Concert every Wednesday even'g at His House. Tea, Wine, Sanitation Wine.—

Art Patrons

Woodforde† told me He was born at a Village near Castle Cary in Wiltshire.—That an Uncle of his, an Attorney, having business in the late Mr. Hoare of Stourhead, had carried some drawings which * Madame Vigée Le Brun, eminent painter, Mrs. Damer, the sculptor, and August Kauffman are the women referred to.

† S. Woodforde, R.A. See Index, Vols. II. and III. The R.A. says that Woodforde was born at Castle Cary in Somerset, but Mr. Robert B. H. Woodforde states the artist was born at Andover in Hampshire.

had made, when between 16 & 17 years old, to Mr. Hoare, who immediately offered Him encouragement; allowed Him to draw from pictures at Stourhead, & then sent Him to London to study at the Royal Academy. Mr. Hoare died in a few years, but the Father of the present Sir Richard Hoare, who was the head Partner of the Banking House, and the first Baronet of that name, on succeeding to the fortune of his Cousin, Mr. Hoare of Stourhead, offered to send Woodbude to Italy, and to allow Him from a yr. for 3 years. Woodbude was then 23 or 4 years of age. He went to Italy, & in 2 years His Patron died; but His Son, the present Sir Richard Hoare coming to Rome abt. that period, promised to continue the allowance so long as He, Sir Richard, should remain in Italy, which He did till Woodbude had been absent from England abt. 6 years. He then returned with Sir Richard through Germany to England, & for sometime after the allowance was continued to Him, and until He told Sir Richard that He found Himself getting some money. In all He took from the Hoare Family between £1500 & £2000.

Celebrated Banking House

He told me He had been informed that the profits of the Banking House are estimated at £40,000 a year, and that it is a rule for the Head partner to have half of it, the second partner half of the remainder, and so on in proportion. Sir Richard has four Brothers all of whom are in the Banking House, and a Sister* married to the Honble. Mr. Fortescue. Sir Richard Hoare's estate is estimated at between 9 & £10,000 a year. He is now in His 90th. year, & has only one Child, a Son (Henry, who died in 1836), abt. 22 years of age, who has been at Oxford. Sir Richard is now busily employed on a work on the Antiquities of England, including a very full acct. of the Druids, & Druidical monuments & vestiges. A work of great labour & expense, which, it is expected will not [be] sold at less than £20 a Copy when published.†

The late Mr. Hoare, of Bath, portrait painter, was not a relation of this Family but was much esteemed by the late Mr. Hoare of Stourhead. His eldest daughter married Mr. Hoare, an uncle to the present Sir Richard, who was called "fat Harry." He was a "jovial liver" & died several years ago. His widow now resides at Beckenham in Kent, but has no family.

* Henrietta Anne married first Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, secondly Captain the Hon. Matthew Fortescue, R.N. She died 1841.

† Ancient History of North and South Wiltshire, a vols., royal folio, 1805-19, with 97 plates, published at £40. - a large paper edition £40 10s.

‡ Henry Hoare, second son of Sir Richard Hoare, Knight, married Mary, daughter of William Hoare, R.A., of Bath.

CHAPTER XXI

1802

Schulmaster's

January 8. Yart, a pupil of mine before I came to Haddon [June, 1773] called. He told me he had lost a great deal of which are now living, viz. one Son who is now a Captain in the 1st Regt. of Foot, & is now in the Queen's regiment of [ ] and a daughter, the eldest 2 years old, & a governess at Lady Oxendon's in Kent where she has 80 guineas a year. He has 4 other daughters situated in several capacities. He had another Son, named after my father, who was killed but He died. He spoke much of what concerned his profession, a drawing Master, and sd. the Art in this Country never well advanced owing to the inundation of young men who thrust themselves into & practice superficially for a livelihood. He spoke extensively as the world appears to Him, judging from what He experienced in His power & in His Circle.—

A School at Felling

He has taught drawing at Dr. Nichols's school at Felling 14 years, spoke very highly of the admirable manner in which the school is regulated.—There are now 186 Boys. Dr. Nichols is sixty years of age & has 9 children. He said Dr. Nichols keeps a very strict school, along with the Boys & other Masters at Felling, and at the school of music is during the morning. Yart attends some a week, and has been at other schools.—He taught drawing at Dr. Goodenough's school before * Lady Oxendon's husband was Sir Henry Oxendon, Bart. and was for many years at Dover in Kent from the time of Edward III. Sir Henry Oxendon, Bart. of Oxendon is the present representative of this ancient family.

† Dr. Samuel Goodenough, D.D., 1741-1829, was a member of the House of Commons as Bishop of Carlisle. Dr. Goodenough was married to Miss Pord, daughter of Sir Richard Pord, who has been several times mentioned in the History of the House of Commons, Vol. I, page 174. This lady was the great-grandmother of Mr. Pord, who was a large collection of pictures and drawings by Richard Wilson.

Mr. Pord sends the following rhyme about Dr. Goodenough, who was teaching at the House of Lords:

"'Tis well enough that Goodenough before the Lords should preach,
For sure enough, full bad enough were those he had to teach."

It was William Goodenough, M.D., who married, on June 9, 1770, Anne, eldest daughter of Anthony Addington and sister to Henry Addington, first Viscount Sidmouth. She died June 12, 1806.

that was upon a different Plan. Only 15 Boys were taken & at 150 guineas a year. Three or Four Sons of the Duke of Portland were educated there, but the Duke never paid for them; but He did eventually much better for Dr. Goodenough, by first presenting Him to a living of £400 a year value; then obtaining for Him a Canonry of Windsor; and lastly the Deanery of Rochester; the whole, amounting to between 2 and £3000 a year. He has retired from the school abt. 5 or 6 years & is abt. 67 years of age. A nephew, of his own name, married one of his daughters, and now has the School. Quere, did not Dr. Goodenough marry a Sister of Lord Sidmouth & obtain most of the preferment from Him?

January 11. Nollekens sat to day to Edridge for a drawing a Portrait of Him. He was to attend at Carlton House at 12 o'clock to proceed in making a Model for a Bust of the Prince of Wales. The Prince had already sat once or twice to Him & has commenced great familiarity with Him, calling Him "His friend Nollekens".

Lord & Lady Lucan* are separated. She resides in Cheshire. There are 5 or 6 children of whom His Lordship is very fond. Her infidelity to Her first Husband, Mr. Howard, with His Lordship, renders the obtaining a divorce now impracticable.

Professional versus Amateur

January 12. [John] Landseer called in the even'g. He showed me a copy sheet of printed Lectures, which were read at the Royal Institution. He had proposed to publish them on his own account, but had now sold the first edition of 750 Copies to Longman & Co. of Paternoster Row. He sd. He had written a Preface in which there was matter that might be had apprehended, he liable to action at Law, but He had put it into the hands of Sir Saml. Romilly, the Solicitor Genl. who had returned it with an opinion that it might safely be published. He told me that the new proposed publication, to be called the Director, was first offered to Prince Hoare for Him to have the management of it. Hoare proposed that Professional men should write in it, but to this Mr. Bernard who proposed the undertaking to Him objected, saying that what should be written ought to be by those who looked on rather than by those who practice. Hoare soon after went out of town, and in the County road, from Mr. Bernard a Prospectus of the work, & a * Lady Lucan was Elizabeth Helyar, third daughter of the late Earl of Fauconberg. She was divorced by Act of Parliament in 1793 from Bernard Edward Howard, afterwards Duke of Norfolk.

1 "Lectures on the Art of Engraving delivered at the Royal Institution," published London, 1807, 6s. The notes accompanying this work severely commented on Josiah Boydell and on a pamphlet which Boydell had issued. The lectures at the R.I. were cut short by John Landseer's dismissal on the ground of disparaging allusion to Alderman John Boydell. John Landseer (A.R.A.) was the father of Sir Edwin Landseer, R.A.

1 Afterwards Sir Thomas Bernard. See Index, Vols. II. and III.

signification that He often asked of those who came to Him upon determined to publish a weekly tract, "The Christian's Weekly," in view of support from Kueh, Chae So, and others. The tract was published by him who agreed to it.

Dr. Monroe's Second Son, a worthy & successful young man, attends Royal Academy regularly. He had been the first choice of the Navy, but the regulations of the Navy precluded it. Dr. Monroe has 5 Sons and one Daughter.

* Dr. Monte was "Israel's" side-gatekeeper. In 1791, he won a premium of £100 for his "The Art of Making a Good Promise," he died in 1814.

CHAPTER XXII

1867

Hoppner and Lawrence

January 19. Lane called, was with Hoppner yesterday, who sd. did not before know that He had an engagement with Lawrence, but that He worked for Him occasionally, offered Him 20 guineas for 8 copies of Mr. Pitts portrait, & signified that He might further employ Him. Lane took time to consider the offer, but now I evidently saw He was inclined to leave Lawrence, having no hope that matters wd. go on better, said getting rid of it caused His illness the last spring. I then told Him Lawrence ought to know what had passed. He said He wd. go to Him, He did & returned much heated, sd. that on his communicating to Lawrence that He had been with Hoppner, He bowed & left him.

Lawrence I called on. He was much agitated abt. Lane's business, I told Him what Lane had said. He asserted me that Lane declared He should leave Him, and that it was in consequence of that that He bowed & left Him. I represented to him how much the necessity of arrangement increased.

Christian Humility

January 20. Wilson* told me that He had frequently met Dr. Horsley, the late Bishop of St. Asaph,† at Mr. Palmer's, Brother in Mrs. Horsley the Bishop's second wife, & partner with Wilson in a House of India Agency. He always found the Bishop proud, holding commercial men at great distance, a man not to be approached by persons of that degree, carrying Himself very high—no semblance of Christian Humility. The period at which He died was unlucky. He had insured His life for the benefit of His Creditors, being much in debt, and the Policy expired upon the day on which he was taken ill, Tuesday, and He died on the Friday following, so that His Creditors derived no benefit from his insurance, but claiming upon His property left it is supposed there will be about 15 shillings in the pound for them.

* Lemock P. Wilson, of 7, Frederick Place, Old Jewry, and Copersale Grove, Epping, was fourth officer on the Clashana (H. E. I. Co.) in 1771-72, and ended his seafaring career as captain of the Exeter in 1798-99. Afterwards he acted as an East India Agent, tendering for the Cambridge, 708 tons, on November 9, 1815, for example. See Vols. II. and III.

† Dr. Samuel Horsley. See Index, Vol. I., II. and III.

The Bishoprick of St. Asaph is about £1000 a year. The Bishop left only one Child, a Son, abt 28 or 30 years of age, to whom He had been enabled to give Church preferment to the amount of abt £1500 a year, but He has been a very dissipated man, & is indebted to the amount of £1500. The Church preferment is requested, & a plan has been formed by which in 12 years the debts will be paid & He will again be in possession of His Income. When He obtained His valuable preferment, He began to build upon it upon a very large & expensive scale which has been stopped.

Army Apothecary

Wilson told me that John Calvert Clarke is a Bankrupt. He was, with His partners, in the Gazette on Saturday last. He had been Apothecary to the Army, that is, had provided the hospitals for the Army, under the order of Mr. [redacted], by which patronage, though his disposition had led Him into speculations, He had acquired £50,000. When peace was made in 1782, He concluding that the Army would be reduced, & the demand for Medicines become much less, was induced by hope of advantage to connect Himself with two persons, Merchants in the City, and advanced to them for His share in the concern £25,000.—The whole business was transacted by them, for He was otherwise too much occupied to examine their proceedings, and though something of difficulty might have been mentioned to him yet the real situation of the concern was withheld from Him till it could not be concealed from Him that a Bankruptcy must take place, & that in 10 years He lost his whole fortune. He has by His second wife four Children, & by His former wife one child.

Rev. Sydney Smith

Mr. Mady* spoke of the good luck of Sydney Smith,† a popular preacher, who having been introduced at Holland House, to gain the regards of Lady Holland that lately one day when He dined there in company with the Lord Chancellor Evershaw &c. &c. when the gentlemen went up to tea, Lady Holland addressed the Chancellor, & said He must make Her a promise. He replied, by desiring to know Her request, she said It was for the first time He had to give away, that it should be to Mr. Sydney Smith.—The Chancellor wd. it should be so, & the next day a living of £600 a year becoming vacant He presented Smith to it, overlooking, as Mr. Mady said, many old and most respectable claimants to His favor.—

Dr. Holland a Physician, who married one of Lord Evershaw's daughters was spoke of.—When Lord Evershaw was made Chancellor He said to Holland—"Leave yr. Physick & turn to Divinity." Holland understood the hint,—took orders, & has already two or three livings.

* Chaplain at St. James's Church.

† The Rev. Sydney Smith. See Index, Vol. III.

CHAPTER XXIII

1807

Lord Warwick's Protégé

January 23, [Thomson, R.A. spoke of] an Artist of the name of Wallis,* a Landscape painter, who is lately returned from Italy. He at his outset recd. assistance from Lord Warwick. While at Rome when the French first took possession of it, He behaved to the English Artists who were there in an infamous manner, having acted as a Spy upon them, & given such reports of them to the French Commanders as were intended to bring them into difficulties. Duppa, Thomson, Head, &c. &c. were there at the time. Thomson wishing to proceed to Germany was desirous of obtaining a Passport from the French Commander in Chief, General St. Cyr, & at length obtained admission to Him. On his requesting the General's signature to a Passport, the General sd. it wd. not be required, the general order He had recd. to leave Rome wd. do; but on Thomson repeating His request, saying it might prevent future difficulties, the General proceeded to sign it, & while looking at the paper, smiled, & asked "Do you know Mr. Wallis," Thomson acknowledged that He did, as much as He would know of such a man. The General continued smiling & said "A clever man." This hint of General St. Cyr perfectly corresponded with what the Artists had heard of Wallis's conduct. General St. Cyr was a man of fine appearance & elegant manners, quite a man of rank, abt. 35 years of age.

Detestable Conduct

In so great detestation was Wallis held, that one day coming into the English Coffee House at Rome, accompanied by Gandy,[ all who were * John William Wallis was a Scottish landscape painter, who about 1812 became a picture dealer. Duppa and Head were artists. See Vol. II. and III.

† Joseph Michael Gandy (1771-1841), who was a pupil of James Wyatt, the architect, won, in 1799, the gold medal at the Royal Academy Schools for a design of a triumphal arch, and while in Rome, was awarded the Pope's medal in the first class for architecture.

Elected an A.R.A. in 1811, he became associated with Sir John Soane, and his brilliant talents were "chiefly employed on works for which Soane got the chief credit," says Lionel Cust in the Dictionary of National Biography. Gandy was of an impracticable nature, and his life, saddened by disappointment and poverty, ended in insanity, it is said. He died in December, 1841, leaving a son, Thomas Gandy, portrait painter. Joseph published two works, one in 1794, "Drawings for Cottages, Cottage Farms, &c.," and "The Rural Architect." Drawings by him are to be seen at the Soane Museum.

present immediately rose & retired from that room in which they were together & ordered their Coffee to be brought to them.

Wallis had married an English Woman who came to bed Him to Room where His ill behaviour to Her, it was believed, caused Her to lose Her senses. He availed Himself of the Grief of Her relatives & friends at that time established by the French, & applied to them, to take a Roman woman to Wife, having, in the French manner, seduced Her lawful wife. Thompson sd. that His conduct altogether lost Him much respect, & that Him to be an object of execration to all that knew Him.

At Hoppers a few nights ago He was spoken of as being returned from England and Remagle Junr., who had known him at Rome, & He would inform the government of his Designs and his views on the danger of his principles in order to have him removed, but that as He was an Englishman, it was shewn cannot be, but Hoppers sd. that some particulars were given to Him, he would take care they should be in a convenient place where they ought to be. Thompson sd. He has no views on His profession, and a manner that may enable Him to connect Himself with persons who ought to be guarded against Him & He hoped it is otherwise, be aware of Him.

Wallis has got into acquaintance with Becket. He is between 40 & 50 years of age.

Smirke calling in the even'g. A few days ago Wallis called on Him & sent up His name "Mr. Wallis from Italy." He was introduced to Smirke, who found Him a talking man, who spoke of His first Italy Mount Cassell, &c. &c. of Italy as the only country for an artist in England not a country to paint in; seemed to hold Dutch Art very cheap;—sd. Architecture had been his particular study, that He had seen one specimen of Wyatt, which was so bad, that it would be difficult for an Architect of good taste to do anything so ill, though He were to attempt it with that view. Smirke sd. His way of speaking very forbidding kind.

Boydell and Buntings

January 24.—Boydell called & declined purchasing Lawrence's plate of the Bishop of Gloucester; but offered to sell the prints from it upon a Commission of 20 pr. cent, and that Lawrence should receive 80 guineas, the price He had paid for it, out of the net money due to that amount, the expenses of paper & printing &c. having been deducted; and that after 80 guineas had been paid, the Plate should then be considered to be their joint property, for which Boydell wd. take up Himself the printing & publishing; but all expenses to be paid before any profits shd. be divided.—He sd. He has established a communication with Branscomb's and other principal Lottery Officers, by means of which He should be able very much to forward the sale of whatever He might publish. He gives to the Lottery Officers with which He engages Seven & a Half per cent. upon all they sell for Him. They consequence are able to allow a profit to the Country Offices, for promoting the sale in every part of the Kingdom.

J. Oille called in the evening & informed me that a letter was this day recd. by Sir Gilbert Heathcote while sitting as Chairman of a Committee of the House of Commons, from Lord Howick, informing Him that His Lordship had recd. a letter from Lord Hutchinson stating that the Russians had defeated the French, that the latter had lost 4,000 men. The Committee gave three cheers, & Mr. Parker, a member of it, carried the news into the City where it produced a great effect. All the News Offices, this evening, have the information in large Characters. J. Oille also met a Mr. Noble who told Him that Mr. Freemanle, a Lord of the Treasury, had just mentioned to Him, that the Austrians had declared War against the French.*

January 26. Mr. Phipps dined at. The victory of the Russians was much talked of. We said "in forming His judgment on such reports He looked to dates, & to positions. As to Buonaparte returning to Warsaw from Osternike [Osterdenka], what wd. He have done had He defeated the Russians, He must go somewhere for Winter quarters & accumulation," inferring that He had did not prove that He had been beaten. Our eyes is generally shown by our manner of receiving information.

[The Herald contained an Official Note which was on the 24th (Saturday) transmitted by Lord Howick to the Lord Chancellor, the sitting Committee of the House of Commons and the merchants at Lloyd's.

Bulletin, Jan'y. 24, 1807.

"Lord Howick had just recd. intelligence, of the truth of which He has not the least doubt, that an action was fought between the Russians and French, on the 27th of Decr. last, which continued three successive days, and on the last of which the French retreated, with the loss of 4,000 dead, & eighty pieces of Cannon. The Scene of action was at Osternike [Osterdenka], sixty or seventy miles from Warsaw. The enemy made this retreat to within eight miles of that place, and were also cutting their elves at Magdeburgh" (Marienburg). Small note book.]

A Great Project

January 27. We looked at Hogarth's Works. Heydell pays an annuity of £250 a year for this property to a woman's who is now upwards of 70 to whom, Mrs. Hogarth left the plates. This annuity has been paid upwards of 20 years. Heydell said that the work now sells very * Lord Howick, afterwards second Earl Grey. Lord Hutchinson, afterwards second Earl of Danburghmore. See entry under February 20th, and Index, Vols. II. and III.

† The Hon. Augustus Phipps. See Index, Vols. II. and III.

‡ Josiah Heydell. See Index, Vols. I, II and III.

§ Mrs. Mary Lewis, cousin of Hogarth's wife, who was a daughter of Sir James Thornhill, the historical painter and Hogarth's master, and made a runaway marriage with Hogarth.

well, I understood Him on an average 40 sets in a year. He said that the Plates had never been retouched.

He read to me a grand plan for a most extensive publication which might be called, I said, "The History of the world Exemplified." Series of pictures to be painted of subjects corresponding with the Old Testament, and proceeding in Clauses, through the Histories of all nations forming together a whole, & each part being a complete work of itself, this could be carried into execution by the sale of Tickets at Forty or Forty Thousand pounds, and old Alexander Davison,* wishing to distinguish himself as a Patron of the arts he engaged to subscribe that sum to carry on the work in conjunction with me. He had no doubt that the sale of 400 sets wd. pay all expenses.

Life and Liberty Safeguarded

He spoke of the manner in which Judgments are now carried on the Judges. They do not wait till the House is called together, but in the evening before have documents of the matters proposed before them laid under their consideration; by which means they come more fully prepared by a knowledge of the nature of each case.† I said, Alexander told Mr. Lloydell that the late Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, was occupied, in Term time, from 10 o'clock in the morning till 12 o'clock at night, in reading papers respecting what was to come on the following day; also obliged to be up by six of the clock in the morning to prepare to go to the Court.—The consequence of so much previous consideration that the probability of the issue of each trial is pretty well known before it comes on.—

Lloydell sd. that the present Recorder of the City had told Him, That when (he) carries up a list of Cases to the King in Council for his decision, the whole matter of a trial is gone into, being read by H. & questions are asked sometimes by the King, & sometimes by the Lords of Council, such as whether such or such questions were put to Witnesses to throw more light upon the matter. Thus guarded for the life & liberty of a British subject.

At a trial at the Old Bailey, an Alderman of London, who was a stranger to a witness; but He must do it through the Judge. The Lord of Council, might have made a more distinguished figure in the Law.† He has done, having sufficient ability, but He is too polite to glorise at His outset, owed much to Fielding, who being too busy to do the business which was offered to Him, turned it over to Clayton.

* Alexander Davison. See Vol. III., page 206.

† See Index, Vols. I. and III.

1. William Fielding, oldest son of Henry Fielding, the novelist, was born February 25, 1748. He practised on the Northern Circuit, but, as suggested by the text, had little business. He became a Magistrate for Westminster, and died in 1805. His father, he had considerable conversational skill, caught on a good thing, and told to the taste of the younger barristers on circuit. Sir John Fielding the celebrated Street Magistrate, was his uncle.

[January 28. Miss Lee's* new Play of "Assiguation" performed the first time at Drury Lane Theatre and was disapproved and withdrawn. From small note book.]

January 29. Lord Harcourt called, in one of the Royal Coaches, but I declined being at home, as I was basily engaged.

J. Olley's I dined at. Capt. Thomson spoke of the vast expence incurred in forming Military defences at Dover & in its vicinity. The whole is under the direction of General Taxis, and 3 or 400 men, besides Officers are daily employed for that purpose, & as new ideas occur, works of great labour are done away and another plan adopted. It is also said it wd. require 40,000 men to defend the works, as they are very extensive. All that can be said is that the money laid out is among ourselves. After tea a Courier was purchased which raised our spirits by informing us that the 40th. or 50th. Bulletin of the French Army had been recd. by our government, in which they allow that they had on the 27th. of Decr. 7000 men killed and 19 Generals.

* See Vol. III., page 76n.

CHAPTER XXIV

1797

Shes and Hoppner

February 1. Shes (R.V.) is separated from all parties in the Academy. He no longer has access, even with Hoppner, & it is understood by Woodforde that it is his long standing objection to the conduct of Hoppner, who being a member of the Academy sent many pictures for Exhibition in an unfashionable style, & is doing himself having access to the Academy room, hunted them there, which Shes says, is, virtually, as much against the members of the Academy as the admission of Pictures intended for Exhibition, as it would be keep them back beyond the true limits and therefore them in.

Sir Joshua and the Bishop

February 2. West said He had examined the Minutes of the Academy and also recollected circumstances respecting the History of the Bishop of Limerick, (then Dr. Barnard, Bishop of Killaloe) Chaplain to the Royal Academy. It was understood that the Bishop of Killaloe wrote to West on the subject. Sir Joshua to him He died before it being only four months before His death, the Bishop gave a second letter of Resignation to the Royal Academy, which He did the 10th. of November 1791; but proceeds to say that West informing Him that the Bishop of Killaloe would be glad to accept the Office of Chaplain to the Royal Academy, provided it could be procured [ascertained] by private application that it would be agreeable to His Majesty.—Sir Joshua desired the Bishop to write to Him to that effect which He did, & West, happening then to be at Windsor, Sir Joshua wrote to Him & enclosed the Bishop's letter, & desired Him to deliver His Majesty's sentiments upon it. West immediately carried both letters to the King, who entirely approved the proposal & added that "It would begin with an Irish Bishop; but He might perhaps be dissuaded by an English Bishop."—West having signified to Sir Joshua, His Majesty's approbation, at a general meeting on the 10th of November, the day on which Sir Joshua's letter of Resignation was read, Mr. West as Deputy President, at Sir Joshua's request, & proposed the Bishop children and adopted as a son, and in the same manner the appointment &c. also probably being an addition of respectable company on those occasions. He approved it.

The Duke of Bronte

[February 7. Yesterday, Earl Nelson was presented to His Majesty by Lord Grenville, upon His receiving the grant of a Pension and estate, and His Majestys permission to accept the title of Duke of Bronte, in Sicily, and also Viscount Trafalgar, (eldest Son of Earl Nelson) upon his assuming that title, instead of his former one of Viscount Merton. His Lordship, as a Knight of the order of St. Joachim, wore the Ribbon & Star of that Order, which lately adorned His Uncle, the immortal Nelson, the Hero of the Nile; and the Sword presented by His Majesty the King of Naples, to that ever to be lamented Chief. We understand that the Diamonds in the mounting of the Sword are of many thousand pounds value, and that it is the most brilliant ever exhibited at this Court, having been a present from His most Catholic Majesty the King of Spain, to His Son, the King of Naples.

Messrs. Barker & Bonnier arrived in town with dispatches for government from Russia. They left Petersburg the 8th, of January, at which time great rejoicings prevailed there on account of the decisive victory gained by General Bennigsen over Buonaparte (in Poland, near Poltusk), on the Narew on the 26th, of December. The total loss of the French as stated in the account of the Russian Commander in Chief to his Court was 4,000 killed, 6000 prisoners, and 80 pieces of cannon: that of the Russians from 1500 to 2000. A masked battery of the Russians swept away 3000 of the enemy. This was the battle in which the French in their 47th bulletin, stated that the Russians were so completely routed & dispersed, that they could never again make head, as an Army, & that therefore the French had nothing to do but to go into winter cantonnments. {From small note book.}

A Book Collector

February 13. Waldron, the Shoemaker, who resided formerly in Basinghall Street died the last day of April last at the age of 65. - He left a widow, & one child only, a daughter, who is married, & has children. He died possessed of property which will produce near £1000 a year. His father had saved some money, - which was inherited by Waldron & another Son, who also died & Waldron was His Wife. He married a woman who had abt. £1200. She died, & He married Her Sister who had abt. the same Sum. His passion was for collecting Rocks & Minerals and the Collection He made is estimate'd at £1000 being a very choice one. It is now to be sold by King & Co.

Captain Thomas Manby

February 14. Lawrence I passed the day & evening with looking over accounts & preparing them. It was expected the P<sup>rs</sup> would have gone to Court on Thursday last in consequence of what she had heard from the Commissioners; but it now appears that the P<sup>rs</sup> have come forward upon the foundation of something which happened at High Cliff near Ramsgate or Broadstairs. It is said a Condemner has given evidence of having seen Capt<sup>n</sup> Manby* go into the House unseasonable Hours. Lord St Vincent was examined by the Commissioners & said He had, at the time the P<sup>rs</sup> was at High Cliff, a letter stating that she understood [the] residence there wd. be necessary until a Ship was stationed near that place, & she desired a frigate might be sent & named the Agamemnon, Capt<sup>n</sup> Manby, which was accordingly ordered thither. The P<sup>rs</sup> now speaks of Capt<sup>n</sup> Manby with great contempt, which some think is not prudent.

Authors and Publishers

February 15. Baker† I dined at Richard Duppa's, explained much the conduct of Robinsons, the Booksellers, in Paris respecting him, on account of their conduct respecting the publication of "The Fall of the Power."‡ The first edition was 2000, and the books were sold at 2s for this edition they paid him £30. but a second edition was published 750, and for this they brought him in Revenge at Geneva. He consulted with them and they told him that they had considered him a gentleman & that He did not look for profit.

A Mr. Beresford is the Author of a book entitled "The Masterpiece of human life" which has sold prodigiously, so as to produce to Beresford a profit of £1000.§

* Afterwards Rear-Admiral Thomas Manby. See Vol. III., page 27, and next.

† George Baker. See Vols. I, II, and III.

‡ Richard Duppa. See Vol. II., page 111. "A Journal of the most remarkable Occurrences that took place in Rome upon the subversion of the Papal temporal Government in 1798."

§ James Beresford (1764-1840), miscellaneous writer, pseudonym of Richard Beresford, was born at Upham, Hants. Educated at Charterhouse and Merton College, Oxford, became rector of Kibworth Beauchamp, Leicestershire, in 1812, and died there on September 29, 1840. The full title of the work was "The Masterpiece of human life, or Last Orations of Timothy Tossy, and Samuel Sensitive, with a few supplementary of Mrs. Tossy," London, 1806-7. It was praised by Sir Walter Scott, and ran through several editions. Beresford was author also of poetical translations and religious tracts.

Duppa died a few days ago with P[er]cy H[ear]e at Murray's the Bookseller, in Fleet Street. Cumberland, the Author was there & read a paper which He had written on Plays something in the manner of Johnson's lives of the Poets. It was very well written & H[ear]e urged Him to let it be published in His new periodical work, "The Artist." H[ear]e told Duppa that He had a very able paper on "Knight's principles of Taste", (by Hoppner).

It appeared at the time of Mr. Pitts death that several of his friends had advanced money to Him, viz: Lord Camden, C. Lang, J. Smith, the Bishop of Lincoln, & two or three others £2000 each. After Mr. Pitts death the Bishop was the only one who claimed His money.

CHAPTER XXX

1832

Catalani at the Opera

February 16. Lawrence dined with me & we proceeded in investigation of his business. He was then informed that Mr. Comrie, an Attorney, called from Taylor of the Opera House, to de- Lawrence to paint a picture of Madame Catalani. The picture & engraving profits to the Opera House than were ever before known, the rent of the House, exclusive of Boxes, is up to an average of between 6 & 7 a night. These great receipts will enable Taylor to the other People to clear off their incumbrances. Catalani is engaged for 25 or 30 for Season. Mrs. Billington had 224 or 250, they were borrowed from by Gould who engaged Her, and told Her that Mr. Broughton had more than £1000, from which she concluded her picture & engraving than that sum. She is very much attached to Her Husband, & can be approached by those who would offer to separate from Her.

Lord Abercorn has been in Ireland, & has been so long that a number of years have returned to Him that He has not. He has taken £1 a year, making His rent roll £100,000 a year.

Wordsworth

February 17. - Dance I dined with. We had much conversation on Poetry. Smirke expressed Himself strongly on the great worth of Wordsworth's poetry, and said while reading some of his poetical productions He had been quite overcome. Dance also appeared to be delighted with them. Both scouted mere verbiage, which is not admired. Dance sd. that alone is true poetry, which expresses the feelings of the mind of the author so as to cause the heart of the reader to vibrate in unison with those feelings. He said that He had been affected by the works of Dryden, so as to acknowledge Him to be a great poet.

Smirke on Sunday last dined in company with Roxton, the Historian & was much pleased with Him. He said Roxton had the simplicity farmer, has much anecdote, & no affectation. Roscoe spoke of Whitbread's speech on the late Negotiation for Peace with France, with great admiration. He said Whitbread seemed while delivering it to be inspired. Roscoe seemed entirely to concur with Whitbread that the French government was really in earnest to make peace, & that it wd. have been prudent to have agreed to it.

February 18. Goudy called to ask in what manner He could apply to the Royal Academy for the situation of teacher of perspective in the Royal Academy. I told Him His application should be made by a letter addressed to the President & Council. He told me He practised perspective in a way different from that which had been hitherto taught. Instead of working upon a straight line, He works upon a curved line by which He avoids the error of lengthening the lines falsely toward the ends of the pictures.

Society of Antiquaries

February 19. Society of Antiquaries I went to it being the night appointed for the Election of a Secretary in the room of the Revd. Mr. Brand. Lord Leicester, President, in the Chair.

The Candidates were:

Nicholas Carlisle Esq. brother to the Surgeon.

The Revd. Mr. Dibdin, Lecturer at the British Institution.

The Revd. Thos. Cox.

The room was extremely crowded. Mr. Ray of the Temple spoke before the balloting began against the practice of having lists secured with the name of a Candidate prepared to be delivered to Members. Lord Leicester rose, & said that, in the conduct of the business there was no favor or partiality; but He avowed that He had espoused the opinion of those gentlemen in the Society who were desirous of placing as Secretary Mr. Carlisle, a gentleman perfectly competent to the duties of the Office, and this He did as He did, ever be disposed to support the opinion of those gentlemen who had for Twenty Three years, given Him their support in the situation He now filled. Another person spoke and seemed to disapprove this open avowal of His Lordship. Lysons in a low tone said, the custom of securing lists for delivery was usual, & that unsecured lists might be had.

The Ballot was then begun. Scrutinizers having been appointed. Each Member delivered a List of all the Members, having made a score under the name of His favorite candidate. And also a piece of paper on which He had written the name. The former (the List) was to make Him Secretary, the latter, to make Him a Member of the Council.

I was among the first who voted & got home at 20 minutes past 8. The whole of the Council, except Willis, had publicly declared for N. Carlisle. I remained at home after returning from the Society & before Eleven Daniell sent a note to me which He had just recd. from A. Carlisle stating that the Election was over, and the result as follows,--viz.:

N. Carlisle 125. Dibdin 72. Cox 25.

[Commodore Sir Home Popham* arrived in London on Tuesday evening last from Weymouth. He sailed in the Royal Plate Dece, 270 tons, and made the quickest passage ever known to us there, viz: in 12 days. Admiral Sterling, who my uncle I have known there on the 21st of Decr. but witht. any troops or transports whatever. From my note-book.]

The Banker and Sir Joshua

February 20. Lawrence called and informed me that He had recd. a letter from Mr. Coutts last night & that same night had seen Him and he desired I might call upon Him to day, respecting His business, which Mr. Coutts agreed to. At 4 o'clock having prepared a statement and plan, I went to Mr. Coutts & sat with Him more than Half an Hour. I was much pleased with His manner. He worked success to the plan, & said He shd. do nothing to oppose it. He told me He was acquainted wth Sir Joshua Reynolds while He was pupil to H. G. He said wh<sup>en</sup> Sir Joshua began to get money He did not know what to do with it being totally ignorant of such matters, which having communicated to acquaintance of His who resided in the Temple, this friend desired have his money & He would settle it for Him in the public funds. Sometime passed before Mr. Coutts was informed by Sir Joshua how He was proceeding; but having heard it, He desired Sir Joshua wd. ask His friend in what Fund the money had been placed. The answer Sir Joshua brought to Mr. Coutts was that it was in the Long Annuities. Upon this Mr. Coutts applied at the Bank to see how it stood, but was there told that no money was in that fund in the name of Sir Joshua. Mr. Coutts reported that to Sir Joshua & urged Him to ask His friend about it, who still persisted that the money was vested in the Long Annuities. Sir Joshua desired Him to converse with Mr. Coutts abt. & they met, & after some time his friend acknowledged that He had not laid the money out in the Funds, but had employed it in some speculations, but that made no difference as the money was safe. This unprincipled conduct gave cause of alarm, but by proper management the money was gradually recovered.

Mr. Coutts's manner was remarkably soft & humane. He reminded me of Mr. Lock & of Gilpin [R.A.]. He said He had never known an instance of a person getting into difficulties about money matters witht. His principles being vitiated by His necessities. Indeed, He added, It originated in some want of principle, as those of strict principles are too guarded & prudent in their conduct not to keep clear falling into such a situation. I observed that Mr. Coutts read & wrote witht. spectacles, though He must be at least, from the above acct. 80 years of age.

* See Index, Vol. III.

100-100000

100-100000

CHAPTER XXVI

1807

Capture of Curaçoa

[February 23. An Extraordinary Gazette was published to day giving the leading particulars of the important capture of the Dutch Island of Curaçoa, in the West Indies on the first of January last, by four frigates under the orders of Captain Brisbane of the Arethusa. The other frigates, The Latona, Anson, and Figuard. The Tower & Park guns were fired on Saturday afternoon.

An Order of Council was issued that all British Vessels which have cleared out from any of the Ports of the United Kingdom to Buenos Ayres & the River Plate, may proceed to any Port in St. Domingo not occupied by the French or Spaniards, there to dispose of their cargoes, & to take produce in return, or to tranship Cargoes to Neutral vessels, & to send the same for sale to any hostile Colony, & to bring back returns on board such Neutral Vessels to any port of the United Kingdom.

Sir George Yonge appointed Governor of Tortola.—From small note book.]

Whiggery

February 25. Sir Francis Baring said it was very true that a whiggery was played off upon His friend the late Marquiss of Lansdowne. A letter written imitating Mr. Pitt's hand was sent to the Marquiss as from Mr. Pitt requesting an interview with His Lordship signifying that it was upon government business. To this His Lordship wrote an answer to Mr. Pitt expressing His readiness to wait upon him at such time as might best suit him, and adding a compliment that the weight of government at that time rested upon Him who was best able to bear it.—On receiving this unexpected letter Mr. Pitt did not write an answer, but politely called on Lord Lansdowne, & on accosting Him, told His Lordship that some persons had endeavoured to make themselves merry at their expense.—

Lawrence told me that His Sister estimated the expences of Her Father's family while he lived in Greek Street to be £800 a year.

February 28.—Sheridan has promised Prince Hoare to furnish Him with an Essay on Novel writing which He wrote a long time since & intended to have prefixed it to an edition of Dr. Mother's Novel (Sidney Biddulph.* Northcote attended the two Lectures read by him at the Royal Academy on the 16th & 17th inst. The introduction to the first Lecture Northcote thought to be much Urchin in a & the malignity which was in it made it more interesting than what followed in the after parts of his Lecture. He treated of a subject which He cannot do but by adopting the opinions of others. Black read, "That I have whole leaves out of Lurch." The introduction seems to have turned much upon the want of patronage in this Country.

Commerce and Landed Interest

March 1. Sir Martin Folkes called once a week twice. We talk of [Admiral] Sir Home Popham's case. His trial being depending, I noticed the impropriety of Sir Home in assuming the authority of Secretary of State in writing letters to the principal Commercial countries after the Capture of Buenos Ayres. His sentiments were not favourable to any possibility of Sir Home's case, unless He could show that he had official orders. For his own part He said, He could hardly wish that we should occupy the Spanish possessions in the South America; He said that were they added to what is now possessed in India, it would increase the weight of the Commercial interest to such a degree as to overwhelm the landed interest of this Country.

He mentioned the great proportion of Commercial men who have obtained Seats in the House of Commons, who with all their wealth, little of Taxes, in comparison with what falls upon Country gentlemen. He said they who had 4 or £5000 a year, & who formerly enjoyed the comfort of independence & ease now go on with difficulties. Upon the burden really falls.

I mentioned Mr. Whitbread's plan for educating & maintaining poor. He appeared to think it a doubtful matter, but He said Whitbread had gone about in the most prudent way, by getting first by soliciting the opinions of the Magistrates throughout the Kingdom.

Flaxman Fully Employed

March 2.—Flaxman I called on to see his model for Sir John Reynolds's monument, which having modelled in brass, He is modelling one half the size of the marble figure which is to be about 6 feet. Metcalfe, Malone & Lady Thomond have finally approved the design.—He told me that He had been in Competition with Hazen.

* Frances Chamberlaine, wife of Thomas Sheridan. Her novel, "Miss Biddulph," was published by Richardson in 1761, and met with high approval. The 2<sup>d</sup> part was issued in 1767.

† See entry under March 11.

Monument to Lord Cornwallis* to be erected at Bombay by a subscription made at that place. The Commission was sent to Lord Teignmouth &c. who referred the Models of Flaxman & Bacon to The Marquis of Stafford Charles Long Lord Dartmouth Henry Banks & R. Payne Knight, who have decided in favor of Bacon, saying it was a more magnificent design than Flaxman's. Flaxman is to have a compensation for the trouble He has taken & Lord Teignmouth &c. have informed Him that He shall execute a Cenotaph.

He expressed himself to be very easy about the matter, & said, he so if He should not obtain one of the government monuments, saying that He was fully employed, and thought more abt. exelling in his art than of anything else. He sd. Bacon's designs for the public monuments were not to his taste, but He thought there were many ingenious parts in Westmacott's designs, & He also saw merit in those by Rossi.

He told me the Students of the Academy felt under such obligation to Fineli that they had resolved to present Him with a Silver Cup as a memorial of it, & had already subscribed £36 towards it meaning to make it £40. The subscription had a guinea each. Wilkie had called on him to request He wd. make a design for it, which He promised to do, and desired to be admitted to subscribe His guinea, as having been a Student, declining their offer to remunerate him for his trouble. He sd. Fineli by his attention to the Students has extremely advanced them in drawing.

Hogarth and Barry

He regretted that Fineli was not continued Professor of Painting & the more so from having heard Opie's 2nd. Lecture on Monday last, which He sd. had a Democratic spirit in it, & was charged with complaint of want of patronage, instancing Hogarth & Barry as great geniuses, neglected. In the latter instance He observed "That the public wd. bury Him who they had starved." This He sd. was a false statement of the matter. The public by a subscription had acted generously to Barry & He by His offensive manners brought all the dislike upon Him which He experienced. Hogarth peevishly dedicated His print of the March to Fineli to the King of Prussia, because the picture had not been approved by the Monarch of his own country, but it was not likely to be so. How sd. the King he supposed to approve a picture which represented those troops who were going out to defend His Crown.

* Mr. S. M. Edwards, The Indian Annals, Metairie, Chislehurst, writes: It is of interest to recall the fact that Sir James Mackintosh, Recorder of Bombay, originally wrote to Flaxman, asking him to undertake the work.

Bacon's statue, which is 6ft. 10in. in height, was erected on the old Cotton Green, and now stands in the modern Uphillstone Circle Garden, opposite the Town Hall, Bombay. It has long been regarded with veneration by a section of the lower classes; and Hindu constables of the Bombay City Police, if summoned to the head police office for reprimand or punishment, are accustomed to worship the statue, offering it flowers and a cocoanut, in the hope of securing thereby a light punishment (see the "Bombay City Gazetteer," Vol. III.).

against Rebellion, in so disgraced a manner, licentious, disorderly with obscenity.*

*"The March of the Guards to Scotland on the year 1746," is usually called "The March to Finchley." This famous painting is generally ascribed to Christopher Smart "Student," also by Hogarth's friend, John Wootton. George II. was incensed with Hogarth for burlesquing the "gentlemen of the Army," and, at an early hour, wrote that he should be picketed for his offence. The artist, on his part, was so angry that he mounted print to the King of Prussia, as "an Engraving of Liberty and Justice," and the King Monarch, highly gratified by the humorous representation, made it being acknowledged. When Hogarth sold his works he lettered in 1747, it was for "What the 'Fortunate' was Number 1941, which belongs to the said [Hogarth]. His agent and that same Sir (April 31) Mr. Hogarth delivered the Picture to the Government." The painting still hangs in the Guildford Street Institution. Sullivan's well known print after it was published December, 1750.

CHAPTER XXVII

1807

Boxer and Duellist

March 2. Carlisle ed. He was one of the Snuggons who attended Mr. Richardson when at the end of the last Summer (September 21, 1806) was wounded in a duel with Baron Humpesch.\* He was shot through the body, the ball passing through the Liver, Lungs, & grazing some of the Vessels near the heart. On receiving the wound, He fell, and was convulsed, & for an hour appeared to be dying, but afterwards recovered His senses, & was brought to His lodgings in Parliament street & was able to walk from the carriage to an apartment on the ground floor, & to assist in undressing Himself. His constitution being very strong He was able to endure the vast evacuations that could alone save his life by preventing inflammation & fever, no had suppuration taken place His death wd. have been certain. In 13 days 246 ounces of blood were taken from his arm, besides 3 quarts of blood from his side. He was reduced to the lowest state possible witht. extinguishing life. For the 5 first days He had no sustenance allowed Him, & then only a piece of toasted bread which had been steeped in water. Some female friends at one period having observed Him to be very low, gave him  $\frac{1}{2}$  a pint of milk porridge, which soon raised His pulse from 76 to 120 and it became necessary to bleed Him twice to prevent the worst consequences.

At last He recovered & is now quite well & may live 30 years longer, but He is an intemperate man, and associating with Officers at Woolwich has since been twice drunk, & been as many times bled. He is a younger brother of a person of good fortune in Kent, & has an estate of His own.

He is a Boxer; and Humpesch is a Duellist. In the quarrel between them in a street in London He knocked Humpesch down once or twice, * Mr. Ernest Taylor writes: Various details of Baron Humpesch's extraordinary career and character are given in "The Taylor Papers," published by Longman several years ago. This duel is also referred to therein, and Sir Herbert (then Colonel) Taylor was one of the military authorities to whom Humpesch actually asked the question whether he ought not to challenge Richardson again, seeing that the latter had eventually recovered from his wound. Taylor's reply was that if he did challenge Richardson again he certainly deserved to be hanged. The etiquette of "giving satisfaction" in those days was indeed remarkable!

CHAPTER XXVIII

1847

Settled at Last

March 11. Mr. Angerstein told [Lambert] that He found the depending matter respecting the Princess of Wales had at last been settled to Her Royal Highness's satisfaction. — Under another quarter He learnt that after the Commissioners had acquitted Her Royal Highness of the accusations brought against Her & recommended a pardon of Lady Douglas for calumny, His Majesty signed a letter that He would pardon Her Royal Highness & she proposed to go to Windsor. — But it was signified to Her that His Majesty did not want Her. — That she was privately informed by some of the younger females of the family was put off caused by the Prince of Wales who went to Windsor & had a large audience of His Majesty & seemed to be well pleased with the result of — Upon this the Princess wrote to the King expressing what was due to Her character & that she did, it being to the contrary, publicly all proceedings, that the world might judge of Her conduct & that of those who were Her enemies. — Some days passing without any answer received, Mr. Perceval the late Attorney General, gave directions by Command of Her Royal Highness to have them printed at a private press, & as part being finished, He wrote to the Marchioness [Lambert] Master of the Robes to Her Highness, to inform Her of it.

Indiscretion of the Marchioness

She imprudently & improperly withd. further communication with Booth, a Bookseller & informed Him that such a publication was coming out. — This He told to Cawthorne Printer & Bookseller, to Her Royal Highness, who being hurt at not being employed went to Mr. Perceval to speak abt. it. — Mr. Perceval was surprised at the indiscretion of the Marchioness in this stage of the business, & informed Him that He, Cawthorne, or others, had nothing to do with the matter nor had He anything to say to Him upon it, & dismissed Him. — It is understood that the Prince of Wales had referred the whole matter to His own Council & it is concluded that they have represented to Him that the publication might more affect Him than Her Royal Highness.

any Naval Force from the place where it is directed to be employed, and the employing it in distant operations against the enemy, more especially if the success of such operations should be likely to prevent its speedy return, may be attended with the most serious inconvenience to the public service; as the success of any plan formed by His Majesty's Ministers for operations against the enemy, in which such Naval force might be included, may, by such removal, be entirely prevented. And the Court is further of opinion, that the conduct of the said Captain Sir Home Popham, in the withdrawing the whole of the Naval Force under His Command from the Cape of Good Hope, the proceeding with it to Rio de la Plata, was highly censurable; but in consideration of circumstances, doth adjudge him to be only severely reprimanded, and He is accordingly severely reprimanded." His Sword was then delivered by the Provost Marshal to the President, Sir Wm. Young, who directed Him to return it to Sir Home Popham, which He did with a respectful salutation.

Upon Sir Home quitting the Ship, He was cheered with loud acclamations from a vast number of boats which waited the issue of the trial; and also from an immense number of people assembled upon the Beach, who followed Him to the House of Capt. Madden.—[From small notebook.]

Pitt's Monument

Westall [R.A.] called in consequence of Payne Knight & Charles Long having been with him to look at His design for Mr. Pitt's monument. Long was pleased with it. Knight when alone with Westall told him He did not approve Westmacott's design for Mr. Pitt's monument & said "it consisted of a figure speaking what another figure was recording & two other figures sat like persons weary of hearing it." Knight doubted whether the Committee wd. allow Rossi to execute Westall's design as He had already one of the large Monuments given to Him, & asked whether Nollekens or Flaxman would not do it? Westall replied "He believed not," and added that Rossi was empty of work, but the others were fully employed. Knight desired Westall to send His design to Him tomorrow, in order that it may be laid before the Committee of Taste on Saturday.—

The Prince's Tailor

[Joseph] Moore* I did I with William Old (a wine merchant) employs Hutton a Taylor in Fleet Street, who also serves the Prince of Wales. Weston told William a few days ago that the Prince is extremely reduced in his size, & that he is that Charles who is to be taken in, & hang like great coats upon Henry, and James & John to be taken in greatly.† He also said that the Prince had a very old & wrinkled, very much so considering his age. His Highness is very fond of it with much concern fearing for their situation. He eats now at dinner only Fish & Salad, & drinks no wine. Weston also observed that his temper is not so good as it was. He is Robert about making about the placing of a button, and prevails. He goes to Mrs. Partridge in the evening & remains with her till two or three o'clock in the morning when he goes to bed & lays till 12 or one o'clock. Since the death of Mr. Fox he has worn Black & Leather only, & now Charles is that he had only two suits, which is very little compared with what he had formerly. Weston believes he has some hundred francs or guineas in his waist robe.

A Proud Merchant

Minet mentioned that George Barclay, a merchant of Burgh, & Merchant, having constantly voted with the Pro party, obtained the appointment of a Commissioner to decide upon the Union & Capitulation after war with that power commenced. Having been made a Knighthood few years ago, he paid 20 shillings in the pound, & in the port, but being a man of excessive pride & overbearing haughtiness, he never has shown himself upon the Exchange since that period. On Friday the 28th of February last in the morning he went to Blackwall where he passed the day, & in a house there drank a bottle of Brandy. It appears that he went out with an intention to destroy himself. He had pistols in his pocket, but does not seem to have had resolution to use them. In the evening he took a boat at Blackwall & came down to London & after the boat had passed London Bridge he threw himself into the Water.

He was caught in the water by a man & struggled hard with him but was at last got out & carried to a house apparently dead. But in an hour was recovered. From papers in his pocket it was found who

* See Vols. I, II, and III.

† At the Old Coffee Mill, 3, St. James's Street, S.W., where on 1st July by Minet & Brook, the wine merchants, all the eminent people of the King's Bench were weighed from time to time and their names and weights were registered in books, which are still preserved as are the huge scales then used, and indeed still in use to-day by Minet & Brook. There are some extracts showing the weight of the Prince of Wales at various dates.

1797, Dec. 5th, 17st. 8lb. Boots.

1798, Jan. 2nd, 16st. 8lb. After gout.

1805, Jan. 21, 11st. 12½lb. Boots.

The Prince was not again weighed.

was. He was desirous that his name should not be mentioned, so that in the Newspapers it was noticed witht. a name being given. He was taken to His House in Grafton Street, Bond Street. Minet remarked, That after His Bankruptcy He always passed Him (Minet) with an assumed look of haughtiness, as much as to say, "You won't look upon me as you did formerly, but I despise you." It is now fixed that He is to quit business which will be a happiness to His partners. He maintained His parliamentary interest at Bridport by professing to be a Dissenter.

CHAPTER XXX

1847

Lord Mulgrave

March 24. Jackson* was brought to Lord Mulgrave by a Theologian Clergyman who frequently visits His Lordship. At that time, about 5 years ago, Jackson was at Woburn & painted for Lord Mulgrave Castle where He painted miniatures very badly, but showed talent in sketching likenesses on paper. His Lordship told me something of him that was agreeable because His Patron, & I could then go down to London, & afterwards get permission from Lord Carlisle for him to copy pictures at Castle Howard where He was then working. He is a good fellow that He is disposed to be indolent, but has still strong feelings. He will distinguish Himself. He is of a very ingenious nature, & is very good in the professional merit of his friends & quite free from politics. His praise having no qualifying alloy.

Lord Mulgrave spoke of processes in painting and gave His opinion against a glazing system. He thought the true way would be to attain as much as possible of the effect intended by what is called fore painting and when that has been done to retouch & add with glazing to such extent as may be wanting to make the effect complete.

Political Matters

At ten I sat next to Lord Mulgrave & had a great deal of conversation with him. Genl. Phipps came in from the House of Commons & conversation took place respecting the present state of politics. I mentioned a new administration being now forming. I expressed to Lord Mulgrave my surprise at Lord Grenville having so much of his attention after the proof He had of the King's mind upon the Catholic question. He said that as Lord Grenville while in opposition had moved a question upon that subject, He supposed He now had wished to answer in some degree the expectation of the Catholics by introducing the proposal of enabling Catholics & Dissenters of every description to hold the highest situation in the army.—He said the motion had been made by Lord Howick certain without His Majesty's concurrence, & a strong declaration of the King against it, had caused the Ministers to agree to withdraw it, but His Majesty required from them a pledge that they wd. not again bring it forward; this they refused to give; and avowed to hold themselves at liberty to bring it forward whenever it might appear to them advisable so to do. I told His Lordship that some people were of opinion, from the rashness of the measure, that Lord Grenville sought the occasion as it wd. cause His withdrawing from Office. He dissented from this opinion, & being satisfied that Lord Grenville had no such wish.

* See Index, Vols. I., II, and III.

† See Index, Vols. II. and III.

The Ablest Man

I noticed the great friendship which had subsisted between Lord Grenville and Lord Wellesley, and asked how that would operate between them if the latter shd. now come into Office. He replied that there had been great friendship between them from their youth, but that Lord Grenville had not since Lord Wellesley's return from India, shown a disposition to promote His being employed. Of the effect of a Change of Administration His Lordship seemed to have no unpleasant apprehension. He said that as to ability that now forming would be stronger than the ex administration. He sd. Mr. Perceval is the ablest man in the House of Commons. I asked Him what Mr. Canning wd. be. He sd. He had been mentioned as to be first Lord of the Admiralty. I asked what then wd. Lord Melville be appointed to? He sd. He understood that Lord Melville is not to hold an Office at least at present, but that Mr. Dundas His Lordship's Son, is to have an appointment. He thought it wd. have been better judged to appoint Lord Melville at once, as His experience & ability are well known, and that after such an acquittal as He had had, when the government influence was in the hands of those who moved the prosecution of him, there could be no sufficient reason for hesitating to appoint Him now to a situation of responsibility.

Girtin the Artist

Lord Mulgrave asked me to call upon Him to see a portrait which Jackson is painting of one of his Lordship's daughters. His Lordship spoke much of His own delight in Land-cape scenery, & how great His pleasure is in passing through His walks and grounds, & opening & rendering more beautiful & perfect the various views & scenes at Mulgrave Castle. He never wishes to come to town & only does come (when) occasions require it. He spoke with much regard of the memory of Girtin the Artist,* who was with Him a little time at Mulgrave Castle. He thought Him a good natured open dispassioned man. He then laboured under symptoms of an Asthma which not long afterwards killed Him. Girtin having a desire to carry to Paris a Panorama view of Lambton with a view to exhibit it there, Lord Mulgrave procured Him a * See Index, Vols. I, II. and III., and "Thomas Girtin's Water-Colours," by Randall Davies, 1924.

Passport; but when He arrived at Paris He was not permitted to exhibit it.

Coll. & Mrs. Welsh came in the evening. He is now a Candidate for the East India direction. I noticed to Lord Mulgrave the interesting expression of Mrs. Welsh's countenance; which He said was beautiful & very remarkably interesting. She is sister to Lady Mulgrave, (sister-in-law, Miss Makin).

A Famous Editor

March 25. Lawrence took the general statement in favor of a change of Ministry. Pertz,* of the Morning Chronicle has resigned His Office of Secretary to one of the Boards of Customs, & others of accounts.

The salary was five a year. Lord Grenville wrote to him that He might retain it; meaning that appointments of that description wd. not be affected by a change of Ministry. But Pertz felt the duty attendance from eleven to four tedious, and also that He shd. be embarrassed in conducting the newspaper. His wife was also against His continuing in that situation.

Art and Naval Matters

March 28. Lord Mulgrave I called on at ten o'clock & found Capt. Moorsumt & Wilkie there. The former was waiting, being appointed Private Secretary to His Lordship who on Thursday last was appointed First Lord of the Admiralty. Wilkie was examining Specimens of Carpeting wanting a piece to paint from in His picture of "The Rent Day."—Lord Mulgrave showed me a picture by Vandermeulen, with which He was much delighted; a fine picture; also one by Salvator Rosa, & others. After looking at the pictures I got into conversation with Capt. Moorsumt, while His Lordship transacted business in another room, meaning to go with us to Mr. Brothers, Mr. Plapp's, to see a picture painted for Him by Moysey.† Capt. Moorsumt said something respecting the change of Ministry, and we both expressed our surprise at the conduct of Lords Grenville & Howick.‡

He told me that at Naval Courts Martial the decision is by a Minority of one or more. That when the Court retire to decide upon a trial a question is put whether the charge has been proved, beginning with the Junior Officer & proceeding to the others the Senior Officers being the last called upon.—When a majority has decided, all the Officers sign it so that it appears to have been a unanimous decision, & must remain so without Parliament shd. require the Members to declare & explain.

Sir George Beaumont called upon me in the afternoon being just come to town.—He looked pretty well, but complained of debility through

* See Index, Vols. I. and II.

† See Index, Vol. III.

‡ See Index, Vol. III.

§ See Index, Vol. III.

the Winter. He told me His Mother was born in 1718 & has only to complain of being a little deaf. He said there did not appear to be anything likely to prevent Her living till 1818. He had called at Wilkie's and saw His picture of "The Rent Day" & did not appear to me to be so much struck with it as with His former works, He asked me "whether Wilkie did not seem to be finishing very much"; signifying by it, too much. —

CHAPTER XXXI

1807

Franco-Russian War

March 29. Easter Sunday. Mr. Angerstein's Father sat, the party small. Mr. Angerstein talked a good deal about the War between the Russians & French. He said General Bannigsen, who commanded the Russians against Napoleon at the battle of Eylau, is a native of Hanover and abt. 64 years of age. He was Page to George 2nd. He remained in Hanover all night on the 24th of February previous to the Battle of the 8th, though the weather was not a moment. On the evening of the 8th, after the Battle was over & the French repulsed everywhere, He with those about Him fell upon them knee & gave thanks to God for the Victory.

The Cossacks have annoyed the French most terribly. They were carried to the War with their minds inflated against their enemies. Their General on his march through Russia bought as many pairs of Horned cattle as He could obtain & distributed them among His Corps, telling them "That was the man He wanted."

The Grand Duke Constantine is inveterate against the French; but there is a French party in Petersburg who endeavor to influence the Emperor through the Emperor's Mother. He gave them a proof of His feeling towards them by selecting them leader to be the Bearers of the Order of St. Andrew, the Highest Order of Russia, to General Bannigsen after the battle of Eylau.

Mr. Angerstein told me that He was born at Petersburg. He appeared to be very well pleased with the change of Administration & assured us that He knew the Prince of Wales disapproved of the Catholic question having been brought forward. He said that He was well acquainted with Lord Nelson, and had heard him express a hope that He should die in battle. After tea He showed us a large drawing made for Him by David with which He was much pleased. West said that a style of drawing had been practised in this Country such as had not been seen in any other, and that with Thomas Sandby it originated.

1. A young girl in a patterned dress and headscarf, looking at the camera.

March 31.--The two first Numbers of Prince Hoare's* publication "The Artist" were not much approved; but Hoppner's letter in the 3d. Number is thought better. Longman & Rees in Paternoster Row, have issued proposals for a publication of Prints from celebrated Pictures, the Prints to be coloured, & accompanied with Letter Press, the whole to be under the management of Outley & Treham [R.A.]; & it is sd. the former is to have 1000 guineas for His trouble, & the latter 500.† This work will militate against a publication of the same nature carrying on by Miller, the Bookseller of Bond St. & the Revd. Edwd. Foster.‡ Calvert has finished a Landscape, an evening, of which Thomson speaks highly, & recommended it to Sir John Leicester who has bought it.

Princess Sophia's Kindness

April 1. Mrs. Wheatley§ attends the Princess Sophia of Gloucester twice a week to teach Her drawing. They send a Sociable [marriage] for Her, & treat Her with great kindness. They are very charitable & considerate. The Princess Sophia last week noticed to Mrs. Wheatley the death of Her Mother & observed that she might be required to be at some expense upon the occasion & gave Her £10 on acct. They often employ Mrs. Wheatley to distribute charity for them, & always with a desire that it shd. not be known. They are greatly attached to the King, and are well pleased with the change of Administration, as they consider the new Ministers to be the King's friends.

The Duke of Cambridge having lately on some occasion spoke in the House of Lords, it was observed in a newspaper that the Duke was always a supporter of the King. The Duchess|| upon reading it said "She did not know that the King wanted any support." They are attached to the Princess of Wales, & visit, & correspond with Her. The Prince still insists upon further investigation.

Mr. Troward¶ has sent all His pictures except His celebrated picture of Our Saviour by Leonardo da Vinci, to Philip to be sold. He gave

* See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

† "British Gallery of Pictures," published 1768, at £12 12s. Prints on India paper, £25 4s. Coloured and mounted, 150 guineas.

‡ "British Gallery of Engravings," London, 1807-11, £2 2s. each. Large paper, £3 13s. 6d.

§ See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

|| The Duchess of Gloucester.

¶ Troward, who lived in Pall Mall, like Buchanan, was regularly engaged in picture-dealing. The collection numbered only fourteen pictures, but they were of good quality, and some of them realised comparatively high prices. Lord Edmund paid £1,575 for "A Beethamian," which was considered to be the finest Nicolas Poussin in the country. "The Son of God Creating the Universe," said to have been painted by Leonardo da Vinci for François Premier of France, and a portrait of François himself, also ascribed to Leonardo, fetched together £1,680. The total was £6,418 13s. See Vol. II., page 267 and note.

£3500 for 6 pictures, but expects much more for them. He disposes of them from a consideration of the family of Col. Pitt Rivers, but probably has a further motive from having engaged on a great Scrap making scheme to be carried on at Fauxhall, which will require £20,000 to be laid out before anything can be gained.

Canning "In the Sky"

Lawrence also called. Went with him today to see His picture of Sir Francis Baring & told him he had made an advance in the Art. Sir Francis sat yesterday & spoke of the New Administration as being men of Ability. He thought it was probable that some of the age, and habits of business, that Mr. Perceval wd. take the lead in the House of Commons. He sd. Canning is a man of talents, but "is sometimes in the Sky". Mr. Wall, Sir Francis's son in law, told Lawrence today that the government of Russia complained of the violence of our late government in respect of assistance to carry on the War, and that Thompson wd. probably avail himself of that feeling & endeavour to make peace with them.

Lord Hawick is considered to be the principal cause of pressing the King on the Catholic business.

Turner's Early Patron

Machell sd. the opinion in that part of Yorkshire was that if Mr. Laocelles had stood the contest at the last Election Wiltshire wd. have been obliged to give way. Lawkes* had so distinguished himself by His Oratory at a former meeting at York that vast expectations were formed of him, that He wd. have equalled Pitt or Fox; but Machell observed it might have been a speech prepared.

Constable called to desire me to call to see 2 pictures prepared by him for the Exhibition, in one of which He thought He had got something original. He spoke again of Cabott's large Landscapes & said it was apparently too much a work of art & labour, not an effusion. His smaller pictures He thought better in that respect.

C. O'Neley came to desire me to call on Corbould to see a picture "The Bard" from Gray, painted by O'Neley. The weather being bad I declined going out on which He went to Corbould who soon returned with him & brought the picture which I was much pleased with. Corbould told me that He was a pupil of Morris† rendered with him in Glanville Street, in the year 1773 in the House in which I at that * W. R. Fawkes, of Farnley, Turner's early patron. See Index, Vol. I.

† Richard Corbould (1757-1831) painted in oil and water colours portraits, landscapes, and historical pictures, but was best known as a designer of books. Two of his family, Henry and George, also were artists.

‡ R. Morris, who contributed landscapes to the Royal Academy between 1764 and 1784.

ne resided. Maris came from Lincolnshire, & was pupil to Arthur Devis* whose daughter he married.

* Arthur William Devis (1763-1822), painter of portraits and historical subjects. While on a voyage as draughtsman in the service of the H.E.I. Coy., the Antelope (Captain Mon) was wrecked off the Pelew Islands. The crew landed on one of the islands and built a small ship, and on the way to Macao Devis was shot at from the coast, one arrow entering his body, the other his cheek. The latter wound permanently injured his jaw. He exhibited sixty-five pictures at the Royal Academy between 1787 and 1821. After the Battle of Trafalgar he went on board the Victory and painted the "Death of Vice-Admiral Lord Viscount Nelson, K.B., in the Cockpit of H.M.S. Victory, 21st October, 1805." This picture is in Greenwich Hospital. Devis is buried in St. Giles's Churchyard.

CHAPTER XXXII

1867

Reynolds and Burke

April 3. - Lawrence I called on & at last He wrote He gave the finishing touches to His picture. He told me that He had called upon Huc this morn'g & sd. it was all over with Him - that He had first complaint which appeared to be Rheumatism, but there may be some other complication of disorders, & that He had a complaint in His bladder. - And He hourly grew worse, & it must be a change of which there was no prospect, that could recover Him. - He uttered only, "He will die." Lawrence also sd. that upon the same morn'g, he called on Huc and sd. that He had seen Thie's servant, who sd. He did not believe He would recover, though the Physician gave Him some hopes.

Lawrence I dined with, and saw His portrait by Francis Hanbury &c. nearly finished. He told me that Ralph Kneller, Sir Joshua Reynolds's old servant, had informed him that year, the time that Sir Joshua found He must die, He appeared to wish that no one should visit Him: but He could not refuse to see Mr. Burke. He lay whole nights seemingly with sleep, but silent, except that after a long interval in the night He wd. hastily call out Ralph as if to assure himself that He was not alone.

Miss Lee,* late of Bath, came in. She told me she & Her Sister have taken a House at St. Avon's 2 miles from Chexham, on the height near Piercefield: That Mr. Wells the present owner of that place is very kind as a neighbour and allows them free access to His Park. He gave £95,000 for that place. He has a Son and a daughter. The daughter is as fair as Her Mother, but the eldest son brown, and the 2nd Son dark as his father.†

* Miss Sophia Lee. See Index, Vol. III.

† In a reference to Piercefield in September, 1861, Farrington says that Mr. Wells "is a creole of very deep colour, but Miss Wells (his sister) is fair." Piercefield, which the Diary characterised as "a specimen of very bad taste in architecture," was bought by Humphry Morrice, passed to a Mr. Smith, who failed, was bought by Colonel Wood and sold by him to Mr. Wells. That gentleman was very "exact about admissions to see the grounds. Every person who goes for that purpose is requested to write His or Her name and the book is carried to him every Saturday night, from which He transcribes all the names into a book which He keeps in His own possession."

April 5. Northcote this day, in the Artist, published a letter with His Initials, upon the evil consequences of Patron becoming hasty Patrons to unimproved abilities, thereby bringing forward young men whose early efforts end in disappointment.

Payne Knight had seen his [Westall's] picture of the sleeping Nymph & advised Him to ask 300 guineas for it. Westall sd. He proposed to ask 200 gs. Knight sd. when an Artist painted a picture on speculation He had [the] right to ask a price different from what He made the rule for works ordered. If He made a lucky hit He had a fair claim to an extraordinary reward. Lord Oxford told Westall that Knight's income does not exceed £5000 a year, & Knight told Westall that He does not save anything.

April 6. Lady Brantmont much disapproved of Hoppner's letter to Mr. Charles Greyville* & thought the Fly Flap very well written. Daniell did not concur with Her in sentiments.

Marchant [R.A.] called to desire me to procure invitations to the Academy dinner for Mr. Rose & Mr. Bankes. Mr. Bankes has had the misfortune to lose His eldest Son a fine young man 21 yrs. of age. His Father at His desire, had bought Him a Commission in the Army, & He was going to Sicily to join His regiment some months ago in the Blanche, Capt'n. Rankin, which Ship struck upon a rock & was lost. Many were saved & He was intreated to come into the boat but refused saying, He had considered it, & thought it most safe to remain in the Ship. The boat got safe to shore. Mr. Bankes has two other Sons & two or three daughters. He stood for the County of Dorset at the

* The "Fly Flap," by C. F. G., consisted of a criticism of the last number of the Director, edited by T. F. Dibdin. Mr. Frank Rutter, editor of a little volume entitled "Essays on Art by John Hoppner, R.A." (19-8), in republishing Hoppner's reply, suggests that C. F. G. was the Right Hon. Charles Grey, afterwards the second Earl Grey, whereas he was Charles Francis Greyville, second son of the first Earl of Warwick. Greyville died unmarried in 1806, aged 60 years. A Fellow of the Royal Society and F.R.S., he was acquainted with Hoppner. His collection of pictures and other works of art was sold in 1810 and realised fully £50,000.

1 George Rose, Vice-President of the Board of Trade in the Portland Ministry. Henry Bankes (1757-1834) was a politician and author, and grandson of Sir John Bankes, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in the time of Charles I. From 1780 to 1820 he sat for the Close Borough of Corfe Castle. In the latter year he was elected for the County of Dorset, which he represented until 1831, when he was defeated. He was a Trustee of the British Museum, and wrote "A Civil and Constitutional History of Rome, from the Foundation to the Age of Augustus." His third son, George Bankes (1788-1850), was the last of the Curator Barons of the Exchequer, and entered Parliament in 1816 as his father's colleague for the family Borough of Corfe Castle, which he represented until 1823. He was the author of "The Story of Corfe Castle and of Many Who Have Lived There," and of "Brave Dame Mary." On the death of his elder brother, William John Bankes (in 1855), the traveller, he succeeded to the family estates.

last Election against Mr. Portman,* but lost it, it was owing to his having declared himself seceder. It cost him £1000 & Mr. Portman £10,000. Mr. Bankes was extremely affected by the loss of his S. it appeared to make a stronger impression on him than on Mrs. Bankes.

* Edward Berkeley Portman, of Devonshire, an E. O. and Portman, Dorset. He (1799-1888) of the same name sat for Dorset from 1832 to 1837, and for Marlborough from October, 1838, to March, 1841. Two years later he was created Baron Portman, of Portman, and in 1844 was a baronet by the Peerage as Viscount Portman, of Portman, and Devonshire Square and Orchard Street, Marlborough, got names from this family.

CHAPTER XXXIII

1807

A Famous Painting by Turner

April 7. Westall called. The pictures &c. sent for Exhibition were examined yesterday. Turner's large picture, a Sea piece* is inferior to his former productions, but a small picture of the inside of a Farrier's Shop, is a very clever picture. Calcott's large picture an Upright, an even'g, is of a better colour, but half of the Sky might be taken away & the picture wd. be better for it. Philips' pictures are very indifferent, a half length of Lord Thurlow is the best. Woodford seems to improve. - Some water colour drawings, & Sketches with black lead pencil, by Mrs. Charles Long, were much admired for their taste & freedom.

An Inferior Performance

A large picture by Manfredi, an Italian Artist, containing several portraits as large as life, proved to be a miserable performance. This Artist, it seems, came to England with a high opinion of his powers. He was employed by a Merchant, to whom He had recommendations, to paint his family which He has thus done. He surprised the Merchant, by demanding 1000 guineas for it. The Merchant sd. He wd. give the highest price given to our English Artists, but demurred at the demand made. - On this Manfredi lowered His price to 500 gns. - It is debated in Council whether to keep the picture or not, but after all that had been sd. of Him, it was judged most prudent to exhibit the picture; but that the sanction of the Academy might not cause the Merchant, to be imposed on, it was resolved that a letter shd. be written to Him by the Secretary,

* The "Sun Rising Through Vapour," which is one of the best of the pictures in Turner's first transition stage, was exchanged with Sir John Leicester (Lord De Tabley) for No. 476, now in the Tate Gallery, and was bought back by Turner from Lord De Tabley and bequeathed by the artist to the nation on condition that it and "Dido Building Carthage" (498) were hung between Claude's "Marriage of Isaac and Rebecca" (12) and "Embarkation of the Queen of Sheba" (14). The four pictures are placed in this order in the National Gallery.

† The picture by H. Manfredi, who is not mentioned in Bryan's Dictionary, was informing him that the Council thought it a work of very inferior quality and were only induced to allow it to be exhibited, from a desire to show to Foreigners all the attention in their power. A letter to this effect was accordingly written by Westall at the desire of the Council to be copied by Richardson.

Opie's Read Lusty Book

Williams said He met a gentleman & Lady at Bath who were natives of Cornwall, & had near the place where Opie was born*, a gentel House, in which they had a Library. While Opie was a youth they admitted him to it & believe He read every book in it. He was most of the whole days, & frequently in fine weather lying upon the grass. Home together so employed. Williams has his family in town, but has hired rooms in Bond St, from Shade to paint in only, & gave programs as a year for them.

Turner's Council

Lawrence I called on & found Mr. West there. He told us that Calvert seemed to be in danger of falling into mauvaise,† wanted middle tint in his pictures which deffinitely caused His large pictures to appear by any other than broad day light a mass of dark upon a mass of light, wanting the sweetness and agreeableness of medium tints. His night landscapes was of a better colour. Turner has greatly fallen off in a large Sea piece—He seems to have run wild with colour.

Mr. and Mrs. West sent this morning to Opie's & were answered that He seemed to be better, from some symptoms. Lawrence leaving left the room, I asked West how [he] liked His picture of Sir Francis Ham &c. He replied in the warmest terms of approbation. That that picture would not be recalled. "Oh!" said He, "That picture, & His Circular of exhibited last year, puts them all at a distance."

Moral Virtue

Mackintosh,‡ the present Chief Justice at Hounslow, was mentioned to us. He sd. He seemed to have very little feeling of the beauty of moral virtue. At His outset at Edinburgh, He had made himself remarkable by His expressions of ridicule & contempt for revealed religion. He afterwards in His Lectures delivered in London, spoke with reverence on the subject, which drew upon [him] many reproaches from those who had formerly attended to His other opinions. During the French revolution at least at the early part of it, He was supposed to be possessed with French principles, & was also a Foxite: but His self interest, it was believed * John Opie was born at St. Agnes, about seven miles from Truro. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† Solomon Williams was born in Dublin, where he studied at the Academy before going to Italy. He was a member of the Bologna Academy, an exhibitor at the Royal Academy and British Institution, and a foundation member of the Royal Librarian Academy. He died on August 2, 1824.

‡ Sir James Mackintosh. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

J. M. W. TURNER

From a drawing by T. Phillips in the National Portrait Gallery

caused Him to abandon those prejudices, and He became an Advocate for the opposite opinions in politics. While a Foxite He had become intimate with Dr. Parr. Happening one day to dine at Sir Willm. Milners in company with the Doctor, Quigley the associate of Roger O'Connor [Irish revolutionary], was spoken of & his punishment for Treason. Mackintosh said Quigley seemed to be a Character of the worst kind. Upon which the Doctor [Parr] replied, "No, Jimmy, not of the worst kind; He was an Irishman, & might have been a Scotman; He was a Priest, & might have been a Lawyer; He was true to His cause, & might have been an Apostate, Jimmy." Mackintosh in conversation disapproving the conduct of one of his acquaintances, did it upon the ground of its impolicy, as to the morality of it that is nothing, said He. This being remarked to one of His acquaintances, He said, "That is Mackintosh."

Titian's Bacchus and Ariadne

Lawrence called in the even'g in raptures on having seen a picture by Titian at Buchanan's* in Oxendon St. the subject Bacchus & Ariadne.† He described it to be the finest piece of colouring that He had ever beheld for splendour, force, & freshness. He said the Titian at the Marquis of Stafford's could not be mentioned with it. The colours of it blue, green, red and yellow. The landscape part being pushed to the extremity of colour in depth & feelings. In one corner Titian seems after He had otherways finished the picture, to have dashed a piece of bright yellow drapery, out which is a golden Vase, & this part alone by its effect proves it from the hand of Titian. The yellow colour used is such as we have not, Naples yellow wd. be weak to it. There are in parts of the trees evident marks of the touch of the Pallet Knife. Lord Kinnaird has bought the picture for 3000 guineas.

Lawrence on his way to me called upon West & informed him of the picture. He told me He now saw He must discharge a colour from His Pallet, Terra di Siena, which He sd. is an impure colour, & has often led Him off from that purply freshness which shd. be attempted & caused him to fall into heavy & leathery colouring. He said that when He first saw His Circular picture in the Exhibition last year, He felt that it was too much upon the yellowish brown and was heavy.

Giorgione's Peeling

April 8. Buchanan's in Oxendon St. I went to with West & Lawrence & saw the picture of Bacchus & Ariadne by Titian. West said it

* William Buchanan, celebrated picture dealer and author of "Memoirs of Painting."

† Lord Kinnaird, who paid Buchanan, the dealer, 1,500 guineas for the "Bacchus and Ariadne," suggested one improvement to the picture. "The Marquis of Stafford said once was painted when Titian was old & weary of work & full of Giorgione's feeling of colour. At a later period Titian lost his grandeur & character, but at this period His mind was occupied by a desire to produce the utmost splendour of colouring. He traced out the ground on which it was painted, & shewed that it was upon a ground of bright yellow, glazed down to a tone to suit the natural colour of his picture. But the whole from the beginning was worked with thin colours, through which the light within as He called it, proceeding from the first ground, gave the lustre which was an extraordinary. He said whoever should attempt to copy that picture, unless He proceeded in that way, would make nothing more than a heavy work of it.

He said the picture was really in fine preservation, but it was mortifying to see that Rush the picture dealer had been putting colour upon it, in many parts. Upon the sky with His own hand & had stippled colour upon parts of the flesh. He said if the picture were His He wd. take off the whole of that Rush had done, for He knew He was the person that had done it in order to make the picture appear more showy. He knew His hand. He sd. it ought to bear a price like the fine Clanley, 4 or 5000 guineas.

The late Lord Kinnaird who was a man remarkable for an avacious disposition, had the following lines put on the gateway of His Park

Here's a Park without Trees,
A Cellar without Beer;
A Kitchen without Cheese;
Lord Kinnaird lives here

Sir George (Heanmont) was full of Walke's performance "The Blind Musician [Fiddler]" & hoped it wd. not be hung in the Exhibition near any "Boiled Lobsters" i.e. glaring pictures. He seemed to be dissatisfied with Owen's cold expression about Walke's character of that Walke imitated the Flemish masters, & suggested that He ought to attempt something more,—

CHAPTER XXXIV

1807

Death of Opie

April 8. Opie's door I stopped at & met Prince Hoare, & the Apothecary, who said Opie's pulse was better this morn'g, but that He had yet no passage through Him, & was partly delirious, & partly dozing; He said He might continue to live 3 or 4 days, or might go off suddenly; but did not appear to entertain any expectation of his recovery. Prince Hoare told me that it had not at last been ascertained what His complaint was. It was thought to be in the bladder, but was not so; the physicians who first attended him judged it to be inflammatory, & bled him & purged him. Dr. Alderson, Mrs. Opie's father, came from Norwich & gave a different opinion. He thought it arose out of a morbid habit & tended to putridity. Mrs. Opie [Annella Opie, the poetess] distracted at this difference of opinion called in Dr. Vaughan, who agreed with those who first judged of the case, & Dr. Pitcairne & Dr. Bailie being also consulted differed from Dr. Alderson. Such was the sad uncertainty.

April 9. At 9 o'clock Thomson [R.A.] called looking very pale & distressed which I saw indicated the death of Poor Opie. This I signified & He began with a disposition to weeping to speak like one who blames himself on account of the coolness which had of late subsisted between him and Opie; but added, He trusted, that He had at this period done His duty by the attention He had paid to Opie. I comforted Him by speaking of the unreasonableness of his blaming Himself on account of a little misunderstanding, as it was what human nature is perpetually liable to, while our natural infirmities continue, and might also be founded upon a reasonable cause. At the same [time] I said it was a natural consequence (where real affection had subsisted) when a final separation takes place, for the Survivor to regret that any interruption shd. ever have happened to suspend kindness & intercourse. He then gave me the following acct.---

On Friday the 9th. of March, Opie was invited to dine with a Society called the Irish Society of which Harvey Combe is President [the Brewer and Lord Mayor]. It is held at a House in the City. Opie went there & found the room in which they dined large & cold, with a fire laid perhaps only an hour before the company came. He felt cold & uncomfortable during the entertainment & to warm himself probably drank a little more wine than He was accustomed to drink. The night proved very cold, with Snow, & He had to walk home; & that evening felt unwell from it. The next & following days, He was still more indolent, & complained of a pain in his back, & in a little time of a suppression of Urine. Carlisle, the Surgeon, was applied to, who by the use of a Catheter drew off the Urine, & it was at first thought a retention but soon appeared to be a medical case. Dr. Ash, a friend of Opie's, soon to the late celebrated Dr. Ash was called in, & there now appeared great disorder in the vessels abt. the groin, with so violent a pulsation, that it was feared a rupture wd. take place. On this acct. He was bled. He appeared still to grow worse, & was confined to His bed. To the pain in his back & suppression of Urine were added pain in His lower limbs, & these symptoms caused it to be reported that He had the Rheumatism.

Doctors Differ

On Thursday, April and, Dr. Alderson, Father to Mrs. Opie came from Norwich, and that afternoon told Thomson, that whatever might be said or done, Opie never wd. recover. He differed from Dr. Ash in His opinion of the disorder, & considered it the effect of a morbid habit, Opie had been thought on the Thursday to be something better, but Dr. Alderson said that was nothing. Dr. Vaughan had before, or was now called in, and agreed entirely with Dr. Ash as to the propriety of treating His case as had been done, and Doctors Pittman & Hall also were added to the consultation and fully concurred in it. Their attention was great, they all visited him twice a day. He had been in a state of Delirium several days, with only slight intervals. His head was shaved & blistered, to relieve Him in that respect. There had been no passage through His bowels for a considerable time. Carlisle a few days ago felt the lower part of the bowels & found them in a torpid state, the index of a pressure upon them remaining; and they cracked like dry parchment.

Carlisle had for many days told Thomson that Opie wd. not recover. He spoke highly of Dr. Ash & sd. He knew more of Phym. than any of the Professors.—Yesterday morning Opie's pulse was better, & Thomson calling upon Mrs. Opie, she smiled, & sd. "You do not know what I have heard of the consultation."—Thomson knew that she was deceived in what she supposed.—Dr. Ash told Thomson that it was not yet known where the real cause or seat of his disorder was; it might be owing to an intense cold which had fallen upon the spinal marrow. Late there had been an oozing from the back. Last night the Physician decided that all hope was gone, all the bad symptoms having increased. At 10 o'clock Dr. Vaughan tenderly commended to Mrs. Opie that nothing more cd. be done, she might be assured that He wd. continue to be without pain. At half an Hour past 4 o'clock this morning He died.

—Thomson heard him sometime before to groan heavily, but Carlisle said He was insensible & felt nothing.---

Thomson said that on hearing Opie was seriously ill He wrote to Him, offering that in case any of his pictures intended for Exhibition shd. require to have some little matter done to them He shd. be happy to give His assistance.

Blessed Him

On receiving this letter Opie desired to see him. He found Opie in bed who put out his hand to him and blessed Him. He desired him to do something to a picture of the Duke of Gloucester which Thomson promised to do. On Friday last He took the picture into Opie's bed room & asked him what He wd. have done. Opie looked at it, but did not say anything & then turned and put out his hand & caught as if something was before him, and afterwards slid His hand under the pillow as if searching for something. He also spoke but in such a way as to shew Thomson that He was delirious. Thomson did what was necessary to the picture and on Saturday sent it to the Exhibition & says it is one of Opie's best pictures. Since that Time Thomson has been in constant attendance during the night, & administered medicines till He cd. no longer bear to do it, from the pain of seeing Opie's sad state & witnessing His delirium. He had occasionally momentary recollections, & recognised persons, but it was only for a moment. Sometimes the delirium operated so violently that He would start up suddenly in his bed, so as to oblige those abt. Him to hold Him down,--and this at a time when his lower limbs were in such a state from the condition of his back &c. that He could not move without assistance. Finally this case has baffled the sagacity of the most eminent medical men & it will not be known till His body has been opened which is to be done by Carlisle to-morrow at Eleven o'clock, what was the real nature of his disorder.---

A Gross Feeder

Opie's mode of living was spoken of. He was very abstemious in respect of wine, but Dr. Alderson observed that He was a gross feeder; eating of made dishes in preference to plain meat; and eating pickles & high sauces or whatever of that kind was before him.-- Carlisle sd. that shd. Opie's case appear upon opening the body to be what He supposes, it is a very singular case, only one instance of the kind being upon record, and that given by a Physician at Rome. An inflammation of the spinal membrane above the Os Coxeygna [Coccygis], which in its effect extended to the Brain and caused the Delirium.---

CHAPTER XXXV

1807

Cause of Opie's Death

April 10.—Carlisle came. He had this morning opened the body of Opie & found everything as He had expected it wd. be. An inflammation upon the spine above the 11th Cervical (Cervix) an inflammation of the Brain, part of which was dissolved, and 5 ounces of water in the Brain, whereas there ought not to have been more than half an ounce. There was also inflammation in the bowels. The case was singular, & like that described by the Roman Physician. It was unusual from the first, but being inflammatory the principle which had been acted upon was right. Had it been possible for Opie to have recovered He wd. have been for the remainder of his life an Idiot. Carlisle sd. that His skull was both externally & internally of a singular form.

Carlisle observed that weak minded people have generally small heads and thick skulls; and that very few, if any, very strong minded persons, those who have strong common sense, ever become insane. Upon dissecting the heads of great numbers who have died insane, the foregoing observations have been made.

Opie's Fortune

April 11.—Thomson I dined with. He told me that it was now ascertained that Opie died worth property to the amount of £13000, to the surprise of Mrs. Opie* who did not suppose Him to be worth more than £3000. Yet He had repeatedly sd. to Thomson "That He shd. starve." Yesterday in a dirty Cupboard a £50 & a £10 notes were found, & this morning among lumber in a Closet, an old rag in which there was 195 guineas in gold. The possession of this property did not expand his mind, but He rather became more covetous. He wd. only allow Mrs. Opie to keep one maid servant, and He had generally an Invalid Man servant at low wages.

Dr. Alderson, Mrs. Opie's father was averse to Her marrying Him. In His first intercourse with Opie He formed an unfavourable opinion of Him.—At dinner there was a dish which was very good, and the * See Vol. I., II. and III.

Doctor having tasted would have had more, but Opie witht. regarding others, emptied the whole dish into his own plate. This the Doctor decided to be a proof of gross selfishness. Mrs. Opie had at an early period of Her life somehow been impressed with a feeling that Opie was a very extraordinary man. At a subsequent period when she saw him His figure & manner so little corresponded with the image in Her mind that Her admiration was suspended.

But after some intercourse His attention to Her & solicitation caused Her again to be influenced by His reputation for ability & she married Him. Her Father upon their marriage agreed to allow Him 200 guineas a year. She was 26 or 7 years of age. By Her Novels & poems she has also acquired money. The last year she recd. £400, and upon the recd. of this money Opie consented to have his House in part repaired & made more respectable. But Opie concealed from Her his real circumstances; and was very parsimonious in His allowance to Her, & in all that related to Her expenses. His mind had nothing liberal in it. He was sordid & selfish. At a time when from the fortune He had made & by His professional practice, He had a considerable income, He gave in to the Commissioners of the Income Tax only £50 as professional income and £50 a year as His funded property; and it was remarkable that the Commissioners admitted the report.

Opie's Art

Thomson [said] His professional power was [at] its greatest height about 14 years ago. Nine years ago He fell off; but for sometime past has painted better pictures, though His conceptions have been common placed, and His taste of colouring much inferior to what it was at an earlier period of his life. He agreed with me in thinking that it did not seem probable that Opie wd. ever paint better than He had done & that as an Artist He had gone his full length.

Thomson became pupil to Opie in August 1791 being at that period 17 years old. He paid 100 guineas for that year; and Opie lived then so pleasantly with Him, & on so equal a footing, as to make the time pass very agreeably. At the expiration of that year Opie told him that if He pleased He might remain another year witht. being at any expence. Thomson only went to Opie's to study. He also attended the Royal Academy & there became acquainted with several Students viz: Owen, Turner, Shee, Oliver &c. He had in the year 1788 obtained a premium at St. Omer's in France, for a drawing. Before He went to Opie it had been proposed to His Father to place Him with Graham (now at Edinburgh) who demanded 300 guineas.

Thomson saw the present Emperor of Germany at Vienna. He is a little mean-looking man; but is sd. to have a very good disposition. The Archduke is also a little & mean-looking man, but has abilities greatly [Owen R.A.] ad. Wilbur's "Blind [Fiddler] Stravaganza," was vastly superior to His work of last year "The Village Politicians," and really justified even Sir George Hervey's extravagant praise.

April 12. Wilbur I met on my way home. He was much gratified on my telling Him His picture was placed up on the Chimney Board. I asked Him how He went on with His picture of "The Kent day" and, slowly, I said, I concluded He wd. not now see much of Lord Mulgrave as He is now Lord of the Admiralty. But He told me His Lordship had been with him several times since He had that appointment & had not at all slackened in thinking abt. the acts.

CHAPTER XXXVI

1807

Vanity of Mrs. Opie

April 12. - Northcote I called on. He hoped the Council of the Academy wd. hear no more respecting Opie's Funeral. All that had been proposed arose out of the vanity of Mrs. Opie, which far exceeded even that of Mrs. Cosway. He remarked on the proposal of having Opie interred in St. Pauls, three days before He died, for such a wish Thomson had communicated to Owen at that time, but it originated with Mrs. Opie. It was surprising that it shd. have done so, as most persons wd. not have borne to think of his funeral while He was living. - West now is upon His guard respecting it. He says that shd. any further application be made it will then be a matter for the Council to debate. - Northcote did not think Opie possessed more than £200 a year.---

Fuseli's Impatience

Yesterday after dinner He had a contest with Fuseli who insisted that all modern artists, even Raphael, were weak in the power of giving expression to their figures. Northcote held a contrary opinion. He said the discriminations of character were better [given] by the moderns but by the ancients as far as we know of their work, little of that kind was to be seen. Fuseli mentioned the Laocoon. Northcote said, That was a man upon the Rack; it was one in the extreme of bodily distress. Fuseli named the Niobe. Northcote sd. that was a similar instance. - The Quaker, He said, was one of the best instances of expression that was to be found in the Antique. - Fuseli became impatient, & left the room.

Hobbema

Sir George Beaumont told Hearne yesterday that having spoken to Payne Knight of Edwd. Coxe's Hobbema* which is to be sold this week, Knight said Hobbema was a fine painter, but He did not now feel so much interested abt His works as formerly, as we have now painters coming forward in this country, who much surpass Hobbsma.

* This Hobbema was a "Wooded Landscape with Cottages and Figures," Number 21 in Smith's Catalogue Raisonné. In Coxe's sale on April 23, 1807, it fetched £588. His fine collection of 70 pictures was sold by Peter Coxe, the auctioneer, who had been a collector for thirty years, and purchased from the Calonne collection, the Orleans, Sir William Hamilton, Laborde, and others.

April 13. Thomson's I went to at 4 past 1 o'clock, & met Sir John St. Aubyn, Mr. Penwarne, & Prince Hoare.

Opie's Origin

Mr. Penwarne sd. that Opie was born at St. Agnes, a village in Cornwall, abt. 4 or 5 miles from Falmouth. That His Father was not in an low a situation as has been reported. That He was a Carpenter & Joiner in a decent situation of Life. Opie's education must have been very limited, as good schools were not established in that part, but He was taught to read & write. The first time that He showed an inclination to drawing has been thus related by His father. He was acquainted with a young man of the name of Mark Pater who was now a Captain of Artillery. Opie happened to call upon Him & saw a drawing of a Butterfly made by Him, was seized with a desire to attempt to make one like it. In this [he] succeeded so well as to become quite eager to make further attempts in drawing. His Father kept a Horse on which Opie rode to Truro & purchased some pencils & colours.

Penwarne told me that Opie's Sister had informed Him that Opie was at ten years of age a very good Acrobatician, & at that early age He set up a sort of school, & taught writing and accounts to many much older than Himself. Before He was twelve years of age He had to sometime been under the tuition of Dr. Wolcot so far as to receive advice & instruction in painting, the Doctor having much love for the art & a few pictures in His possession. He began to paint portraits at a very early period, and when not more than thirteen years of age went to Paigstow a town at some distance where He remained three months and at the end of that period returned to His Father's dressed in a new suit of cloaths & having twenty or thirty guineas in his pocket.

Prince Hoare spoke of the Jealousy which at one period subsisted between Opie & Northcote. Wolcot had been very much with Northcote but was considered afterwards as urging Opie against him. First on this in allusion to a picture of the death of James, King of Scotland painted by Opie, in which Opie represented Wolcot & Himself as two of the Assassins, made the following Epigram, Northcote's name being James—

Unhappy James! What mercy can't thou find,
When Wolcot strikes before, & Opie stabs behind!

Westall I met. He told me Sandby had reported at the Academy that Sir George Beaumont had called upon Him yesterday to leave where His own & Wilkie's picture were placed in the Exhibition. Sir George said that "The Academy ought to set aside their laws upon this occasion & elect Wilkie an Academician at once, without requiring that He shd. first be an Associate." Sandby spoke of it as a very stran

JOHN OWEN, D.D., R.A.
From a Portrait in the British Museum

proposal & Northcote remarked that if such a circumstance shd. ever happen it ought to be in a case where the performance should be in the highest & not the lowest department of art. -

April 14. -At Eleven I went to Mr. Coutta and was an hour with Mr. Antrobus and Coutta Trotter upon Lawrence's business. The King's pictures they considered to be quite distinct from, and as an Income over and above the £2700 a year mentioned as professional Income [earned by Lawrence]. The rectrs. for the King's pictures had been assigned over to Mr. Coutta so that no other person could receive that money from Government. They appeared perfectly satisfied that it wd. be best to let the matters remain in my hands, & I told them I wd. from time to time inform them how everything goes on.--- April 15. Penwarne told me that He first knew Opie in the year 1777. That in 1778 Lord Bateman was upon the Coast of Cornwall commanding a Regiment of Militia, & Opie painted a portrait of Himself for His Lordship. Opie was attentive to money in little matters, but He had liberal feelings. He gave support to His Father & Mother & Sister; and wd. have had His nephew brought up to study the law, but His conduct was bad, & He is now a private Soldier in a regiment of Militia.

Dardanelles Forced

J. Osley's I dined at. -Accounts were circulated today of Admiral Louis* having forced the passage of the Dardanelles, and brought the Turks to negotiate a peace & separate themselves from the French. -

On April 17th Porington entered in a small note-book: -The Newspapers today confirmed the report that on the 18th. of February the English Squadron consisting of the - guns		guns

Royal George	100	Republie	74
Windsor Castle	110	Thunderer	74
Canopus	74	Standard	64
Pompée	74

4 frigates & several Fire ships and Bomb-Vessels passed through the passage of the Dardanelles, overwhelming the Turkish fleet of one sail of the Line and Six frigates, & came to anchor within gun shot of the Seraglio at Constantinople on the even'g of the 20th.

* Sir Thomas Louis (1759-1807), Rear-Admiral, was a native of Exeter. In November, 1806, he was in command of a small squadron to examine the defences of the Dardanelles, as a preliminary to the forcing of the passage by Admiral Sir J. T. Duckworth in February 1807. Louis' ship, the Canopus, was fired at by the Turks on its return through the Straits on March 3. She was considerably damaged, but only three men were wounded. Duckworth's squadron afterwards went to the coast of Egypt, under the command of Louis who died on board Canopus on May 17, 1807.

Imprudent Conduct

April 16. Lawrence told us that Lord Whitworth yesterday mentioned to Him the imprudent conduct of the Marquis of Douglas at the Court of Petersburg. The British Ambassador delivered to the Lordship a statement of certain grievances which they had no complaint of and expressed strongly their sentiments of the government of Russia. The Lordship instead of considering the representation as coming from him such a statement as it might be proper to present, sent the paper itself, in which was language improper to be used when a government was to be addressed, & accordingly the Russian Government was not satisfied with it that Lord Douglas wd. have been recalled if the late Change of Ministry had not taken place. Lord Lawrence however has been appointed in His place. Lord Whitworth sd. that when Lord Lewison was at Petersburg in that capacity before He did not well accommodate himself to their habits.

The Nobility dine at three or four o'clock, leave their coats &c. at early hours, & sup at Ten o'clock & retire to rest soon after. Lord Lewison on the contrary did not vary from his habits whilst in London, but passed much of the day in bed, and sat up late. Lord Whitworth also mentioned that the Russian Ministers do their public business on a manner different from those at other courts. They sleep whilst standing at a fire, or riding out & seemingly when in easy & accidental intercourse with those from other courts. Lord Whitworth was Minister at Petersburg several years.

Mr. Angerstein mentioned the tardiness of the late Administration to grant money to Russia. The Ministers of that Court said "We can defend our Country, but if we advance from it we require pecuniary assistance."—They desired to have a Loan raised in England to be repaid by Russia but our late Ministry were more willing to give a specific Sum, than to adopt the other proposal.

Extravagance

Hoare spoke of the rapture of Cumberland* upon reading "Shee's Rhymes on Art."—He had spoken lightly of Shee's poetry, which caused Hoare to ask Him whether He had ever read it. He sd. He had not. Hoare pressed Him to do it; upon which He & Sir James Bland Burge read "the Rhymes on Art." together; and both were in such transport with it, that they immediately took a Coach & drove to Shee's and introduced themselves to Him, as strangers who were gratified in the highest degree by what He had written. This morning Hoare saw Cumberland at His lodgings, and heard him declare that "The Rhymes"

* Richard Cumberland (1732-1813), dramatist, who wrote an op. called the "Exotic" in conjunction with Sir John Bland Burge. See Index under Cumberland, Vol. II and under Burge, Vol. II., page 233a.

† See Index, Vol. III.

on Art is the best poem ancient or modern in our language. Hoare mentioned Milton at which Cumberland hesitated a little, but declared that Dryden & Pope fell before it.

April 19. - Lyaons called. He said that from £500 a yr. the amount of his Salary as Keeper of the Records in the Tower, deductions are made for Land Tax, Income Tax, and Fees, which reduce it to £290.

CHAPTER XXXVII

1847

The Duke and Duchess

April 20. Mrs. Stoddart called & brought her John & Elnger, being on Her way to Windsor Castle. Captain Stoddart* being appointed upon the Staff to Major Genl. Pakeney, which gives him £100 a year additional Pay. He was a little while ago in that capacity to Genl. Lennox (now Duke of Richmond) who she says is a most friendly man & perfectly free from pride, but the Duchess is of an opposite disposition, being excessively proud, & disdainful of persons of inferior rank. They have 13 Children. She is very jealous of Him. The Duke is a social man, & in Company will sit to the last, but if He happens to visit a man who only drinks water He will join Him in that, being perfectly accommodating. While in Camp, he lay in a small tent, wrapped at back round Him, & made a Saddle His pillow. Since he became Duke, no change has taken place in Him.

Harry and Titian

April 21. At Eleven o'Clock I called on Mr. Nathaniel Holland. We talked of the sale of Harry's pictures. He said Harry's "Ruth & Pandora" was a very incompetent attempt to do something great. It was deficient both in design, in form, & in coloring. Jupiter was a huge * Captain, afterwards Major, Stephen Stoddart (1792-1842), of the South Dragoons, was married to Katherine Randal (1791-1844). He was thrown from his horse and killed near Limerick in 1842.

Hulton, Charles Stoddart, born in 1806, was at first in the army, but, placed on half-pay in 1834, with the rank of captain, he became secretary to the Royal United Service Institution and secretary to the Institute of Civil Engineers. In 1840 he went to Persia as Military Secretary to the future Sir Henry Ellis, and was in the Persian camp during the Siege of Herat by Mahomed Shah, until he left with John Lubbock (now Sir John) McNeill. In June, 1838, however, he was sent back with a message to the Shah, who was afraid of the threat of war and raised the siege.

Shortly after the retirement of the Persian army Stoddart was more than once imprisoned by the Ameer of Bokhara, whither he had gone as diplomatic business, and finally (on June 17, 1842), he and Arthur Conolly were by the Ameer's orders, beheaded in the public square in Bokhara city. Charles Stoddart was described as "a very clever, well educated, and agreeable man," and Conolly said of him, "he is such a friend as a man would desire to have in adversity."

figure in the upper parts but the lower limbs were so small in proportion that such a figure could not stand. It was the case with several other figures in that picture; and many of the limbs appeared to have been executed in imitation of parts which He had looked at in the antique, but these limbs were not of the same character with the other parts of the figure to which He had attached them. What attempt there was at colouring was as bad as possible, He seemed to have no sense of it. On the whole He ad. Barry Had talked & bullied people into a belief of His being a great artist. He said His Venus rising from the Sea was His best performance. In that He had the Venus of Medici in his eye, & made something of it, but He had spoilt the picture by rubbing a brick dust colour over the upper part of the figure.

He spoke of the Bacchus & Ariadne by Titian belonging to Lord Kinnaird. He said it was impossible that Titian could have left the Sky in the state it is, almost pure Ultramarine, like a Lapis Lazuli stone, while another part of the sky is quite Hot. He did not like the figure of Bacchus leaping from His Car, nor that of Ariadne. In some parts there is fine colour, but on the whole it is a picture more fit for an Artist to examine for the purpose of studying what is good in it, than desirable to hang up in a room for general admiration. He thought the picture had been in the hands of bungling picture menders.

He mentioned Pilkie with great approbation, saying that His merit was of the right sort, no true in all respects.

He complained of not having a good painting room at His House in the Country. He had no light good to paint by but what fired the South & He had been much embarrassed by it.

Wordsworth as Art Critic

April 28. - Sir George & Lady Beaumont & Wordsworth called, & I went with them to Grosvenor Square, & saw a picture by Wilson sent by Mr. Bowles to be disposed of. - Rogers had seen it. Sir George proposed 100 guineas to be the price. Segor had looked at it, & thought the edges of some of the trees were painted by Carr. I told Sir George that the whole was by Wilson.

Wordsworth said, He thought Historical subjects shd. never be introduced into Landscape but where the Landscape was to be subservient to them. - Where the Landscape was intended principally to impress the mind, figures, other than such as are general, such as may a thousand times appear, and seem accidental, and not particularly to draw the attention, are injurious to the effect which the Landscape shd. produce as a scene founded on an observation of nature. - He thought this picture by Wilson excellent, but objected to the foreground dark trees on the left hand which seemed to Him like a skreen, put before the more distant parts. - Sir George shewed me a small landscape brought from Italy by Coleridge which I thought an indifferent picture with. any appearance of original study.

A Card and Apology

May 2. At noon Mr. Malone called having just recd. a note from Mr. Windham signifying that He had not, He supposed through mistake, recd. a Card to the Academy dinner and apprehending it might not be known to the Members, & that He might be supposed to have omitted to send an answer, desiring Mr. Malone to mention to the members that He had not recd. a card. I told Malone that this was another proof of the neglect of Richards [the Secretary], for that Mr. Windham, with other great political Characters, are always to be invited, & so it stands in the Invitation List. On this Malone sd. He wd. walk to Mr. Windham's in Pallmall & set all to right.

The Academy I went to at ½ past 4 & told West & Owen what had happened. West expressed much mortification at the misconduct of Richards & desired me to do whatever might seem proper. I therefore wrote a note to Mr. Windham in the name of the President & Council, with a Card and apology, & Owen copied & sent it.

I then returned home to dress & went back to the Academy before 5 & saw the Prince of Wales & the Duke of Kent looking at the pictures in the Library attended by West. I had conversation with many. Mr. Angerstein took me to the door of Richards's room to speak to me abt. Lawrence's [financial] affairs. He sd. what had been done was a last stake; He noticed His having a right disposition but yielded to influence with respect to His affairs. Mr. Angerstein did not remain to dinner being affected by Jaundice & looked very yellow. He & everybody that mentioned the Prince noticed how very ill He looked.

Too Near the Prince

I had placed Lord Thomond's name next to the Prince of Wales's seat, but He desired me to remove it 2 seats from Him. I spoke to Mr. Windham abt. the Card not having been sent earlier. He replied very pleasantly "That the dinner to Him was so much an object, that He could not suffer the disappointment when it might have arisen from a mistake."—Sir N. Holland sd. to me that when He contemplated the picture of Sir F. Baring by Lawrence, and thought of the period when Hudson was considered at the head of the Art it was surprising that such a picture should have been made, and authorised me to tell Lawrence so. He said that picture was of first-rate quality, in which opinion Genl. Duncanson joined him.—Owen said to me "That He felt what Lawrence's picture was, That it was high art & quite His own: He added that He knew very well where He himself stood & was not deceiving Himself," meaning as much below that excellence.—Mr. Bernard asked me "whether I did not think a premium for the best Historical picture of a subject from the English History for which Academicians only shd. be competitors might not be proper to propose from the British Institution." I expressed doubt of the Members of the Academy being willing to be Competitors.—

Hoppner told me that the Prince of Wales sat to Him abt. a fortnight before the pictures were sent to the Exhibition. As Hoppner had been several times disappointed by the Prince, He then said, He feared He shd. not be able to finish it in time, adding, that His bodily health did not enable [him] to make great exertions, upon which the Prince put His hands to Hoppner's cheeks and patting them said, "Oh, you have constitution enough to do anything." Hoppner said the Prince had at times a gracious manner that was most engaging & subduing. The Prince then buckled on a belt which belonged to His Robes & found it too wide by 10 or 12 inches, so much had He shrunk in size. He seemed sensible that His constitution was in a bad state. The Duke of Clarence being present told Him "He wd. not live three months." At dinner I observed He only eat Fish, & salad & a little pudding, & drank no wine: but He ate some Home radishes at the end of the dinner. He had none of the joy and gaiety, & spirit of address which I had at other times seen in Him. Hoppner said He is supposed to have an Atrophy, That He does not abstain from meat & wine from their being forbidden by his Physicians, but from [the] nauseating [effect of] both.—

We began dinner abt.  $\frac{1}{4}$  past 6 and the Prince retired at  $\frac{1}{4}$  past 8 accompanied by the Duke of Kent. West had given "Health to the Prince of Wales," upon which there was much chopping, which expressed the general feeling that He wanted it.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

1841

Wordsworth's Opinion

May 4. At noon went to the Exhibition, just opened. I there met many. Peter Cox* thought Lawrence's picture of Sir Francis Baring too gay in colour, & the expression of Mr. John Baring & Mr. Wall flattered. He said the flesh was also too purple. He admitted that the picture had great force and overpowered those of Owen and Thomson placed next to it. Borden on the contrary thought the picture a noble piece of art, finely coloured & and Lawrence was a great creature. Wordsworth & his wife or sister I met. He thought it a poor exhibition, & she said it was the worst she had ever seen. [I saw] Ward I met. He thought Lawrence's picture equal to the works of Van Dyke or Rubens. He invited me to meet Lord Somersville & Mr. West at his house at dinner, on Saturday next, his landlady bring that she to stand Godfather to one of his children.

Turner's Crude Blotches

May 5. — West I called on & found Ward colouring a print from West's King Lear, which having been bought by Fulton (the American engineer and artist) is with his Ophelia, to be shipped for America next week. West said Calcutt was falling ill; His trees were like fried parley. He had been to Turner's gallery & was disgusted with what he found there; views on the Thames, crude blotches, nothing could be more vicious. At best, He said, Turner was only copying himself. He said Lawrence was studying his art with energy, and was adopting the true mode of proceeding viz: to begin & finish what He may begin, instead of filling His House with dead coloured pictures. I said He shd. be distracted to be in a House crowded with pictures begun.

* Peter Cox, who died in 1844, was a son of Dr. Cox, physician to George III's household, and brother of the Venerable William Cox, Archbishop of York. Educated at Charterhouse School, which he left at the age of fifteen, he later became an auctioneer and disposed some important collections of pictures. Cox, who made a fortune and retired from business, was the author of the poem which imitated Hoppner. Published anonymously in 1807, it was entitled "Another Wood or Two, or Architectural Hints in Lines to those Royal Academicians who are Painters, addressed to them on their re-election of Benjamin West, Esq., to the President's Chair." He also wrote "The Social Day: a Poem in Four Cantos," 1811.

Mrs. West spoke to me of the little encouragement Mr. West had met with. She sd. any notion that Mr. West was rich was unfounded. That Mr. West never had a shilling in the funds in his life, & that she could say more. She said His easy temper had caused Him to allow His sons to be brought up imprudently. They could contribute nothing to lessen His expenses. She said she had an intention of going to Bath on acct. of Her paralytic complaint, but Mr. West could not afford it.

West walked with me to my House to see the Susannah, by Rembrandt, and declared it to be on this examination, a work of the first quality of Rembrandt, and agreed that it would be advisable for the Academy to purchase it. He sd. He shd. converse with Richards abt. giving up the duties of Secretary. I told Him I thought Tresham wd. try to obtain the office. He sd. if He got it, He (West) wd. soon quit the Presidency. - He said Rigaud had not [the] temper for it. He knew only of One Man [? Farington] who was fit for it.

Farington and Pitt's Portrait

May 7. - Passed the whole morning with Lawrence whilst He painted a portrait of Mr. Pitt from Mr. Angerstein's Bnat of Him by Nollekin & from his remembrance of Mr. Pitt. I sat to Him to enable Him to judge of the colouring. He finished the head & I thought it an admirable likeness.

Lawrence told me that whilst Lord Thurlow was sitting to Him for his portrait He said He had been out of luck when He sat to Hoppner, who had not "delivered Himself of the Archbishop of York" meaning that the Archbishop having lately sat to Him that impression was on his mind & caused Him to make a resemblance between them.

May 8. - Meadows, the Engraver, called, & I gave Him a note of introduction to Lady Thomond. He said it took Him 2 years to engrave the whole length portrait of the Duke of Leeds from Lawrence's picture & He had but 200 guineas for doing it.

Turner and Wilkie

Wilkie thinks his [own] picture wants richness of colour in some respects. Sir George thinks it might be improved by adding a rich colour to those abt. the Blind fiddler, perhaps an Eastern vessel; or warm reflected lights on the Chair might give it. He sd. Sir John Leicester had told him that He had asked Turner the price of His picture of a Forge. - Turner answered that He understood Wilkie was to have 100 guineas for His Blind Fiddler & He should not rate His picture at a less price. Rogers has given Sir George for Mr. Bowles 100 guineas for the picture of Villa Madama by [Richard] Wilson. It is a three-quarter size & the price Wilson had was 25 guineas. Sir George expressed high approbation of a half length portrait of Lord Buckinghamshire by Beechey now in the Exhibition, & thought it, next to Wilkie's picture, the best in the room. He mentioned that before the Academy dinner Hoppner had said to Lord St. Asaph, "We shall have Sir G. Beaumont there, carrying everybody up to Wilkie's picture, and not suffering any other to be looked at; adding, Sir George does great harm to the Art."

Jokes had passed with Hervey upon Lawrence's picture of Sir F. Riving. Sir George remarked on Sir Fane's turning his head from those He was listening to as it to hear Thunder. Hervey sd. He turned His head from Mr. Wall as it the latter on looking on the Book before [him] announced a deficit of fructus.

A Chattering Display

Sir George sd. Owen is improving much. He sd. he hoped [Payne] Knight had enough of what He liked in Westall, in his picture of Flora; meaning the gaudiness of it. He remarked on Westall's strongly speaking of the merit of the water colour drawings now exhibiting by that [the Water Colour] Society, & sd. He wondered at it. For His own part when He went into the room there was such a want of harmony, such a chattering display, that it afforded him little pleasure. There were some effects of raye &c. that were ingenious, but no breadth or solidity. -- [Watwick] Smith's* view of the Colosseum was the best in the room.

West had spoke of the state of the Arts. He said there was no encouragement for the higher branches, not so much as there was 40 years ago. All the encouragement went for trifling works.

Daniell† I dined at. -- Daniell told me of a conversation which Humphry reported to Him as having had with Sir G. Beaumont respecting Wilkie's picture. Sir George had spoken of it as being perfect, which fired Humphry, who opposed that opinion, sd. He had seen the School of Athens & other works of Raphael &c. &c. [in the Vatican] that Wilkie's picture was upon a wrong principle of perspective in composition, the smaller figures being in the front, & the larger behind. Sir George noticed this conversation to-day, & sd. Humphry appeared to be superannuated.

* See Index, Vols. I. and III.

† Thomas Daniell, R.A. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

CHAPTER XXXIX

1807

A Rembrandt for £200

May 12. Called on Westall. By a Law passed in 1801 moved by Maxman & seconded by Daniell "not more than £50 in one year can be granted as assistance to any Academician, Associate or Other person witht. the concurrence of a general Assembly & the sanction of the King," therefore the Council having already granted to Nixon [A.R.A.] 50 guineas cannot do more than pay His pension for this year, & recommend to the Council of the next year to grant Him £50 after Christmas. A vote was passed to purchase the Susanuah by Rembrandt for £200. It was unanimously agreed in.*

May 13. This day I sat to Lawrence for the beginning of a Three quarter portrait.—Lyons came there and thought Mr. Pitt's portrait wonderfully like.—

Wordsworth

Lawrence was at Southey's last night where Richd. Sharpe expressed disapprobation of Wordsworth's poems just published, saying He had carried His system of simplicity too far, and had proceeded to puerility. Sir George Beaumont after Sharpe was gone sd. to Lawrence that "He supposed the Blood Hounds would now be upon Wordsworth."—

May 14.—The Princess of Wales went to Court after an absence of two years.

* The Royal Academy apparently never purchased the "Susanua." According to Mr. Holsted de Cresset, this version of "Susanua" was in the collection of Edmund Burke (1769), sold in the sale of pictures of Sir Joshua Reynolds in 1791, and afterwards passed, respectively, to Sir R. Lechmere, Charles Sedelmeyer, and the Kaiser Friedrich Museum, Berlin, where it was in 1911.

† William Southey, poet. See Index, Vol. II.

‡ Richard (Conversation) Sharp (1759-1835) was a hatter who made a fortune and took a keen interest in politics and literature. His friends included Dr. Johnson, Burke, Samuel Rogers, Sydney Smith, and Wordsworth, who said that Sharp knew Italy better than anyone he had ever met. See Index, Vol. I.

May 18. Lawrence called on. He had just rec'd. a letter from a Mr. Evans of Norwich requesting him to paint a whole length portrait of Mr. Coke [of Norfolk] *

May 17. Hopper called on & went with him to Sir John Leveson's & saw the Collection of pictures by Dutch Artists only. Hopper told me that Sir G. Beaumont & Sir A. Hume did not approve the pictures by Turner. He sd. Sir George was inclined to remark that Wilkie does not imitate the surface of objects faithfully, but rather makes them all appear as of the same quality. He spoke of Lawrence's picture of Sir P. Hume &c. & sd. there was much in it which He could not do, but still He saw in Lawrence's picture something wanting which He could do; meaning in the colour & general effect. He sd. there would never make a good painter. He had not an eye.

May 19. Lawrence dined with. He had started a long conversation with Sathby respecting G. H. [Sir George Beaumont] & the latter acknowledged that He had not a strong mind, & could not be made to be pursued deeply upon any subject. Lawrence gave His own opinion fully. The other remarked that G. H. always had a novelty to support, but never seemed to dwell upon the merits of those who were established.

Wilkie Might Make £1,000

Mrs. Phipps, while speaking of Wilkie, said "How much might He not make by exhibiting His pictures for his own advantage?" Sir George [Beaumont] sd. He might make 1,000. We were of one mind abt. it. He mentioned that He & Lord Mulgrave had each ordered two pictures from Him, & He shd. expect to have another in addition to that He had already, at sometime. He made some observations, "That Wilkie might acquire more transparency." He should not look any longer at the pictures of Teniers but those of Ortolan, & Roubrant.

The King's Navy

May 23.—Called on Lord Gardner at breakfast time at Mrs. Cornwall's [a relative of Farington]. Lord Gardner told us that He had applied to the Admiralty to make William [Farington's nephew] a Captain but had been refused, as it was said, "from an objection to opening the door to promotion."—He therefore said William must have patience. He sd. He had thought the promotion might have been granted to Him on acct. of his having left Ireland. He said He had got William appointed to the Ville de Paris in which Ship He [Lord Gardner] was to Hoist His Flag,—and all His officers were to be sent to Her. He saw the King on Wednesday last, who told Him the Ville de Paris was a better ship than the Hibernia as the latter carried Her lower parts too near the water.—The King sd. alluding to administrations "that He did not like changes,

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

- to which His Lordship replied "that He hoped His Majesty wd. have no more changes."

Blackwall I went to, where in Perry & Wells's Dock a 74 gun Ship was launched, named the Elizabeth. Lord Mulgrave [first Lord of the Admiralty] threw a Bottle at Her Bow & named Her when she began to move. There was a great concourse of people. The Launch took place at 35 minutes after 2, & at 3 a large Assembly was formed in one of the work Houses, where 5 tables were placed & covered with a Cold Collation of which I judge goxopetuous partook. This lasted half an Hour. Toasts appropriate & cheers were given.

Mr. Coke Talked

May 26. Mr. Coke of Norfolk sat yesterday to Lawrence for a whole length portrait. He said that painted by Opie had not been approved. Lawrence said Mr. Coke talked incessantly, & so moved His head about, that it was very difficult to obtain a true view of his face. I recommended to Him to mention to Mr. Coke that He must for a time be steady in sitting or no faithful portrait of him could be given.

May 27. - Lawrence I dined with. - We talked of his having parties at his house upon the Plan Sir Joshua Reynolds had, & He proposed to commence by inviting Wm. Spencer, Sharpe, Sotheby, & Keble. - Sharpe thinks highly of "Knight's enquiry into the principles of Taste," & says He had read it over three times & on the last reading thought more highly of it than before. Lawrence thinks Knight will be mortified by Hoppner's remarks upon it.* Knight tells a story well, but while He endeavours to excite mirth in others laughs a good deal himself. On the contrary Sir Geo. Beaumont while He attempts to produce the same effect in those who listen preserves His gravity & that most when He comes to the point of ludicrous description. Lawrence thinks Sir George's manner on such occasions more artificial than that of Knight. Knight's forte is discussion & description; He has no talent for rapport. Bowles has something of poetry in what He writes: but has a good deal of folly about Him. -

* To the Artist, May 23, 1807, Hoppner contributed a scathing review of Payne Knight's "Enquiry into the Principles of Taste."

CHAPTER XI.

1807

Coke of Norfolk

May 28. Lawrence called in the evening. Mr. Coke of Norfolk sat to him today & read a letter He had just rec<sup>d</sup>. from York expressing that if Lord Milton should not be able to make a successful effort at the election on the day following viz. the 27th inst. they should begin to despair. Mr. Coke acknowledged the address of Willertone, but signified that He had left those who when in Administration had carried through His measure of the Slave trade, & to whom He stood indebted for it. Lawrence replied that Mr. Willertone might have due sense of the value of their assistance & of their good conduct in that instance, but it did not lay him under an obligation to support them in other matters contrary to his judgment. At another time Mr. Coke said, It seemed odd that a man of Willertone's narrow fortune with little property in the County, should oppose Himself to such families as those of Ld. Fitzwilliam & Lord Harewood. Thus showing His own feeling of the claims of Aristocratic power. He spoke of the Norfolk election & said "He had fought the County". He said the expences on both sides at the election in October last, He & Woolham against Coll. Wedehouse cost £70,000.

Dishonest Land Steward

He said that He had no Land Steward, but did all that business himself & has done it during many years. There had been a strong lesson in his own family to induce Him to undertake it. A Boy of the name of Caldwell was recommended by a person at Norwich to the late Earl of Leicester, for some family purpose, & came to Hotham with half a guinea in his pocket. He was gradually advanced by the Earl & at last became Land Steward in which capacity He amassed £100,000. The following instance showed how He carried matters on. A Tenant of Lord Leicester being desirous to have his Lease renewed sent Caldwell a goose pye, & with it a letter in which He mentioned that Mr. Caldwell would find an Egg, which He desired him to look into. It contained £2000 with which Caldwell was so well satisfied that the Lease was so granted.--When Mr. Coke took possession of the estate He was determined to dismiss Caldwell but the latter insisted that under the will of Lord Leicester He could retain His office. Mr. Coke went into Chancery with him & in 3 years had a decision in His favour. The above story wd. have been brought forward had the Law suit been continued as the man who gave the £2000 acknowledged it.--

LOKE OF HOTHAM

From a Portrait by Gainsborough, the property of the Earl of Leicester.

Business First

Mr. Coke said that He does all His business in the morning between the Hours of 7 & 10 after which time He is at leisure to shoot or for any other amusement. He said that He makes it a rule to answer every letter the day he receives it.--He told Lawrence that He is now 56 years old.--Lawrence said He looks like a man of 40 years old & not more.--He spoke of Sir Francis Burdett & said He had seen a great deal of Him & thought Him sincere in His professions; that He was a great Advocate for an Agrarian Law, & declared that were it adopted He should willingly give up all beyond £50 a yr. & that mankind wd. be in a happier state. --

[William] Cobbett* was mentioned & Mr. Coke spoke of His being a strong though rough writer. Lawrence remarked that though He wrote strongly He had not yet been able to convince the people that Mr. Pitt was "a shallow-headed fellow." Mr. Coke sd. that in the whole length portrait Opie had painted of him he had totally failed.

May 29. Wilson's I went to in the even'g & heard Mrs. Miles play on the Harpsichord. She teaches the Princess Charlotte of Wales & has £300, a year for it.

Lawrence I saw in the afternoon. Charles Long† & Sir Abraham [Hume] had called to see the portrait of Mr. Pitt. Lawrence saw that Long did not approve the likeness; but said it was a very fine picture, & like, & that the Coat was the best black He had ever seen painted. Sir Abraham seemed to think it more like than Long did. Mr. Dacre Adams‡ & Mr. Courtenay§ afterwards met them & Long said that the picture was not so like as that by Hoppner but was a better picture. This made no difference in the opinion of Adams & Courtenay. --West I met at Lawrence's. He said the picture was as like as if Mr. Pitt had sat for it, and there were in it many circumstances expressed with all the care of nice attention to the individual. --

Unprincipled Politicians

June 1. --I had company to dinner. We dined in my great painting room in which & in the drawing room I had a fire. Lawrence told me that Mr. Coke sat to Him today, & while sitting recd. a letter from York

* See Index, Vols. I. and II.

† See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

‡ William Dacres Adams, Commissioner of Woods and Forests.

§ John Courtenay, M.P. See Vols. I. and III.

stating that Lord Milton was behind Lord Eldon* as well as Wilberforce. Mr. Coke then said He gave up all hopes of Lord Milton succeeding, a new Trialles might put the long walk to Milton's voters which wd delay the polling & prevent His bringing up a sufficient number. Coke added that He well knew the management of Elections & what might be done to counter delay. He told Eldon that He dined with Sir Howick the day before, who told Him that they (the opposition) should number up in the House of Commons, & that very early after the meeting of parliament, they should bring out a proposition to try the strength of the two parties. He added that it was no secret that government mean to proceed against Sir Francis Buckeridge on account of His scandalous address to the Electors of Westminster, & that the Opposition meant to support Him. Such is the important policy they carried of a political party which Condemning the act of Sir Francis, wd support Him notwithstanding to create difficulty to the Ministry.

An Expert Engraver

Wm. Daniell (R.A.) told me that John Byrne finding no profits to arise from the publication of plates to accompany Lyson's Britannia has declined having any further concern in it, as He cannot afford to wait for profits. Daniell & Davis applied to Wm. Daniell to make drawings for a continuation of the work & to superintend the engravings & to become a partner in it. He consulted me upon it this morning & I advised Him not to engage in it but upon specific terms to be paid for whatever He might do. He told me that He has become so expeditious in executing works in Aqua tinta that He has been able to execute plate for the publication of Animals in one day, & that He charged Ten guineas for each plate. He said that He had lately executed 20 plates for Sir John Carr's Stranger in Holland, to be published by Philipps & that Philipps paid Him £100 for them, & that He executed the whole of them in six weeks. They were done from sketches made by Garbutt & Philipps wished much to have his (Daniell's) name to them as the engraver, but that He wd. not consent to, as He wd. not appear in the capacity but where He worked from his own drawings. He sd. the great facility which He had acquired in executing in Aqua tinta was obtained by the most severe application for Seven years together after He arrived in England from India. He said He had worked from 10 in the morning till 12 at night.

June 2.—Marchi (Sir Joshua Reynolds' Assistant) called. I had seen the Exhibition & spoke highly of Watkins's picture of the Blue Fiddler. He said it was so sober & solid & well managed as to put down all those that were near it. Westall's Flora appeared fiery & poor. It; and Turners Forge limsy. He much disliked Northcote's portrait of the King on Horseback, - said the Horse was hard & lony, & the background tame & without taste.

* Edward Iacobson, afterwards first Earl of Harwood. See Vols. I. and III.
† See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

CHAPTER XLI

1807

Bishop and Princess

June 2. [The Rev. Mr.] Hughes called.—He told me the Average income of Seven years past, of a Canon Residentiary of St. Pauls is £1795 a year. That He shall be required to reside three months in the year unless prevented by illness or some other reasonable cause.—He said He was just come from the Bishop of Salisbury (Dr. Fisher) and had found Him in a state of Hurry of spirits in consequence of an interview with the Prince of Wales yesterday. The Bishop, as Preceptor to the Princess Charlotte of Wales, has felt much anxiety on account of the great negligence shewn in educating & attending the Princess. The arrangement in the first instance was likely to produce difficulty.—The King appointed the men who were to superintend & give instruction to the young Princess, & the Prince of Wales appointed the Women. Difference of opinion & sentiment has accordingly prevailed among them, & the Bishop has complained of the bad mode of proceeding; while on the contrary the women, viz: Lady Clifford* &c. have prejudiced the Prince of Wales against the Bishop, who has been treated with great disrespect by His Royal Highness. He said He had written a letter to the Prince respecting the young Princess & no notice was taken of it. The Prince had passed Him, had looked at him with, noticing Him.

Royal Etiquette

In this situation feeling it necessary to do something, about six weeks ago the Bishop went to Windsor & applied to the Princess Elizabeth to obtain that He might speak to the Queen on the subject. A time was fixed and it caused a notification from the King for the Bishop * Lady Clifford or de Clifford was Princess Charlotte's governess, and, according to Lady Charlotte Bury, in the "Court of England under George IV.," Lady de Clifford seems to have been "a good natured, common-place person, and the young Princess appears to be attached to her, which is a good indication of her Ladyship's temper." The same diarist states that the ordinary Royal Family dinner party always weighed heavily on the Princess, whose mother thought that Lady de Clifford kept the Princess Charlotte too rigidly righteous. Lady de Clifford, however, assured the Princess of Wales that "Princess Charlotte has liberty enough with me." Lady de Clifford died in South Ainsley Street in August, 1828, aged eighty-five years.

to come to Him the next morning. The Bishop went to the King & was with His Majesty an Hour, but to His surprise and mortification the King did not say one word respecting the young Princess or those about Her. The Etiquette with the King is that His Majesty must commence the conversation à propos His subject. Whether from the King at that [time] being troubled with the Political changes which were taking place, whether from domestication arising from a wish not to be troubled the effect of blindness & old age coming upon Him, so it was that nothing was said & the Bishop returned as He went. Feeling it however necessary that something shd. be done, He yesterday obtained an interview with the Prince of Wales & after a conversation of two hours left Him as He thinks mutually dissatisfied.

In this state things cannot remain; either the Bishop must give up His situation or the Women must give way. The Bishop complains of most improper proceeding in respect of want of attention to the young Princess, both in what regards Her personally & to Her instruction. In the afternoon she is left solely in company with a female servant only which, though she appears to be a well disposed young person, the Bishop deems to be highly improper. Her manners are not attended to. As an instance the Bishop noticed that Her nose appearing to be wiped she did not apply Her Handkerchief, but wiped Her nose with Her Sleeve as vulgar people do.

The Bishoprick of Salisbury which the Bishop has very lately obtained is worth £4,000 a year.

June 3. - Lane* I called on at 41 Charing Cross & found him copying a portrait of Mr. Pitt for Hoppner. He desired to mention to me that Hoppner called upon him a week or so days since & after looking at the Copies making by Lane walked about the room & then said "That Mr. Pitt being dead, people began to forget him, and He did not think that He should want more Copies." He then asked Lane how much He paid for His lodgings & was informed by Lane that He paid a guinea and a Hall a week & had taken them for Six months. Hoppner then said He wd. pay Lane what wd. be due for His lodgings for the time He had engaged them. Lane reminded Him that He had said that after He shd. have finished the copies of Mr. Pitt's portrait which had been proposed Hoppner sd. He wd. find Him other employ. Nothing further passed of an explanatory kind; but on Saturday last Hoppner sent to Him an order for another copy of Mr. Pitt's portrait making the fifth ordered.—From this I plainly saw that Hoppner was not satisfied with Lane's copies & wished to stop His proceeding to make more. —

Eggs and Splnach

We [Steers and Farlington] went to Sagar's the picture dealer. He told us that Barretts popularity was so great as a painter that 30 years ago He was glad to get what He could from Him to sell again & paid Him high prices. He said Barrett carried Himself very high, & spoke of Wilson as being deficient in finishing His pictures. This Segar told to Wilson, who replied "He complains of my not finishing my pictures & I see His eggs & Spinnage," alluding to Barrett's green & yellow colouring.---

* Samuel Lane. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† David Seguler. See Vol. III., page 132.

Segar told us that a Lady had advanced to Stubbs [the animal painter] a considerable sum of money & Had a Bond of Security which gave Her a claim to His pictures &c. These were sold the last week & the prices were kept up by Her agents & many articles were bought in. It is understood that after Her Debt is paid there will be little left. --

A Rembrandt

June 4. --Lawrence I called on & went with Him to De Cort's* & with Him we went to De Lalontaine† at Sabbionaris in Leicester fields, where we saw several pictures lately imported by him; viz: a Sea port landscape, even'g by Claude, of a very warm colour, & fine for which the price named was 3000 guineas. A picture of Boats by Rembrandt, very good. A picture called Corregio, very indifferent, for which 3000 guineas was asked. An exquisite picture by Rembrandt, "The Woman taken in Adultery," for this 5000 guineas was asked. Mr. Angerstein came and looked at the pictures & went away saying, "two things are wanting for such purchases, money & room to place them."

De Cort told us that Lord Aylesford had said to Him that He had undertaken to learn many different things; that it had been his rule to persist in applying to whatever He desired to learn for the space of three years, & if at the end of that time He should not have made sufficient progress He gave up the pursuit. He had studied drawing, & Painting & Architecture; also had learnt to ride the Great Horse, and had become an expert Archer; and other things. -- * Hendrick De Cort was born in Antwerp in 1742, and settling in England, became a regular contributor to the Royal Academy. His pictures, which represented architectural subjects, were painted in the Italian style of the period. He died in London in 1810.

† Lalontaine was a Paris dealer, and in his sale at Christie's in 1807, the Claude "Landscape and Seaport" fetched £1,995, Correggio "Virgin and Child," £3,150; Rembrandt's "The Woman taken in Adultery" was sold for £5,250 and is No. 45 in the National Gallery. [See entry and footnote under June 16.] The "Boats" may be No. 967d in Holstede de Croom's "Catalogue of Dutch Painters."

CHAPTER XLII

1837

A Shameful Affront

June 4. Lawrence told me that Mr. Coke yesterday related to him the particulars of those proceedings at Norwich which caused a petition to be presented against him and Mr. Windham.* It was saying to a affront offered to Mrs. Hervey and Mrs. Atkins, who having rode through the streets of Norwich holding a Poll bearing the Colours of Coll. Woodhouse the other Candidate, some of Coke & Windham's party placed two Prostitutes in a Banquet & drove them about in imitation of those ladies.

Mr. Coke sd. that on hearing of it, He did what He could to prevent it, but found one of His Nephews at the Head of the mob, which He could not stop. Owing to this circumstance, the petition having been successful, Mr. Windham lost His Seat for Norfolk, which otherways He would probably have possessed during His life. At present Windham is doubtful whether He shall be able to secure a seat in Parliament, as did Lord Milton not succeed in Yorkshire, He must vacate the Seat given to Him by Lord Fitzwilliam for Higham Ferrers.

Pocket Boroughs

Government, Mr. Coke said, have bought up all the Boroughs they could and at high prices; giving £4000 for a Seat. Tierney† has been looking out for one, for which He would pay £4000, but has not succeeded.

Lord Thanet has behaved very handsomely to Mr. Courtney, who being very poor, and tired of parliament, His Lordship who had before bought Appleby for Him, now gave Him leave to dispose of a Seat in that Borough, which accordingly Courtney has done to Mr. Childers for £4000.

Mr. Coke spoke of Lord Howick, and sd. "Howick is the first man on his side in the House of Commons, but He is not popular. He * William Windham. See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

† George Tierney. See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

Hot & irritable, but He is sincere & not ill-tempered." He said the Opposition now reckoned upon counting 196 members on their side.

Mr. Coke sd. to Lawrence that Lord Fitzwilliam had sd. He wd. expend £150,000 to carry Yorkshire for his son Lord Milton, yet wd. probably lose it, from not carrying down the London voters at the commencement of the Poll which He might have done for £3000.

Gainsborough Letters

June 5. Dowman called to request my interest to be elected an Academician & hinted that if not chosen He shd. resign His Diploma of Associate. I gave him only general answers, and said His residence not being in London might be an objection. He said that though He now lived at Exeter, He comes to London every year. He said He had married the daughter of the late Mr. Jackson, musician, of Exeter, the intimate acquaintance of Gainsborough.

Mrs. Dowman has in her possession a large Collection of letters* written by Gainsborough to Jackson, in a truly original & singular stile. --Mr. [Thomas] Jackson who was Minister at [Turin] is now at Trieste, finding it difficult to get to England, as Buonaparte is desirous to seize Him.

Nollekens and the Elgin Marbles

June 6. Nollekens had seen the works in Sculpture brought from Athens by Lord Elgin, & did not find anything fine among them. He could not believe them to be the work of Phidias; but on Mostyn† speaking of their fine effect when upon the temples at Athens, He sd. Well, when they are all arranged, and put into such situations as to be properly seen, & the broken parts united we shall see more of them. Nollekens shewed us the Casts taken from the faces of Mr. Pitt, Mr. Fox, & the Duchess of Devonshire after their deaths. He sd. He had refused to make a Bust of the Duchess of Devonshire from the Cast, as He could not undertake to make it like what she appeared to be. In consequence Lady Bessborough had taken away the first Cast which was taken,--- * Mention of these Gainsborough letters is of much interest. It is well known that considerable correspondence passed between the artist and William Jackson, whose music to an adaptation of "Lycidas" was favourably received at Covent Garden. In fact, twelve letters by Gainsborough to Jackson were purchased by the Royal Academy about forty years ago from a great-niece of Jackson's brother Thomas, to whom the musician left them.

According to this story, it would seem that the "large" collection of letters referred to by Parington was a separate batch bequeathed by William Jackson to his daughter, Mrs. Dowman. If that is so, her letters may yet be awaiting discovery. Mrs. Dowman had two sons and one daughter.

† Probably the Mr. Mostyn who married Miss Cecilia Thrale, daughter of Mrs. Piozzi, who on April 4, 1820, wrote: "This moment brought me an agreeable letter from Mrs. Mostyn. She and her youngest son are very gay at Florence, acting English plays, &c. . . . All among Lord and Lady performers, of course." After Mrs. Mostyn's death in 1857 a collection of relics of her mother were sold at Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

Nollekens told us He shd. be 70 years old in August next, & said He was 66 years old in April last.—Nollekens told Him He as well as He did 30 years ago, & added “That He had always a la face,” meaning that His good humour had preserved his health.

Pitt's Bust and Portrait

On our coming away Dance* told me that He thought the Mr. Pitt had much of his air & look, but it seemed to Him not to the proportions of Mr. Pitts Head, the upper part of the head too small, & the nose not the true form.—He added that having conversed with Mr. Pitt He had a full recollection of him & noticed the look, the peculiar look of his eyes had something in it, when sitting upon business, that “had more of spirit than flesh in it.” On the other however, He thought this Bust the best representation of him.—I having heard Hoppners portrait of Mr. Pitt much spoken of He went to the Exhibition to see it & was greatly disappointed. He sd. He did not have known it to have been intended for Mr. Pitt.

Nollekens told us that He had 52 Busts of Mr. Pitt to execute in marble.—And had eight of Mr. Fox, of whom He had before executed 7 one Busts. He has now 100 guineas for each Bust.—

Dance told me that He shd. surprise me by telling me that His E Sir N. Holland,† is going to build a House in Piccadilly, & this year of age. But it is with a view to make an agreeable residence for Lady Holland, who has great pleasure in associating with Her friends who are in high situations. He sd. He supposes Sir Nathaniel to be worth £5000 a year, & believes He has £30,000 a year, so that it wd. cost the expense of surplus income for one year.—

Nollekens told me that when Stubbs died there was no money left in his House, but abt. £20 was owing to Him by a person. His House was mortgaged to a lady a friend of his, and He owed her money for the purchase of His pictures & effects produced at the sale upwards of £4000, but the Lady had been ill-advised & bought in pictures for which high prices were bid; one in particular for which Mr. Thos. Hope bid up to £200, yet she wd. not let it go.

Boswell called.‡ He said affairs looked so ill He was afraid to say “What News.”—He wished Wilberforce & Lascelles to succeed in Yorkshire.—He was glad Lord Howick had lost Northumberland, but could not forget former circumstances, and that His Lordship, then Lord Grey, was the only Member of the House of Commons who appeared in his colours when the House was in mourning for the death of the King of France.—His haughtiness has lost Him Northumberland: He would not condescend to ask for votes.—

* George Dance. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† See Index, Vols. I. and II.

‡ James Boswell, the younger. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

Boswell wished for Lascelles to succeed as He was the Member who moved for all the Honors voted to the memory of Mr. Pitt by the House of Commons. - He spoke of the death of General Paoli [the Corsican soldier], His old friend. He died at the age of 82 of a suppression of Urine, to which He had been long subject. He had a Pension of £2000 a year from our Government, but had many Corsican friends to assist for whom He had an open table. His figure had undergone a great change: from being very large & stout He had become very thin: but His spirits were good. -

Boswell spoke of the very great number of deaths which had happened during the last winter & spring, but particularly in the months of March & April. He lost two friends not older than Himself who were carried off by colds & fever. -

CHAPTER XLIII

1872

Wine, a Kind of Poison

June 6. [George] Dance I dined with. We dined a little before 7—and had Port, Madeira, & Red Champagne*. Drinking was spoken of. Dance told me I knew a person who never in his life was intoxicated; was Sir Nathl. Holland, His Brother. He added that Sir Nathl. always objected to wine; and, when alone, He believed did not drink any but in company passed the bottle so as to keep up an appearance of drinking some wine. Sir Nathl. has a strong prejudice against wine thinks it a kind of poison. To Tea He has no objection.

Sleeping was a topic of conversation. Abolyn sd. that He sleeps 8 or 9 hours with, intermission, but on waking feels no disposition rise suddenly, no elasticity, but rather an inclination to dozing. { seldom dreams, at least so as to have any impression remaining. } N. Dance on the contrary sd. that His sleep is short, not more than 4 hours at a time, & that in the morning He awakes rather debilitated th refreshed. He passes the night in a state of dreaming & irritation wh were He to refrain from wine He said, would probably not be the ca.

* Mr. H. Warner Allen writes: "The red "champagne" to which Farington refers is presumably a still wine. Henry VIII. owned a vineyard in Champagne, but he drew nothing from it but still wine, since Champagne was only invented in the late Seventeenth Century. It must be remembered that both Burgundy and Champagne are produced from the pinot grape. Red still champagne, unfortunately, will not travel, but it still is in high repute in its own country, and M. Paillard, of Bouzy, has offered the wittiest really delightful Bouzy of 1891. Professor Saintsbury, in his "Notes on a Cellar Book" speaks with great affection of a red Verzenay of 1868, and the wine buyer in old days for at the Haute Mère Glen Hôtel of Châlons-sur-Marne a fine cellar of this fascinating wine."

At propos of the remarks of Mr. H. Warner Allen concerning the still red "champagne" referred to in the delightful Farington Diary, it may interest its readers to hear of a varieties of that classical beverage, says another correspondent.

I was present on the 9th December, 1891, at a luncheon, when the following 1000s of red non-mousseux champagne were sampled, specially shipped by Messrs. Chandon, of Epernay, for the jubilee of one of their friends in this country:

65 Bouzy.
65 Verzenay.
74 Bouzy.
74 Ay.

1874 Verzenay.
1870 Ay.
1870 Bouzy.
1870 Verzenay."

but He has not yet had resolution to do so.---Dance sd. that He considered 7 Hours sleeping quite sufficient. If He goes to bed at Eleven He wakes at 4, and generally rises at 6 or means to do it,---

Too Much Talk about Art

After dinner the 13th. number of the Artist was brought in, & Dance read it through. The writers in this number were P. Hoare,--Hoppner & Cumberland. At the conclusion Dance expressed to the purpose "That there was much sound & little sense." Northcote had exposed himself by undervaluing Nicolo Ponsini. Of Shce He said, That from what He had seen of Him He was convinced that He would never do much; He had undertaken to write upon His art before He understood it.---He said it appeared generally that those who knew most of their art were least disposed to talk much about it.---He spoke of the bad taste of the buildings now erecting & those which have been erected near Westminster Hall, & Abbey, of which Groves has the direction. He sd. He had been applied to to make designs for a continuation of those buildings but had not taken any notice of it.---

Dwellings calculated for comfort were spoken of. Mostyn sd. Windsor Castle & such like were not suited to it. Dance thought that in great buildings comfort might be had, but that certainly magnificence was an incumbrance upon it.---

English Integrity

Mostyn travelled to Russia & has been at Peterburgh & at Moscow. ---The English people are much respected in that country for their integrity. It was frequently said to Him "I must believe you, for you are an Englishman." Many persons in Russia speak English, but among the higher order French is spoken so generally as to seem among them a native language. At Peterburgh the higher orders are all Courtiers,---at Moscow their manners are more simple and natural. Hospitality abounds among them, so far as feeding those who go to their Houses; but it is not attended with much social pleasure. At Moscow the dinner may be at one, two, or three o'clock, when large parties assemble, but the conversation does not extend beyond those who sit on the right & left of each of the party. At Moscow, & in other parts of Russia, the opinion of the English is that they are all powerful by Sea, but nothing on land:---but their notions are all general: they have no knowledge of circumstances.---I asked Mostyn whether He kept a Diary when he travelled. He said, "No, only made memorandums, which no other person wd. understand."---

Wilkie and Sir Joshua

June 7.---The Academy I went to at 2 o'clock & met Lady Thomond, Mr. & Miss Metcalfe, & Mr. Henry Hope, who had a private view of the attention. "What would my Lady, Sir Joshua, have said Had he seen this picture," said Lady Thomannd to me, adding "It is worth as much money as a picture can be worth." Only one head in the picture appeared to her to be delinient, that of the Blind Teller's wife.

[The following paragraph appeared in the Morning Herald of July 8th: "A correspondent expresses much astonishment at reading in the newspapers that a monument is proposed to be erected in the memory of the late Sir Joshua Reynolds, by Subscription. The proposer of such a Plan must surely have forgotten that the name of that celebrated Artist inherited nearly £100,000 from Him, which created His Magnificence of Thomannd, and that a Monument by subscription must therefore prove to that Lady of exalted rank a monument of disgrace." From small note-book.]

Sale of Opie's pictures. It produced £1460. Clothing the Naked by Opie Sold for £136 10. Laughing Girl by Sir Joshua a 1 for £151 10.0.—bought by Lord Lowther.

A Rembrandt Masterpiece

June 10. West had been today at Christie's Auction room to look again at the picture of "The Woman taken in Adultery" which is to be put up to sale on Saturday next with other pictures belonging to the Frenchman who has brought them over. He then expressed himself in the strongest manner of the merit of the picture & declared it to be in its way the finest piece of Art in the world. He said He had examined it carefully & saw that it was painted upon a ground originally white & that passed over with a wash of Burnt Umber to which was added some yellow colour to make it more luminous. Upon this rich tawny ground the whole subject was washed in with Black only, the ground giving warmth sufficient to that cool colour. The next proceeding was to wash in with thin colours the colour of each object and gradually to encrease the colour of the light parts till the whole effect was produced. I recommended to Him to paint a subject in the same manner while these observations were fresh in His mind. He said He intended to do so, & he fixed upon His sketch of the Institution of the Order of the Garter, which would afford Him an opportunity to introduce much in imitation of the Altar in Rembrandt's picture.—

He then spoke in his peculiar way of the extraordinary effect of the picture by Rembrandt had on the spectators. They were struck with reverence of it, & all who approached it pulled off their Hats.—He said the first time He saw such an effect produced by a picture was when His picture of the death of Lord Nelson was exhibited in His room. At an instinctive motion the hand accompanied the mind, & when the picture was approached the Hat was taken off.—He then shewed me an etching by Heath from His picture of the death of Lord Nelson which He had the day recd. and tomorrow was to pay the first £100.—

He said He had seen the picture of the death of Lord Nelson by Devis, which had much merit, but it had more convinced Him that there was no other way of representing the death of a Hero but by an Epic representation of it.---It must exhibit the event in a way to excite awe, & veneration & that which may be required to give superior interest to the representation must be introduced, all that can shew the importance of the Hero.---Wolfe must not die like a common Soldier under a Bush; neither should Nelson be represented dying in the gloomy hold of a Ship, like a sick man in a Prison Hole.---To move the mind there should be a spectacle presented to raise & warm the mind, & all shd. be proportioned to the highest idea conceived of the Hero. No Boy, sd. West, wd. be animated by a representation of Nelson dying like an ordinary man, His feelings must be roused & His mind inflamed by a scene great & extraordinary. A mere matter of fact will never produce this effect.

West expressed a strong wish that Wilkie shd. see the picture by Rembrant, as it wd. at once shew Him what He wanted & He wd. feel it. If to the truth of expression, & nice imitation of objects He could add the transparency of Rembrant His pictures wd. be such works as were never yet seen.---Four thousand pounds has been offered for the Rembrant.

CHAPTER XLIV

1847

Rembrandt

June 12. After breakfast went with [Dr.] Hayer to Lawrence's & shewed Him the portrait of Mr. Pitt. Instantly on seeing it He said "That's the Man." He made only one remark, which was that the chin was too round. Christies I went to & found many persons assembled to see the picture of the Woman taken in Adultery by Rembrandt. Northcote told me He wd much rather have the Suzannah by Rembrandt (now in the Kaiser Friedrich Museum, Berlin); that this picture was beautifully coloured & harmonised; but there was in other respects so much misery in the picture, the figures were so petite & mean that He would not give twopenny for it. [Charles] Towne said He did not believe the picture to have been painted by Rembrandt, but by another artist whose name he did not remember. He thought it a fine picture.

Dance I drank tea with. He thought the picture at Christie's by Rembrandt enchanting in the colouring, but so deficient in other respects that it was out of all bounds to ask 4 or 5000 for it. Sir N. Holland did not think it was painted by Rembrandt, it was too smooth, too polished; but, added Dance, He knows the quality of a picture better than who painted it. Sir Francis Baring said "That He should prove those to be mistaken who imagined that He should give for it such a Sum as had been asked."

Perfection

June 13.—After breakfast called on Lawrence & went with Him to Christies & again saw the picture by Rembrandt. We called on Hearn who concurred with us in thinking it the finest picture of that master that had ever been brought into this country. He said that a man of large fortune ought not to regard giving £1000 more than He might first intend for a work of such perfection. He said notwithstanding the acknowledged excellence of the picture there were persons who had pretended to doubt its originality. Landseer had expressed a doubt, but on finding Himself likely to suffer from appearing to entertain such an opinion, said Gosway was the person who had declared against the originality of it. After we left Hearne Lawrence took a Chaise & set off to Mr. Angerstein at Woodlands to induce Him to bid largely for the picture.--

Bought in

Christies I went to at 2 o'clock & found the room crowded. Andrew Fontaine,--was there, Lord Grosvenor, Lord Suffolk,--and many other Amateurs & many picture dealers were there. At 20 minutes before 3 the Rembrandt was put up for sale, it being the last lot. It was knocked down for 5000 guineas; but it soon appeared to have been bought in,-- On leaving the room I met Lawrence in Pallmall, coming to Christies, with an Antiquary, as He told me, from Mr. Angerstein to bid 4000 guineas for the Rembrandt. We went to Christie who told us that the picture was bought in, & would not be sold for less than 5000 guineas,-- If that sum should not be obtained it would be taken abroad & offered to the French Museum, or kept by the Proprietors as a Corner Stone to support the credit of their future sales.

Turner I called on at His gallery, it being the last day of His Exhibition of His own works.-- I also saw the first number of His publication of prints etched & aqua-tinted, from His designs, which was published on Thursday last.*

Clergymen's Duty

June 14. H. Home [the artist] called. He looked ill, & spoke of having been unwell, & something that dropped from Him signified that professional disappointment contributed to it. He sd. that could He again go over the last 20 years He wd. pursue a different course from that He had done, & added that we make ourselves slaves to study for Landlords & taxgatherers. He mentioned an anecdote of the Revd. Mr. Andrews, Minister of St. James's. A poor woman some weeks since applied at the Vestry of St. James's Church & requested that one of the clergymen, there being two present, would go to Her Mother, who was then dying, and earnestly wished to have a clergyman to attend Her for a short time. These Clergymen both declared that they were so circumstanced they could not go at that hour. The woman then resolved to knock at the door of the Rector, Mr. Andrews, which she did,

* Mr. A. J. Finberg in his admirable "History of Turner's Liber Studiorum," recently published by Messrs. Ernest Benn Limited (£5 5s. net), writes: "As the first five plates bear no date in the publication-line, it was long a matter of dispute as to when Part I. was issued. Fortunately, the matter has now been cleared up by the publication in the Morning Post on January 10, 1923, of the following entry in Farington's Diary:

"June 13, 1807. Turner I called on at His gallery, it being the last day of His Exhibition of His own works. I also saw the first number of His publication of prints etched and aqua-tinted, from His designs, which was published on Thursday last."

"In spite of the fact that Farington mistook the mezzotints for aquatints, and that he was not sufficiently interested in the engravings to mention the name of the publication, I think there can be no reasonable doubt that the first number of Turner's Liber Studiorum is here referred to, and that the entry establishes the date of publication as June 13, 1807-- and communicated Her wish to a Servant who told Her she must go to the Vestry. Mr. Andrews hearing a conversation, came forward & to Him the Woman told what had passed. Mr. Andrews then lifted up his eyes and said, "Vengeance may surely be expected to fall upon a Country where the Clergymen will not do their duty." He then went with the woman to Her Mother & remained with Her more than an Hour, & in Half an [hour] after He left Her the Mother died.

Angerstein

Lawrence called in the even'g. Mr. Angerstein was with Him this morning, and went to De Cort's where He met De Lafontaine & purchased the "Woman taken in Adultery" by Rembrandt from Him. He told Lawrence that De Lafontaine had desired Him not to mention the price that He gave. At noon the picture was carried to Mr. Angerstein's. Lawrence conjectured that Mr. A. gave 4000 pounds or guineas for it. The Marquiss of Abercorn on Friday saw Lawrence's portrait of Mr. Pitt & thought it very like and wished to have it, & on finding it was painted for Mr. Angerstein, desired to have a Copy. He thought the month too severe.

June 16. Daniell called after which I was alone, but dined at Mr. Angerstein's at 5 o'clock. We looked at the picture of "The Woman taken in Adultery" by Rembrandt, and our admiration of it increased. While at dinner a person called to whom Mr. Angerstein went out and on returning said He had paid to that person the money for the Rembrandt. He afterwards had a letter delivered to Him which having read He gave it to Lawrence to read & afterwards to me. It was from Walsh Porter congratulating Him upon the possession of the Rembrandt and supposing He might not wish to retain His other picture, "The Nativity" by Rembrandt, offered to exchange for it the Sea piece by Rembrandt which He had bought of De Lafontaine, but found it too large for the place intended. Mr. Angerstein asked me Yes or No to the proposal. I said No, and afterwards united with Lawrence in recommending on no acct. to part with the Nativity as it wd. shew true as it was, the vast superiority of the other picture when compared with any of Rembrandt's other works.*

Party Spirit

Mr. Boucheret† told me that whilst He was member of Great Grimsby He did for a considerable time vote with Mr. Fox & His party again

* Sir Charles J. Holmes should be interested in the various opinions expressed in the Diary about Rembrandt's "Woman taken in Adultery," which is under his care at National Gallery. He will note that it was not bought by "Clifford" for Mr. Angerstein but "bought in" for Lafontaine, its owner.

Again, the Director of the National Gallery will be glad to know, for catalogue purposes, that the Nation might have lost the "Nativity" ("The Adoration of the Shepherd" had it not been for Farington and Sir Thomas Lawrence.

† Ayscough Boucheret or Boucherette. See Index, Vol. III.

Mr. Pitt, but He became disgusted on observing how much they did from a pure spirit of opposition & to raise a clamour against the Minister. He related an instance, one of many, wherein Mr. Fox brought forward a charge upon a vague report, without taking any trouble to enquire into the truth of it. Mr. Pitt declared He never heard of the circumstance; but Serjeant Adair, who was of Fox's party, arose and declared that He had been applied to professionally, to prosecute the proprietors of a newspaper for publishing what Mr. Fox had made a charge, as it was an unfounded calumny. It was stated to be a transaction which happened in Ireland.

CHAPTER XLV

1807

Sir Joshua's Relatives

June 19.—I called on Sanders the Collector of the Income Tax. He told me the profits accruing to him by a percentage upon what He receives in the district to which He is appointed including Charlotte Street &c. do not amount to £50 a year. He finds great backwardness in many & in those who ought to make handsome returns. He told me that He was born at Great Torrington in Devonshire, & when a Boy was playfellow with Lady Thomond and Her Brothers: also with the present Countess Nelson who was Miss Young. The father of Lady Thomond was Mr. Palmer an attorney at Great Torrington who had three Sons and two daughters, by a Sister of Sir Joshua Reynolds. The second Son had a hair lip which when He was an infant was sewed up by a travelling quack Doctor. Sir Joshua Reynolds obtained a Deanry for Him in Ireland, but at the commencement of the late Rebellion in that Country He brought His family to England & resides in Devonshire. He was a lad of dull parts. The second daughter married Mr. Gwatkin* of Cornwall.

* Miss Theophila Palmer, who was referred to in the Diary on January 11th, 1823, was a niece of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the "My dear Ossy" of his letter, dated January 30th, 1786, in which he wished that she and Mr. Robert Lovell Gwatkin, of Kellnow, Truro, Cornwall, her future husband, "may be as happy as both deserve . . . and you will be the happiest couple in England. So God bless you!"

Fanny Burney, in a description of a meeting at Sir Joshua Reynolds's house in Leicester Square, refers to young Gwatkin, the Cornish squire, making sheep's eyes at Ossy, whose uncle, Sir Joshua, was very fond of her.

"I never was," he wrote to Ossy, "a great friend to the efficacy of precept, nor a great professor of love and affection, and therefore I never told you how much I loved you for fear you should grow saucy upon it."

Dr. Johnson did not congratulate Ossy on her marriage, because, as she told H. R. Haydon long afterwards, she had offended him when, at one of her uncle's parties, she (then a girl) had changed her dress before Johnson, the last guest to go, had departed. He was angry with her for showing less respect to him than to the people who had already left.

Mr. Gwatkin, her husband, was chief mourner at Sir Joshua's funeral. It may be added that Ossy was the original of the charming "Strawberry Girl," which is one of the most popular pictures by Reynolds in the Wallace Collection.

Mr. Johnson who married another Sister of Sir Joshua Reynolds was a Woolen Draper at Great Torrington. His conduct in many respects was very improper and ultimately caused Mrs. Johnson to live separate from him. Sir Joshua Reynolds obtained an appointment in India for Mr. Johnson's eldest Son, & Richard, the second son, also went in Bengal. The eldest died many years ago.

A gentleman of the name of Young was at that time Minister of Great Torrington. He had several Children. One of them, a Son, is Mr. Young, Archdeacon of Norfolk. He married one of Mr. Johnson's daughters, a very beautiful woman. They now reside at Swaffham in Norfolk. One of Mr. Young's daughters being with Her Brother, the Archdeacon, became acquainted with the Revd. James Nelson, Brother

A correspondent sends the following interesting notes about Sir Joshua Reynolds, Offie Palmer (his niece), and her husband:

Robert Luvell Gwatkin, of Kellow, Cornwall, was at St. John's College, Cambridge, and thirteenth Wrangler, Sheriff of Cornwall 1789, and married Thersphila Palmer, the "Offie" of Reynolds and Johnson, daughter of John Palmer, of Torrington, Devon, who married Sir Joshua's sister. "Offie"'s elder sister, Mary, married the Marquess of Thomond, and died without issue. She lived at one time at Topley Court, about 1810. Of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gwatkin's children the eldest son, Edward, Major-General H.E.I.C.S., M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, married Hetty Elizabeth, daughter of Major Peter Cascoigne, and spent all his life in India, dying on his way home in April, 1855, and buried at sea. He was Superintendent of the Government Stud for providing remounts for the Indian Cavalry. His eldest son, John Reynolds Gwatkin, of Nanmeh, Wilts, married Emma Amelia, daughter of Lieutenant-General William Branne Salmon, H.E.I.C.S., Bengal Native Infantry. Of his children, the eldest surviving son, Joshua Reynolds Cascoigne Gwatkin, of the Manor House, Pottorne, Devizes, is the only representative of this branch, in whose possession are the original portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gwatkin, Lady Thomond, and two portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds of himself as a young and as an old man. The well-known picture of "Simplicity" by Reynolds was taken from Thersphila Gwatkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gwatkin, known affectionately as "Thé" to distinguish her from her mother; she afterwards became Mrs. Luvther. This picture is no longer in the possession of the family.

"Offie" Palmer was Sir Joshua's favourite niece, who lived with him and saw to his comforts until her marriage. Her name Thersphila was divided into the pet name of "Thé" and "Offie." Sir Joshua's playful verse on her names, it can be imagined, was used when she was superintending his breakfast table.

When I'm drinking my tea I am thinking of "Thé,"

When I'm drinking my coffee I am thinking of "Offie,"

So whether I'm drinking my tea or my coffee,

I always am thinking of her, my "Thé-Offie."

Other interesting articles which belonged to Sir Joshua in possession of the present Mr. Gwatkin include a vellum sketch book containing crayon drawings, some of which were ideas for his pictures and some studies made by him in Italy, a notable example being the rough sketch for the celebrated portrait of Mrs. Siddons as "The Tragic Muse," in which she is represented seated and clad in a flowing robe with an ornamental border. In the same ownership are Sir Joshua Reynolds's paint-box, colours, palette and brushes, and an early Sheraton looking-glass on feet, which he used to place at such an angle as to reflect the portrait he was painting and so keep his sitter amused and interested. The paint-box also contains original letters from Reynolds and Burke congratulating "Offie" on her engagement, and also letters from Fanny Hurvey, David Garrick, Johnson, and Oliver Goldsmith.

both of whom owe their advancement to the extraordinary abilities & merit of two distinguished men. Lady Thonond inherited from Her Uncle [Sir Joshua Reynolds] the bulk of his fortune, & having by Him been introduced into the best Society after His death married the Earl of Inchiquin, now Marquess of Thomond. Mrs. Young participates in the Honour bestowed as a reward for the great services of Her Husband's Brother Lord Nelson & is now a Countess. Saunders said that Lady Thonond must be 57 or 58 years of age.

Young the Actor

June 20. Westall called to desire me to go to the Haymarket Theatre on Monday next to see Mr. Young,* Son of a Surgeon in the City, make His first appearance on a London Stage in the Character of Hamlet. He is abt. 27 years old, & has been Manager of the Theatre at Manchester by which concern He lost money. His Father intended Him to be a Merchant & gave Him a suitable education. He speaks German fluently but His inclination to the Stage could not be surmounted.

June 21. Campion [the wine merchant] told me that Coll. Scraggs, the late Candidate for Sussex, has abt. £4000 a year in that County. His Father died while the Coll. was young, & His Mother managed His estate very imprudently & the Coll. has also accumulated debts. He was Lieutenant Colonel of the Blues, which rank was given to Him by the King expressly against the wish of the Duke of York. He is considered a man of but moderate abilities. It is supposed the contest for Sussex has cost Him & Fuller His opponent 10 to 12000 each. Fuller was chiefly supported by the lower order of Freeholders who were jealous of an Aristocratick monopoly being intended, in which, Lord Sheffield by an imprudent expression, implying that the great men of the County had determined who should be members, gave rise. Lord Sheffield has abt. £4000 a year in Sussex which He purchased from the Delane family.—It is not known that Coll. Scraggs would oppose the present administration, but the contrary is rather expected.

Mrs. Campion had seen a person from Yorkshire who had supported Mr. Wilberforce. He said that Mr. Wilberforce was becoming daily more unpopular, & that had the election been continued 1 or 2 day longer he would have lost it. He is spoken of as an Hypocrite in his profession of Religion, for whilst He calls himself a member of the Church of England, He is building or encourages the building of Chapels & Conventicles for Sectaries. She added that it was said that He will never again be returned for Yorkshire—such are the floating opinions.

Origins

Lord Sheffield is a Yorkshire man.† His original name was Baker, to which He added that of Holroyd. From His own connexions of some kind He inherited a considerable fortune, for though He has been married two or three times He did not obtain much with either of His wives. It is said He was originally a Clotier, but that must have been in early youth. The present Lady Sheffield was a daughter of the late Lord North (Guillard) the Prime Minister.

* Charles Mayne Young.

† See Index, Vol. I. and II.

Campion spoke of the great change in Mr. Angerstein's circumstances. At one period He was a Bankrupt; and the late Mr. Osley partner in Underwriting with Campion, when He wrote policies to Mr. Angerstein who acted as a Broker, whenever there was a balance due to Him at a settlement took the money, being unwilling to risk it by allowing it to stand against risks not determined.

An Ignorant Alderman

June 22. Westall's I dined at. Dr. Smith is eminent for his knowledge of Botany. He resides at Norwich, but annually reads Lectures on Botany at the Royal Institution. He told me that He is habitually temperate scarcely drinking any wine, as a few glasses have an inflammatory effect upon His constitution, in which the Lungs are easily affected. He finds great refreshment from drinking green tea, at any hour, but Bohea tea has a contrary effect, making him heavy. He spoke of Alderman Herring of Norwich, who has by perseverance obtained a Bill for paving & lighting that City, but is in respect of education a remarkably ignorant man. Being deputed to wait upon the King with an Address, His Majesty observed to Him that "Norwich is an ancient City" to which the Alderman replied "Please your Majesty It Has been a very ancient City." He recd. a letter signed anonymous, and on being told by a person that He heard He had recd. an anonymous letter, He replied "Yes, very anonymous."

CHAPTER XLVI

1857

Dramatic Criticism

June 22. The Haymarket Theatre I went to to see Mr. Young in Hamlet it being his first appearance upon a London Stage. Lawrence was there & with him I came away. I was much pleased with Young's performance & Lawrence said He was the best Actor next to Kemble being superior to Pope or Elliston, but He did not think He would ever be a great actor; His voice superior to all others.

[The Tragedy of Hamlet was revived, at this theatre, last night for the purpose of introducing Mr. Young, a gentleman of considerable provincial celebrity, in the arduous part of Hamlet, to a London audience. He was greeted, on his entré, with repeated plaudits. Mr. Young middle-sized, and about thirty years of age, his figure is good, his action easy and graceful, his features are flexible and expressive, his voice powerful and clear, and his under tones unalloyed to the expression the most fascinating tenderness. He was completely master of his business, and displayed the judgment of a veteran in the execution. In the first and second act, there was much to applaud; but the scene with Ophelia, in the third act, and every subsequent scene, displayed such energy, and elicited such beauties, as called forth the most unbounded admiration of the audience. In the closet scene he was admirably supported by Mrs. Litchfield* his attitude, the expression his countenance, when he says "Is it the King?" the conflict between tenderness for his mother, and indignation for his father's wrongs, displayed extraordinary powers of discrimination, and excited a tumult of applause. The audience, indeed, were not prepared for such excellence. They were taken by surprise, and an enthusiasm seemed pervade the whole house, of which there are few instances. When the tragedy was announced for repetition, the house rang with acclamation.—It was crowded with a brilliant audience." From small note book.

June 23.—After breakfast I called on Mrs. Wheatley at Her Lodgings, No. 8 Duke St. Portland Place.—She told me she was to be married on Thursday next June 25th. and to set off that day with Mr. Pope [the actor], Her Husband for Ireland.—She told me she had paid all Her Bills and did not owe Sixpence. When I left Her she expressed much gratitude for my kindness to Her.—

* Harriet May. She was married in 1794 to John Litchfield, of the Privy Council Office.

Kemble and Young

Lawrence I dined with & He having the freedom of both play Houses, procured an order for me from Kemble & we went to see Kemble in Hamlet.

Hamlet .....	Kemble.	Queen .....	Mrs. St. Leger.
Polonius .....	Munden.	Ophelia .....	Miss Belton.
Ghost .....	Pope.
King .....	Creswell.
Laertes .....	Brunton.
Horatio .....	Murray.

Having seen Young last night in the Character of Hamlet, Lawrence was desirous that I should see Kemble in it.—The impression it made upon me was, that Kemble had more deeply studied the various discriminations and I thought He performed with more ease & less manner than formerly; but it forcibly struck me that He wanted constitutional power to go through the part with the vigour that Young last night possessed, & He looked Old in the Character.—Lawrence told me that Kemble has left off drinking wine by advice of His Medical friends & has more strength & better spirits since He left off that habit.—He however takes medicine.

Mother Goose was the entertainment this even'g, in which Grimaldi Junr. was very entertaining.—It was now performed the 92nd. time this Season: but we were kept till a late hour. I did not get home till near one o'clock.

I saw Sir N. Holland there with a Young Lady who resides with Lady Holland.—Grattan of Ireland sat near me. Lawrence often meets Him & His family at Mrs. Crewe's & has remarked the affectionate & amiable intercourse they have with each other.—Grattan laughs at the rout Lord Howick is making against the present administration.*

Politicians and Great Men

June 26.—Hopper I called on in consequence of His having called on me, but the Duchess of Athol was sitting to Him.† The Duke & 2 of His daughts. came into the Show room, where were several copies of Mr. Pitts portrait.—Lord Thomond I called upon but He was out. The * See Index of previous volumes for names in the last paragraph.

† In the catalogue of Hogarth's works Mr. W. Roberts records portraits of the Duke

CHAPTER XI

1807

Dramatic Criticism

June 22. The Haymarket Theatre I went to to see Mr. Young in Hamlet it being his first appearance upon a London Stage. Lawrence was there & with him I came away. I was much pleased with Young's performance & Lawrence said He was the best Actor next to Kemble being superior to Pope or Elliston, but He did not think He would ever be a great actor: His voice superior to all others.

["The Tragedy of Hamlet was revived, at this theatre, last night for the purpose of introducing Mr. Young, a gentleman of considerable provincial celebrity, in the arduous part of Hamlet, to a London audience. He was greeted, on his entry, with repeated plaudits. Mr. Young middle sized, and about thirty years of age, his figure is good, his action easy and graceful, his features are flexible and expressive, his voice powerful and clear, and his under tones insinuated to the expression the most fascinating tenderness. He was completely master of his business, and displayed the judgment of a veteran in the execution. In the first and second act, there was much to applaud; but the scene with Ophebia, in the third act, and every subsequent scene, displayed such energy, and elicited such beauties, as called forth the most unbounded admiration of the audience. In the short scene he was admirably supported by Mrs. Litchfield*. His attitude, the expression his countenance, when he says "Is it the King?" the conflict between tenderness for his mother, and indignation for his father's wrongs, displayed extraordinary powers of discrimination, and excited a tumult of applause. The audience, indeed, were not prepared for such excellence. They were taken by surprise, and an enthusiasm seemed pervade the whole house, of which there are few instances. When the tragedy was announced for repetition, the house rang with acclamations.—It was crowded with a brilliant audience." From small note book.

June 23.—After breakfast I called on Mrs. Wheatley at Her Lodge, No. 8 Duke St. Portland Place. She told me she was to be married on Thursday next June 25th. and to set off that day with Mr. Pope the actor], Her Husband for Ireland. She told me she had paid all Her Bills and did not owe Sixpence. When I left Her she expressed much gratitude for my kindness to Her.--

* Harriet May. She was married in 1794 to John Litchfield, of the Privy Council Office.

Kemble and Young

Lawrence I dined with & He having the freedom of both play Houses, procured an order for me from Kemble & we went to see Kemble in Hamlet.

Hamlet .....	Kemble.	Queen.....	Mrs. St. Leger.
Polonius .....	Munden.	Ophelia .....	Miss Belton.
Ghost .....	Pope.
King .....	Creswell.
Gertrude .....	Braunton.
Horatio .....	Murray.

Having seen Young last night in the Character of Hamlet, Lawrence was desirous that I should see Kemble in it. The impression it made upon me was, that Kemble had more deeply studied the various discriminations and I thought He performed with more ease & less manner than formerly; but it forcibly struck me that He wanted constitutional power to go through the part with the vigour that Young last night possessed, & He looked Old in the Character. Lawrence told me that Kemble has left off drinking wine by advice of His Medical friends & has more strength & better spirits since He left off that habit.--He however takes medicine.

Mother Goose was the entertainment this even'g, in which Grimaldi Junr. was very entertaining. It was now performed the 92nd. time this Season: but we were kept till a late hour. I did not get home till near one o'clock.--

I saw Sir N. Holland there with a Young Lady who resides with Lady Holland. Grattan of Ireland sat near me. Lawrence often meets Him & His family at Mrs. Creve's & has remarked the affectionate & amiable intercourse they have with each other. Grattan laughs at the rout Lord Howick is making against the present administration.*

Pollitellus and Great Men

June 26. Happier I called on in consequence of His having called on me, but the Duchess of Athol was sitting to Him. The Duke & 2 of His daughts. came into the Show room, where were several copies of Mr. Pitts portrait.--Lord Thomond I called upon but He was out. The * See Index of previous volumes for names in the last paragraph.

† In the catalogue of Happier's works, Mr. W. Roberts records portraits of the Duke and Duchess of Atholl and their son, Lord Charles Murray, but does not give the dates of the pictures.

Butler told me that the Lordship did not mean to attend Parliament this session but had taken His Seat <sup>in</sup> the House of Peers.

Smirke's I dined at. Marchant* told me that He had lately much conversation with Mr. Coke of Norfolk about political matters. Mr. Coke said it wd. have been well for this Country if Mr. Pitt had never been born. Marchant talked with Mr. Dudley North about the late change of Administration. Mr. North said that had Mr. Fox lived things wd. not have gone as they had done; that the late Ministry being possessed of power used it with too much confidence. Lord Hawke† told Marchant that the kind of great men was now felt. The Political Men all want to be Masters.

Robert Smirke told me that Lord Alford had informed Him that He last night signified to the Greenock & Hull*, that He should no longer act with them. He told Robert that they had no feeling but for power & influence & He saw no reason why He should forsake the Portland connexion which to him was a social relation ship, for such purposes. Lady Oxford strongly supports Him in this, & both dwell upon the improper conduct in their private lives of Lord Lansdowne, Howick &c.

[Died June 6th. Dr. John Wardle in New St. Spring gardens, age 76, formerly of Carlisle; private Secretary to the Duke of Norfolk. At the Coronation of his present Majesty He went from Carlisle to Lambeth on Horseback in 48 Hours, & returned in 36 Hours, after an absence of five nights three of which He spent in London.]

On the 24th inst. Lady Abercorn gave a grand Ma. quadrante. Lawrence was there in the Character of Anahy; and Hoquema in a Domino. [From a small note-book.]

To Murry an Helicon

June 27. The young Duke of Newcastle is sitting in Lawrence. He is soon to be married to Mrs. Monday an Heine's with £7000 a year which He stands in need of not having, it is said more than 3 or 40 pounds a year. His grandfather, the late Duke, had a strong prejudice

* Nathaniel Marchant, R.A. See Index, Vols I, II and III

† Dudley Long North (1748-1801) was second son of Charles Long, who married the second daughter and co-heiress of Dudley North, of Little Wymondley, Suffolk, and great daughter of Sir Dudley North, financier and economist (1661-1704), whose views anticipated those of Adam Smith and Locke.

In 1789 Dudley Long assumed the name of North, in compliance with his aunt Ann's will. He was one of Fox's most intimate friends, and the Whig party owed much to famous dinners. North was a manager in the Warren Hastings Trial, closely associated with Sir Joshua Reynolds, Edmund Burke, Gibbon, Dr. Johnson, and Mrs. Thrale, and a generous supporter of Crabbe, the poet. He sat in Parliament for many years.

‡ Fifth Viscount, was created Baron Dawson of Cawood, co. York. See Index previous volumes for other names in this entry.

§ The fourth Duke of Newcastle was married on July 18, 1807, to Georgiana Eliza, both daughter of Edward Miller Mundy, of Shipley, Derbyshire. The Duke died in 1822, the Duchess in 1822.

VOL. IV.

II*

CHAPTER XLVII

1807

Jerningham and Fox

June 28. Lawrence dined with me to day. Lord Aberdeen went with him today to see the Rembrandt at Mr. Argersten's, with which He was highly delighted, & said it appeared to Him like a real scene looked at through the small end of a Telescope. His Lordship ordered a copy of the Portrait of Mr. Pitt painted by Lawrence. Lady Chatham was again with Lawrence today & said finally "That the portrait of Mr. Pitt was beyond comparison the most like of anything that had been done."

Lawrence dined at Lord Hampden's lately. Mr. Edwd. Jerningham* was there & told several anecdotes of Charles Fox. One was, "That Charles & His Brother Stephen having one day pressed their Father Lord Holland to give them money, at last, His Lordship sd. "Let me have no more applications There is a draft for £500 for you." With this they retired, but instead of obtaining the money & dividing it, they sat down to gaming for the whole of it.

June 29. Lord Gardner told me He was in the House of Lords on Friday night till the Division at 4 in the morning & that His legs were then much swelled with sitting so long. He told me again that He had spoken to Lord Mulgrave to make William (Farrington's nephew) a Commander, and that His Lordship had put His name down, but in present was afraid to open the door to promotion. But said His Lordship when He is made a Captain, He will not be able to get a Ship, so many are the applications. I replied that we were thankful for all that through His Lordship's kindness had been done for Him, and should patiently wait for what might in time be obtained.

A Scandal Monger

Daniell's I dined at. Richd. Smirke told me that lately at the * Edward Jerningham (1727-1812), poet and dramatist, a friend of Lords Chesterfield and Carlisle, and Horace Walpole, who referred to him as "The charming man." See Vols. I, II, and III.

Literary Club at the Chapter Coffee House* He was present when Tiffin was there an invited guest, and occupied the attention of the meeting a long time by recapitulating the evidence produced against the P---a before the Commissioners, and Her reply to the several charges. The Commissioners acquitted Her of the criminal part of the charges, but declared Her conduct to have been very reprehensible. Tiffin seemed to think that enough was given in evidence to give full reason to believe Her unfaithful. The names mentioned by Tiffin of persons who had been in situations to be suspected with Her were,-- Sir Sydney Smith;-- Capt. Hood;-- Capt. Manby & Lawrence. One evidence stated that the P---a had been seen dressing in Sir Sydney Smith's Clothes, while He had only a Chemise and Bedgown on & that they were dancing together. It was also attempted to be proved that she had been delivered of a Child, a Boy, which was brought up to the House. Many other circumstances He related. He had read a stolen Copy of the report.--

I told Richd. Smirke that whatever might be the impression on Mr. Tiffin's mind the evidence did not produce such on the minds of Lord Eldon & Mr. Perceval as with their concurrence, I had been informed, she intended to publish it in Her own vindication, but forbore from doing it being the wish of K. that she should not.--

Richd. Smirke ad. He noticed the characteristic remarks made [by] several who were present while Tiffin related what He had read.--At the conclusion of it Horne Tooke said, upon that part of the defense of P. which stated that the male child which was in the House under Her protection had been taken from people in a low situation from a charitable motive, "Aye, the Old story of Moses in the Bullrushes being found by Pharaoh's Daughter,"--Friend, said "Well who cares whether she is guilty or not." Porson (the Greek scholar) began to compare these proceedings with what had taken place in the Courts of Charles 2nd. & James 2nd. & became absorbed in recollecting many curious particulars which he had met with in manuscripts. He thought the present better times than those in respect of morality.--

William Etty

July 2.-- Lawrence called. His new pupil, the nephew of Mr. Etty,† Banker, is come to Him this morning, & is to pay 100 guineas for instruction for one year.--

I talked with Lawrence this morn'g abt. raising His prices.--I told Him it appeared to me decidedly that Hoppner's mode of painting is so much more slight than His, that Hoppner could paint at least 3 pictures in the time that He could paint two. He admitted it.

* This coffee-house stood at the corner of Chapterhouse Court, on the south side of Paternoster Row, and was a resort of literary men. It was closed as a coffee-house in 1854.

[On July 16th it was announced that Lawrence had raised His prices for pictures as follows :

	Gs.	Gs.
A Three quarter from.....	40	to 50
A Kit Kat from.....	50	" 70
A Half length from.....	80	" 100
A Bishops Half length from.....	100	" 120
A Whole length from.....	160	" 200

--From small note-book.]

Eminent Statesmen

The Honble. Wm. Lamb,* who is in parliament & with [the] Opposition, called upon Him this morn'g. Lawrence asked Him who is the best speaker in the House of Commons. After a pause, He said, Canning the best speaker ; He has more genius, more wit, & more eloquence than any other. Perceval at business is a very clever fellow. They beat said He, in the House of Commons.

July 3. Lawrence came to tea. Lord Kenyon† is a sensible young man. He made yesterday some remarks on Lord Grenvilles speaking in the House of Lords, said He spoke with great ability & dexterity having the art to shut over it to avoid such matters as He cannot w answer. This when dissected, is, however, as His Lordship observed a disadvantage to Him, as He weakens the confidence of those who are inclined to trust in what He says. Lord Kenyon now supports the Government against Lord Grenville.

Lord Minto‡ is a very sensible man in conversation calm & eloquent. He spoke of the abilities of Fox, and said He was great in disputation in the House of Commons, but His Lordship thought little of Him beyond that. He spoke of Pitt, Rucke & Fox. After allowing everything of genius, imagination, and talent to Burke & speaking of the nature of such qualities, He finally said, That Judgment is the best quality of the human mind, being that, which, seeing the whole, appreciates and decides upon it, and in justly so doing bears more authority to omnipotence than is expressed by any other effort of the mind.

Willm. Lamb said Lord Castlereagh in debate expresses His thoughts in ordinary language, but there is generally a great [deal] of substantial matter in what He says, In this opinion Mr. Lamb agreed with Francis Baring.

* William Lamb (1779-1848), who became second Viscount Melbourne, entered Parliament in 1803 as a supporter of Fox. Chief Secretary for Ireland in 1812, he, on success to the peerage, was made Home Secretary under Earl Grey from 1813 to 1814, and twice Prime Minister.

† George, second Lord Kenyon. See Index, Vol. III.

‡ See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

CHAPTER XLVIII

1807

A Famous Architect

July 4.— Robert Smirke called & shewed me a letter which He had this day received from Lord Lansdale. It was read, by His Lordship from Lord Bathurst promising to His Lordship the appointment of Architect of the Mint to Robert Smirke.*

[July 5. Died, recently, at Ford in Northumberland, aged 85, Mr. Robert Saunderson, who served as Ordinary Surgeon to General Wolfe, at the Memorable attack on Quebec, and was the person reproached as supporting the British General after He had got his fatal wound. He often boasted that He was the person who shot General Montcalm, the French Commander at that place.— From small note-book.]

Constable Declines

July 6. Constable I met & He mentioned that Stothard had spoke to Him abt. putting down His name to be an Associate & He wished to have my opinion. I gave Him to understand that it was not probable that He wd. be elected, but He might put down His name to make it familiar to the members if He thought proper; at the same time it was to be recollected that the true impression was to be made by works.

[In the Sheriffs Court Mr. Thomas Sheridant had a verdict against him— Damages £1500 for Crim. Con: with Mrs. Campbell wife of Mr. Campbell the Son of a gentleman of large property in the West Indies.— Mr. Campbell is abt. 39 years of age & Mrs. Campbell abt. 33 years old. The Crime proved took place abt. 3 years ago, February 1804 at Edinburgh.— No defense was made.— From small note-book.]

* Smirke (1780-1867), who received the appointment, was the eldest son of Robert Smirke, the painter, and architect of the British Museum, the General Post Office, the College of Physicians, and other public buildings. Elected A.R.A. in 1808, he became R.A. in 1811 and was knighted in 1832. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† Tom Sheridan, elder son of R. B. Sheridan, and father of three daughters famous for their beauty and talent. The eldest became Countess of Gifford, the second Lady Stirling-Maxwell of Keir, and the youngest Duchess of Somerset.

Ignorance and Acid

July 7.—Rogers* at Sir F. Haring's to day proved His ignorance of pictures & art. He took a picture by H. Everett to have been painted by Wibon, the most opposite practice that can be.

At Willm. Spence's afterwards Sir Henry Englefield said that [Payne] Knight has declared that the picture by Rembrandt of the Woman taken in Adultery is a damaged picture; that the head of our Saviour has been rubbed almost to extinction. This caused a cry against Knight's judgment, & Rogers sd, plain speaking was best, that Knight knew nothing of pictures, & was becoming an Old Woman. The approbation He gave to Westall's Flora was considered an additional proof of his bad taste.

Opie was spoken off, & His promiscuous disposition was remarked upon. It was mentioned that a person happened by mistake to take Opie's great-coat & found in one of the pockets pieces of crust of bread, & meat &c,—such as might have been expected in that of a Beggar. Sydney Smith who was present said "The very wrappings of penury."—Smith observed "That Opie sometimes said hard things,"—meaning of strong sense & observation.

In the course of conversation animosity of disposition was noticed as prevailing in certain persons, on which Smith said, "Oh for the true Acid, give me the pure vinegar of Hopper."

Sheridan and Athol Brose

C. Offley's I dined at. Sandeman† told us that when Sheridan was in Scotland two or three years ago, He drank very hard. He was hospitably entertained by the Duke of Athol, which made a strong impression on him, & caused Him to support the Duke's claim to further remuneration for what He had sold to government in the Idle of Man.—Sheridan was particularly fond of a liquor prepared for Him by order of the Duke called "Athol Brogue" [Bros] a mixture of Whisky & Honey, which He drank in larger quantities. Afterwards in London

* Samuel Rogers. See Index, Vols. I, II and III.

† William Robert Spencer (1769-1814), a well-known poet and wit. See Vol. I, page 293.

‡ Mr. Sandeman, wine merchant, 20, St. Martin's Lane, Lombard Street.

§ Dr. Charles Mackay says that Athol brose was composed of Whisky and Honey (some authorities add oatmeal) taken as a morning drop: a powerful and indigestive mixture, that no one but a Highlander out in the open air and in active exercise during the whole day can safely indulge in. Why it is named from the district of Athol in preference to any other part of the Highlands is neither known nor perhaps discoverable.

Sir Walter Scott, in the "Heart of Midlothian" speaks of a "rustling draught of Athol brose." And Neil Gow sang—

"An' aye since he wore Tattan trousers,
He dearly lo'ed the Athol brose,
And was he, you may suppose,
To play farewell to whisky."

while He was supporting the Duke in His claim, He was frequently with the Duke's agent Mr. Frazer of Lincoln's Inn.- One morning He told Frazer He was dry & asked him what He could give him. Frazer took him to a House in Serle St. belonging to Frazer & there began to prepare for him some whiskey & Honey, but while He was so employed, Sheridan on looking round had found a Bottle of Shrub, & before Frazer had made the Athol Brogue [Brose] Sheridan had drank all the Shrub.*

Sandeman ad. He had a few days ago dined with Mr. Maltby who rents a House belonging to the late Mr. Thelasson who made the extraordinary Will. He said He had seen an acct. of the profits of the year 1795 gained by Thelasson amounting to £83,000.- He left £700,000 to accumulate till His Great, Great Grandson should be of age. To His widow He left £2000 a year & the House in which Maltby resides. It is doubted whether Lord Rendlesham His Son has a large fortune: He has no concern in business. †

Mrs. Osley told me that the Revd. Mr. Simcox had mentioned to Her that in composing, writing & preaching the matter of 5 volumes of subjects for and Skeletons of Sermons He had employed 7000 Hours. He appears to live by rule, noting the manner in which He passes His time.---

* Shrub was a drink made with the juice of orange or lemon<sup>2</sup> (or other acid fruit) sugar, rum, or other spirit.

† See Index, Vols. II. and III.

‡ The Rev. Charles Simcox. See Index, Vol. III.

CHAPTER XLIX

1807

A Romantic Story

July 8. Mr. West called on me in the evening, & informed that Mr. Desenfans* died this afternoon, of which He had been informed by a note from Mr. Morris, nephew of Mrs. Desenfans (after a long illness occasioned by bursting a blood vessel—aged 61.) West remarked that no man could appear to suffer greater anxiety & distress of mind than Desenfans did when He saw & from what He heard of him, proceeded from reflecting upon His own conduct. West then told me that when the Cardinal of Poland brother to the late King of Poland was in England Desenfans paid very great attention to him & Bourgeois was always at his service. The Cardinal went away impressed with their kindness & caused the King of Poland to appoint Desenfans Consul General for that Country, & to give the Order of Knighthood to Bourgeois which was confirmed to Him here by His Majesty acknowledging title when Bourgeois was introduced to him by the late Duke of Leeds then Secretary of State, who had been induced by Desenfans on to do

The Cardinal's Casket

When the troubles in Poland rose to such a height as to break the government of that country, the Cardinal sent a casket to Desenfans in which he inclosed jewels & property belonging to Himself & the King his brother, to be taken care of by Desenfans. This Desenfans told to West, but said the Casket had been robbed of the treasure it contained before it came to his hands. It was not long after when both the Cardinal and the King died. West said that before this period Desenfans was rather a needy man, but then set up a carriage & lived rather expensively, & had since undoubtedly a command of money which some of our nobility had proved by obtaining assistance from Him. W

* Noel Joseph Desenfans, a Frenchman, was born at Douai in 1746. The French pictures and other possessions left to Bourgeois were bequeathed by him to found the Dulwich Art Gallery. See Index, Vols. I, II. and III.

† Sir Francis Bourgeois. See Index, Vols. I, II. and III.

said Desenfans certainly never made the money which enabled Him to proceed as He had done but by other means than picture dealing only.—Some years ago, He requested West to be a Trustee for His affairs, He being at that time apprehensive that He should die; and this He alluded to when West went to him to be reconciled to Him & signified "That West wd. find He had not forgot that kindness."—In this last illness He had declared that West had been his best friend by countenancing & recommending Him in His dealings in pictures, & by bringing the King to see His collection exhibited in Pallmall, which raised His name in that capacity.—West said that Desenfans had expressed His opinion of Bourgeois "That He had a good disposition, but a weak head."—

Boaden* told Fuseli that Bourgeois has reported that Desenfans had £8000 a yr. in the Funds, besides a collection of pictures worth £40,000.—

C. Whiteford† told me that Desenfans' death was caused by a total breaking up of his Constitution, and that the effusion of blood at one time, was an effect of it. He left Bourgeois all His pictures; & His two Houses; and one half of His other property, amounting, it is understood to £20,000. He left one legacy viz: to Kemble £100.—The Will was made about four years ago. Mrs. Desenfans is to have the other half of the property not devised to Bourgeois.

Napoleon Defends the Russians

West then spoke of the affairs of the Continent, and of the defeat of the Russians at Fredericksbult on the 24th of June, manifestly owing to their having been out-generalled. He said the schemes of Buonaparte are vast & prospective. He sd. the Persian Ambassador had been with Him in His Camp, & had returned to Persia attended by 25 or 30 French Officers, for the purpose of [instructing] them in the European art of War; evidently with a view of attacking the English power in India.

July 9. Marchant [R.A.] spoke of Beechey's‡ behaviour at Mr. Penns having dined with him there three times. Each time He slept after dinner; and shewed His vulgarity & improper familiarity, by addressing Mr. Penn with "my good Fellow."

He spoke with great contempt of the publication called the Artist & sd. He had never heard it mentioned by any one. Prince Hoare the Editor, is water gruel witht. Sah. He has the power of meeting the Types; His water is still horn.—Northcote wrote in it & makes an Artist first a Puppy, next an Ass, and then a Horse.—He read only 3 or 4 of the numbers & has thrown the others aside.—

Mr. Angerstein called on Fuseli the day after He had purchased the * James Boaden, editor of the Oracle. See Vols. I., II. and III.

† See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

‡ Sir William Beechey, R.A. See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

picture by Rembrandt, & smiling said He (Lawrence) will ruin Fuseli's dinner that day: & now said of the picture (background) is the finest part of it, and the whole very fine; figure of our Saviour is deficient in expression, the arm ought to be extended to accompany the words "Let Him that is with, Sin the first stone." Rembrandt has in general in this picture, unlike self, failed in expression.

Professional Wits

July 11. Lawrence I dined with. He dined with Rogers on day last where He met Lady & Mrs. Crew, the Hon: Mr. Lytton & the Hon: Wm. Spencer, and Mr. [Francis] Horner &c. He returned on the laborious task which a professional wit has to perform, & to always to keep up a character for saying brilliant things, & to & spur his jaded hack, however otherwise disposed. It was on that occasion by Wm. Spencer in a contest with Lytton's superiority, which was unmercifully carried on between them & coarseness for wit, till Spencer was wearied. The subject was "in the Whale's belly." Lady Crew sd. when they had finished, hoped they had had enough on that subject. Sydney Smith, I think, has an advantage over all these wits. It flows from him easily & naturally than from any of them. He noticed this to R who admitted that He had great readiness & of thought, but manner, that is, not an elegant deportment.

* Probably William Henry Lytton, afterwards third Lord Lytton (1815-1871) he married Lady Sarah Spencer, eldest daughter of the second Earl Spencer (him Creevy said in 1811). "Lytton having married, and being very poor, could not afford to continue in Parliament, and tho' he wanted little to enable him to do so, the news of Lord Spencer would not supply him with it, and he has been an exile almost since. Tho' grown very grey for his age (he was born in 1782), he is as lively and cheerful a companion as the town can produce, and they are said to be the happiest couple in the world."

† Francis Horner (1778-1812), born in Edinburgh, was a politician, and joined leading Whigs in founding the Edinburgh Review. A portrait of him by Raeburn in the National Portrait Gallery.

CHAPTER I.

1807

Style, Profligacy and Speaking

July 11.—Yesterday Lawrence dined with Sir H. Englefield where he met Mrs. Wm. Spencer, Sotheby, Rogers and [Francis] Horner. Style of writing in the English language was conversed upon; and after much had been said, it was allowed by all present that Sir Joshua Reynolds, in His Lectures, wrote with more purity & simplicity than any other modern writer, & might for the excellence of His style in that respect be compared with Addison; having clearness, ease, and no affectation.

Horner resides in the Temple, & writes in the Edinburgh Review, Lawrence thinks Him a man of very good understanding & principles with much information.

Sheridan was spoken of and many instances related of His profligacy with respect to women were mentioned; and his having seduced several who were in degrees related to Him & attempted others. At one period it was dangerous for a woman of character to be left in a room alone with Him as He often succeeded by their terror of being discovered when He made a sudden & desperate attack upon them.*

* Mr. A. Brinsley Sheridan, Frampton Court, Dorchester, Dorset, writing on Jan. 23, 1823, says: Having read in the Morning Post of January 17th an attack on my illustrious ancestor, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, by Farington in his Diary, I feel that I must be allowed to say a few words in his defence.

It seems to me to be a great pity that, after all these years, his memory should be thus maligned, and that he should not be allowed to rest in peace. Anyone who has read Vachell's life of Richard Brinsley Sheridan would know what a very gallant gentleman he was, and how courteous to the fair sex, and any statement to the contrary is false and a calumny. In those days political jealousy knew no bounds, and it is to this that I attribute Farington's attack.

Supposing Sheridan to be all that the virtuous Farington makes him out to be, is it possible that he should have been a personal friend of the King's, and would it be likely that his second wife should have been a daughter of the Dean of Westminster?

Also, would such a rascal as he is described have been buried in Westminster Abbey or thing else. Richards [the secretary] & I, though under the same roof had not seen each other since Opie's funeral. - Mrs. Fuseli is said to be of a fierce temper. - He sd. no person will suit the place of Housekeeper there but one of the degree of a menial servant.

Remarkable Prediction

July 14. [From Vienna accts. were recd. that on the 24th of May, at Constantinople, The Mufti, at the Head of the Malcontents, repaired with 300 Janissaries to the Seraglio, and read to the unhappy Sultan a list of his pretended Offences, recited passages from the Koran, which declared Him an acct. of those offences, unworthy of the Throne and ordered Him to sign a renunciation of it. Selim did, & begged His life. The mufti promised to intercede for Him. His person was then secured, & 14 of His Ministers were put to death. Couriers were sent to the Camp & the Dardanelles to arrest and strangle the Grand Vizier & the Captain Pasha. On the 25th. of May, a Proclamation was published in Constantinople, to announce to the people that the Sultan had been dethroned, and to make known His offences, & the passages of the Koran which condemned these offences. On the 26th. Mustapha, the Son of Achmet, was proclaimed Grand Signior. On the 27th. He sent an Order to Selim to take poison. Selim obeyed, and died in a short time. During the whole of this revolution but few disorders were committed. The Mass of the people took no part at all; so that this Catastrophe is attributed to some chiefs of parties yet unknown to the Janissaries. All foreigners were ordered to be respected. It is assured, that the Grand Vizier made no resistance to the order sent Him & was strangled. Of the Captain Pasha nothing is known. The Grand Vizier had gained some successes before He died: He passed the Danube at Ismael, & forced General Michaelson to retire from Wallachia to Fuesany & Reinnick. The new Administration is entirely composed of persons devoted to the Janissaries.

The discontent, occasioned among the people by the scarcity of provisions, and among the Janissaries by the European exercise and discipline, furnished the enemies of government with an occasion to excite an insurrection which cost the unhappy Sultan his Throne & His life.--From small note-book.]

[Dr. Carlisle] mentioned a remarkable prediction in Moore's Almanack published in Decr. last for the year 1807.--In the predictions for the month of April it is stated, -

"Near this time the Turkish Emperor dies, or it may be He hides His Head, His People are tumultuous; if He can save His life, let Him, I give Him fair warning of it."

Now it has happened that on the 24th. of May, which may be called near the time viz: the end of April, Selim, the Turkish Emperor was dethroned and imprisoned.

The Farlington Diary

July 15. We talked of filling the 2 vacancies of Academicians agreed that Howard ought to be one; and that Calcutt wd. be a agreeable member than Philips if the Academy shd. be disposed to I noticed Westmacott's deficiency of execution which He assented He [Thomson] admitted that [James] Ward had a claim to be an ciate; but that He is a vulgar man of abrupt manners; but there objection to Him on any moral principle.

CHAPTER II

1807

A Successful Portrait Painter

July 15. The Lease of Opies House in Berners Street was sold to Lonsdale, a Portrait Painter, for £1250, there being abt. 55 years unexpired.* At the sale of Opie's effects everything went for High prices.—

Porden† said a Picture cleaning tribe of dealers in old pictures have at present prejudiced Lord Grosvenor's mind so far against the merit of modern art as to interrupt His design of making a Collection of modern pictures; but in time this prejudice will be done away.

A Clover Family

Clarke, who is now writing the History of Lord Nelson in conjunction with McC Arthur,‡ is a native of Suffolk, and Son of a Clergyman.—His elder Brother is Dr. Clarke, who reads Lectures at Cambridge; He is abt. 38 years of age, is of a very vivacious disposition; in company a great talker; Has travelled far to the North; & is now married to a young Woman, daught. of Sir Willm. Rush, & had £10,000 with Her.—The youngest of these Brothers was Captain Clarke of the Navy, who unhappily, abt. two years ago was drowned in the River Thames while on a pleasure party, while attempting to save a friend, the Son of a Bunker.

July 16. Lysons called being returned from Gloucestershire. He found much antiquity in Devonshire while on his late tour. The country is all Hills cultivated and Enclosed to the top; not picturesque; but the Rivers and mouths of Rivers very fine. Dartmouth the finest, most picturesque [in] appearance He ever saw.—He went down the * James Lonsdale, born in Lancashire in 1777, studied under Romney and at the Royal Academy. He was one of the Founders of the (now Royal) Society of British Artists, and an exhibitor at the Royal Academy. He died at the Berners Street house in 1839. By him in the National Portrait Gallery are portraits of Sir Philip Francis (Junior), Lord Brougham, Nollekens, Queen Caroline, and others.

† William Porden, architect. See Vols. I., II. and III.

‡ John McArthur, LL.D.

River Dart from Totness to Dartmouth, a distance of 13 miles, & with the running tide: left Totness at 9 in the morning & returned at 8 o'clock at night. The Revd. Mr. Froude, Rector of Dartmouth, 2 miles from Totness accompanied them. He married Miss Spedding.*

Life in Old Quebec

Mrs. Brooke called accompanied by Her eldest daughter. She gave me a sketch of Rome made by Wilson, which I lent Her. Her husband now gave to Her as she has Wilson's picture of this view. She Her friend the Bishop of Quebec has not settled the business Church establishment with government and must remain here as a secessionist. He likes the Climate & Country of Canada; the air is everything is upon a great scale. Though born in Norfolk, & a man; and though He did not leave England till He was twenty years of age, He now finds the air of his native Country does not suit Him. Since He came from Canada, He has constantly had a cold from the Ueda down to His breast, with something of a cough, a slight cough. Mrs. Mountain, His wife, an Englishwoman, does not perceive any difference in Herself; but she complains of suffering from Cold here than when at Quebec owing to the climate again not being here so general & well contrived. At Quebec they live in the walls of their Houses, which give an equal warmth to the House. What they chiefly complain of in Canada is, the great length of their Winter, 8 months, with Snow upon the ground during 5 months of that period. After the ice breaks in the Spring the first Ship from England causes much agitation among a mixture of desire of information & apprehension of what it may bring. Sometimes an overland dispatch from New York arrives in the form of a letter at Quebec, but it is attended with great expense: a letter costs 2 or 3 guineas.

The Bishop lives upon very friendly terms with the principal Catholic Families established at Quebec; but feels that the Protestant Religion is not properly supported there. The Roman Catholic

* Robert Durrell Froude (1771-1849) was the father of James Anthony Froude (1844), the eminent historian and man of letters. The elder Froude graduated at Oriel College, Oxford, in 1793, and M.A. in 1798. He was rector of Denbury and of Dartington from 1799, and Archdeacon of Totness from 1820 until his death in 1849, aged forty-six years. Their daughter Margaret, who married William Spedding, of Alcester, Cumberland, and she died in 1881, became the mother of Mr. W. H. Mallock, author of the much discussed work "The New Republic." J. A. Froude said of his father that he "had a moderate but not a great mind, consisting chiefly in land, and he belonged, therefore, to the 'landed' interest. His children knew him as a continually busy, useful man of the world, a learned antiquarian, and an accomplished artist. Some of his pencil drawings were praised by Ruskin. . . . About doctrine, evangelical or catholic, I do not think I ever heard a single word, in church or out of it."

† The Rev. Jacob Mountain. See Index, Vol. III.

their processions &c. & much to impose upon the minds of the people & to draw them into that persuasion. His object, in England is to induce our government to make the Episcopal establishment at Quebec compleat, which, in his opinion, wd. have a sensible effect in favour of our Religion.

Landseer's Father

I dined & was the evening alone,--except John Byrne calling to inform me of his change of residence from 79 Tichfield St. to 54 John St.--He has a lease for 21 years, at a rent of £47.--His eldest Sister paints Flowers; Letitia, his second Sister at home, is employed in etching views for a Mr. Ainslie, of Timbridge; and His youngest Sister, etches & engraves. They keep only one Servant. John Byrne is employed in engraving views for Collett & Davis to accompany Lysons's work; but has now no share in it. Mrs. Byrne lodges in Cleveland Street.--He spoke of the passion which Landseer* always had for writing. While pupil to J. Byrne's father, when any difference arose between them He would not, though they worked together in the same room, express by words anything He might have to say, but would write a letter, and lay [it] upon His masters table, who was impatient at His losing so much time for such a purpose.

[The Committee of the House of Commons on the Petition of the British Museum, have reported that £1,025, is a reasonable price for the Lansdowne Manuscripts, which it is intended to purchase & deposit in the British Museum. From small note-book.]

* John Landseer, A.R.A., engraver, father of Sir Edwin Landseer, R.A. See Vols. II. and III.

CHAPTER III

1802

Angerstein and a Rembrandt

July 20. Marchi called. Had been 4 weeks at Topham Thousand out of spirits respecting Continental affairs. On of Mr. Angerstein's purchase of the Rembrandt, as said, for 5000,
"Two Hundred & fifty pounds a year to look at a picture daily added "the French will come & take it back."

Dance called to settle abt. dining today with Marchant. The Post office case is expected to come on today in the House of Com.
The report of the Committee is very favourable for Him. Mr. bridge, Sir John Newport &c. are warm for Him. Mr. Long, examination before the Committee was gentlemanlike & not the Palmer. Rose & Wm. Dumblass are decidedly against Him. He to obtain arrears to the amount of £40,000, & to have £10,000 for his life. - Mrs. Palmer, His late wife, had something of insanity.
Her. - One of His Sons, intended for the Church, was very extra-& shot himself.

Fuseli and Pitt

Fuseli while looking at Mr. Pitts Bust said "It wd. have been for this Country if He had not been born in it. He brought us state we are now in. Had He left the French to themselves, in matter of their Revolution, England wd. now have given La World.—He shd. have done as other powers did during our Civwho when they saw a King beheaded & Cromwell rise still did not * John Palmer (1742-1818) was a successful brewer and tallow-chandler and of an old Bath family. He succeeded his father also as a theatrical proprietor in there introduced Henderson, King, Elliston, Mrs. Siddons, and others. Palmer led him far afield, and in his journeying he noted the slow service of the State 1782 he projected a scheme for conveying the mails by stage coaches, and after mu-tion it was tried in 1784 and finally became successful. Two years later he was Comptroller-General of the Post Office. Subsequently Palmer was dismissed, a 1793 granted him a pension of £1,000. He, however, claimed remuneration for beyond his pension, but it was not until 1811 that Parliament paid him £50,000 affecting his pension. Palmer's struggle with the various Governments cost him

He died at Brighton on August 16, 1818.

fered."—I asked Him, as He is a great advocate for Physiognomy, what He thought of Mr. Pitt's Bust [by Nollekens]. He said there was great power expressed in it abt. the forehead; and Haughtiness in the mouth; that perseverance & obstinacy, were strongly manifested.—

Grattan and Perceval

July 21.—Lawrence I dined with.—He was at Lady Crew's* party at Paddington on Friday last. Grattan, Sharpe, Rogers, Horner &c. &c. were there. He noticed Sharpe's vanity, who had come from the House of Commons & sd. He had "vexed the Treasury Bench cursedly" by ironically noticing the Sincerity of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (Perceval) & the Veracity of the Secretary of the Treasury, (Sturges Bourne).—Lawrence saw that Grattan did not approve this, & a little while after Grattan spoke of Perceval & said, "He is a Bigot in Religion, which is to be disapproved, but there is Sincerity in what He does, and upon such a subject, when that is the case, allowance is to be made." He also spoke of His talents in such a way, as made it manifest that He thought well of Him, & was in contradiction of Sharpe, —who made use of another vulgar expression, saying "The Ministry must be licked up." Grattan did not support Him in this manner of talking. He did not know that much good wd. be done by "licking a ministry up," and as to sincerity allowance must be made for all Men in office. He could say of Himself that when He was in a situation to have interest, He had been applied to [by] one whom He had known, who wished for an appointment & to save trouble named one of £2000 a year. To this impudent proposal I ought in sincerity to have told Him that He was foolish & unreasonable; but I was not sincere with Him, and replied that I was sorry I could not comply with His request.

Grattan sd. He condemned another kind of Bigotry more than that of Perceval. Forster,† the Irish Chancellor of the Exchequer, He sd. was a Bigot in Politics which is a very bad quality.

Poet and Actor

Kemble returning home one evening having drunk much was in a carriage with Sharpe, Rogers, & Lawrence. He spoke of Rogers poem "The pleasures of Memory," & told Rogers that it was faint, & a little womanish; but there were many very good lines in it: but added, after having written that How could you think of publishing yr. "Epistle to a friend" (Sharpe) one of the most wretched things that ever was written.

* Frances, daughter of Fulke Greville, wife of the first Baron Crewe of Crewe. See Vol. II., page 96.

† William Sturges-Bourne (1769-1845), politician, was the only son of the Rev. John Sturges, Chancellor of the diocese of Winchester. On the death of his uncle, Francis Bourne (who took the name of Page), the bulk of his fortune came to Sturges, who assumed the name of Bourne.

‡ John Foster, Baron Oriel. See Vol. I., page 250.

The next morning Kemble recollected what He had ad—never since been invited by Rogers to His House.

[The Sum expended from the 1st. of June, 1804, to the 1st. of J 1805, for the Volunteer Service, amounts to the Sum of "One eight hundred and thirty four thousand, three hundred and e pounds Sixteen Shillings." The total [number] of Recruits en England & Ireland in 1804 was 10,281; in the present year 9,49 been enlisted in England alone. From small note book.]

Greeks Ignorant of Anatomy

July 22. [Dr.] Carlisle called, and talked of a Plan of the public exercises of the Paglato, a school of study for arti study the Human figure. He repeated what He had asserted Essay published in the Artist, that the Greeks had little or no kno of anatomy; so little had they discriminated the parts which c
the human body, that they had but one word, to express musc Nerve, &c. He referred His opinion to Payne Knight who has the Greek authors deeply, & He agreed with him, that the Gree little or no knowledge of Anatomy. It was from constantly contem the form & action of the finest human figures in their public e that the Greek Artists conceived that abstract idea of building form which we see in their statues. He said that the study of u in the manner in which many modern artists have done it has fre produced an affected & false display of their knowledge of it, an as to skin their figures most unnaturally. Le Page, who had been Surgeon was a strong instance of this false representation of the figure. He said Barry had studied Anatomy with great attentio than many Surgeons do; yet it did little for Him as an Arti drew but indifferently, & His figures were ill put together. He sa one mode of studying the Human figure; to draw a line mark forma of the principal muscles on a figure standing with, mo then observing the shifting of these muscles in any action into the figure might be thrown. In a school for study such as propose, the figures shd. of course exercise naked; and to P
He wd. add Tumblers &c. to obtain as great a variety as possible.

W. Wells I dined with. We dined a little after 6. Mrs.
Senr. told me she was acquainted with the first Mrs. Angerstein first Husband, Mr. Crokatt shot Himself, but the Ball lodged un ear, & did not kill him, but He died of a Locked Jaw. Mrs. Crok a fortune of £20,000, which was settled upon Her & went to Her C

CHAPTER LIII

1807

Ague and Arsenic

July 23.—Thomson & Owen dined with me.—Thomson while He was in Italy was much afflicted with fever. He also had the Ague, at Naples, for which He took Bark witht. it having the least effect, which caused a Neapolitan Physician to give Him two Pills which He took upon the symptoms of the ague fit commencing; and in a very short time He felt a warmth throughout, and the fit repelled & from that period He has never had a return of it. The Physician afterwards told Him it was Arsenick which He had given Him.—This remedy is known to our Physicians, but must be used with very great caution; & like other violent stimulants, may eventually bring on Paralysis.

Cosway's extravagance in conversation was mentioned. Owen sd. that at the Council, on Monday night, it being noticed to Cosway that He was not at the Academy dinner on the Kings Birthday, He sd. "I was there & witnessed all that passed," meaning to have it understood that He was there but invisible, being then in a spiritual capacity.—He rejoiced extremely at the Victories of Buonaparte.—

[The effective force of the Volunteers, in Great Britain, by the last returns amounted to Three Hundred and Twenty nine Thousand Three Hundred and forty-six men.—From small note-book.]

Peace with America

July 24.—Caleb Whiteforde told me that He had lived in habits of intimacy with Dr. Franklin Twenty-five years, during which period they lived next door neighbours in Craven Street, Strand. It was on acct. of this known intimacy between them, that He was selected by our Government to go to Paris to obtain confidential answers from Dr. Franklin, to prepare the way for terms of peace being concluded upon with America.—Whiteforde obtained from Franklin all the information required, & by so doing prevented another year of War, which would have otherwise been so much longer continued.—He said, it was not the wish of many of the American Leaders to separate from this country, but after national animosity had arisen to a high pitch, they were obliged to go with the stream. The Federalists in America, are the people of respectability & Property, and are well disposed towards Great Britain & inclined to draw the Union of the two countries as close as they can. With these was Washington; so is Adams; but Jefferson, the present President of the United States, is wholly inclined to France, in which country He had long resided. & He is supported by the Democrats Jacobins.

[July 28. Shipping. The number of British Ships employed the trade of Great Britain in the last year, was

	Ships.	Tons.	Men.
Inwards .....	12,418	1,482,669	88,9
Outwards .....	12,451	1,486,104	94.3
Foreign.

	Ships.	Tons.	Men.
Inwards .....	3794	642,921	31.5
Outwards .....	1459	268,170	29.6

From small note book.]

A River Party

July 27. At ½ past 1 today I went with Lawrence & General Campbell to Mr. J. Wolf's at Sherwood* near Hammersmith we proceeded by water, where we arrived a little before 5 o'clock, & found a Tent made of Colours, placed upon a carpet spread upon the Lawn before the River. In this a little before 6 we dined. We had Turtle, with 2 courses of Champagne, Claret, Madeira, Port, & Punch for the Turtle. A Dessert of Fruit with Ice, everything very handsome. At 6 o'clock the Annual Sailing Boat race for a Silver Cup given by Mr. Barr of Vauxhall, passed in our view, & was saluted with Cannon by Mr. W. In a pleasure Boat was Mr. Barrett with several Ladies, also Palmer the Post Office, and Topham.† About 9 o'clock we went into the Sa to tea & about 10 o'clock the party broke up & I was taken in Mr. Goldsmid's Coach to Vauxhall Gardens gate, & there parting with them proceeded home, where I found Lawrence waiting for me. Mr. Goldsmid I found a very civil man, not having the least appearance of being a Jew, but Mrs. Goldsmid and Six Children of theirs, had all of them the look of their people.

Freedom of the Seas

[The Journal in Paris announces that at the dinner at Tilsit, at which the Emperor of Russia & Buonaparte were present, the following To * Jens Wolf, Danish Consul in London. See Vol. III., page 97.

† John Topham. See Vol. III., page 50.

‡ Abraham Goldsmid, of Morden House, was a stockbroker, who was joint contractor with the house of Sir Francis Baring, for a loan of fourteen millions. Owing to financial difficulties he committed suicide on September 28, 1810. See Annual Register for year.

was given "The Freedom of the Seas." Also that Guillet, the person who went to Mr. Fox to propose to Him to assassinate Buonaparte, and who was taken up on his arrival on the Continent, died a few days ago (dated July 9th) at the Bicetre, where He was confined.

On Friday night last, or Saturday morning Lady Frederick Campbell was burnt to death in Her Bed at Coombank, owing to the Curtains of Her Bed having taken fire, caused by Her falling asleep while reading in bed. She was abt. 70 years of age, & was the daugr. of Amos Meredith Esqr. and Sister of Sir Wm. Meredith Bart. In 1752 she was married to Earl Ferrers, the unfortunate Nobleman who was executed at Tyburn, in 1760, for the wilful murder of Mr. Johnson, his Steward; she was divorced* from Him by act of parliament & after His death, in 1769, married Lord Frederick Campbell brother to the Duke of Argyll.

In the debate in the House of Commons yesterday upon the Defense Bill, Mr. Canning said, That the Conscription established by the Rulers of France was not an absolute personal Conscription. Substitutes were allowed to be provided, although certainly they were not to be provided at so cheap a rate as in this Country, for He happened to have the opportunity of knowing, that about two months ago, the price of a Substitute in France was 200 guineas.

July 29. This day (Wednesday 29th) Mr. Perceval, Chancellor of the Exchequer moved that £10,000 be granted to His Majesty to remunerate Dr. Edward Jenner, as a further reward for promulgating His discovery of Vaccine Inoculation: to be paid witht. any deduction. Mr. Morris moved an Amendment, That £20,000 be inserted instead of £10,000. Seconded by Sir John Sebright.

For Mr. Morris' amendment	60
Against it	47

13

Mr. Perceval persisted in his proposal to give only £10,000. From small note-book.]

* Constance Lady Russell writes Mr. Farington is quoted as writing that Lady Frederick Campbell "was divorced," which was not the case. On the contrary, this lady obtained on June 20, 1758, an Act of Parliament for separation (not divorce) from her first husband, Lord Ferrers, "for the cruelty of the said Earl." In February, 1758, Horace Walpole writes to Sir Horace Mann as follows: "A frantic Earl of Ferrers has for this twelve month applied conversation, by attempting to murder his wife, a pretty, harmless young woman having broken the peace to which the House of Lords tied him last year, the cause was tried again there on Friday last."

CHAPTER LIV

1807

Lord Thurlow

August 5.—Lawrence I dined with — He mentioned the opinion given of the late Lord Thurlow by Mr. Smith, Judge Advocate in India, who knew Him well & said That Lord Thurlow's was anything but a straight forward "Judicial Understanding", that He doubted, & cavilled everything & decided nothing.

August 6. W. Wells* I dined with — Mr. Holley spoke of several persons who from a low beginning had made great fortunes. He mentioned a Leather Hoeshee maker, of the name of White, who formerly resided at Torperley in Cheshire & made Leather Hoeshes for the gentlemen of that Hunt. Being recommended by them He came to London & settled in St. Albans St. & now resides in Bond Street, & is said to worth £150,000. —

Lawrence called on me in the even'g. The wife of a Colonel now Stralsund with Lord Cathcart, has recd. a letter from the Colonel in which He gave a very unfavourable acct. of the King of Sardin. That He a kind of Madman but with the strong determination of one upon a point which possesses the mind; on the contrary He is irresolute & changing incessantly; has shown great anxiety for His own personal safety and in all that respects Himself is very fastidious, requiring all possible parade in approaching His person. — Lord Cathcart & the Officers are disgusted & disappointed, & wish themselves elsewhere. —

Sheridan Spoke Well

August 8.—Lawrence came to breakfast.—He was last night at House of Commons, and remarked on the great inferiority of the speaker compared with what He had formerly heard. — Canning was the best Sheridan was drunk, but spoke well—Wilberforce spoke well.—Windham with little effect. His action & His voice (changing His tones) all expressive of His vanity.—Perceval indifferent, & Lord Castlereagh worse.—I went with Him to Brown's, the Colourman, with whom He opened an account.—

* Of Redleaf, collector of pictures.

August 9.—[This day [the 9th] a Proclamation, by Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States, appeared, dated Washhington, July 1st, 1807.—“Requiring all armed Vessells bearing Commissions under the government of Great Britain, immediately & witht. delay to depart from the harbours and waters of the United States; and that should any of them fail to do so, or shd. hereafter enter, all supplies & intercourse is prohibited with them;—Unless Vessells forced in by distress—by the dangers of the Sea, or by the pursuit of an enemy,—or with dispatches from their government, in which cases supplies shall be had.”—From small note-book.]

August 11. Daniell [R.A.] called. His tour to Wales with Davis & Wm. Daniell, cost them abt. 45 pounds each. They were out a month, took a Chaise from London, & had Post Horses.— Their rule was to have a Bottle of wine at dinner, & they dined late having no Supper.—

Women

August 12. Lawrence I dined with. He mentioned a marriage which had produced little happiness to the female. She a woman of elegant mind, taste, & much sensibility; the Husband a man of narrow understanding, without pursuit or employ; neither seeking for knowledge or rational amusement; lolling on a Sofa till 2 o'clock; then riding a while before dressing for dinner.

In addition to this he was jealous of other friends being desired by His wife; and not polite in obliging Her. (Of another Lady he sd. that Her Father in Law, said of Her “That she was a single page”.—What she is you see at once; & nothing is produced by more acquaintance with Her mind.

Lawrence sd. He had occasionally been much struck by the force of certain expressions. He never has forgot what a woman once said when He was present, “Everything must have its results.”—

[On the 4th Inst. a poor woman residing at Lahinch near Enniskillen, in the County of Clare, was safely delivered of 5 children, 3 sons and 2 daughters, who with the mother are in a thriving way.—

Note: Mr. Hayes* told me that several instances have been known of 5 children being produced at one labour, but never more, and in all the instances of 5 Children being thus born, none have lived beyond a short time.—From small note-book.]

* Sir John Macnamara Hayes, M.D. See Index, Vols. II. and III.

CHAPTER IV

1867

A Reynolds Sale

August 14.—Lady Thomond I called upon at Eleven previous to the Sale of the pictures left at Sir Joshua's late Home in Leinster to be disposed of.—At 2 o'clock I went to the Sale & found in the few but Picture dealers & Brokers. Lord Mulgrave just looked in. S. Rogers came, & bought 2 landscapes by Hoggar* much touched by Sir Joshua & on this acct. Rogers valued them highly. Snell was Auctioneer.

The Pictures bought in were knocked down at..... £426
The Pictures sold were knocked down at..... 297

713

Sampson & Dalilah, a Copy from Vandyke, but bought by Sir Joshua, unseen, at the recommendation of Caleb Whitelorde for 300 guineas sold for..... £68
Theory, the original design & picture from which the picture by Him, in the Ceiling of the Library in Somerset Place, Royal Academy was painted..... 63
A very bad imitation of Rubens, viz: Diana and Her Nymphs, for which Lord Thomond at a Sale gave 22 guineas, sold for..... 48
S. Rogers bought the 2 landscapes touched upon by Sir Joshua for..... 21 10

Constable

August 15.—Constable called. He told me that Young Reinagle had lost a great deal of money by His Panorama Speculation in the Strand.

* Giovanni Francesco Grimaldi (1666-1686).

† Ramsay Richard Reinagle, son of Philip Reinagle, R.A. Ramsay, also an Academician, had to resign his diploma owing to having exhibited as his own work a picture by T. W. Vernon.

in which He engaged with One of the Son's of Barker, proprietor of the Leicester Square Panorama. Reinagle now teaches drawing & in consequence of the great success of Glover in selling His drawings of views of the Lakes is gone to that Country accompanied by Havil to store themselves with subjects for drawings. Two or three of Old Reinagle's daughters are now copying parts of pictures (the whole of any picture is not allowed to be copied but by express permission) by old Masters lent for this season to the British Institution; They told Constable that in painting these copies they begin with water colours only upon a raw canvass, over which they pass lightly some oil to fix the colours & make them bear out, & then touch upon such parts as may require it with oil colours. This, they said, their Father declared to be the only way of copying the pictures of Old Masters successfully. They work very quick, & said, "Picture painted one day, sold the next, money spent the third."*

The Best Man in the World

Lady Thomond I drank tea with, & found Her tolerably well satisfied with the result of the Sale. She told me that Fulk, the owner of their late House (Sir Joshua's) in Leicester Square [now Puttick and Simpson's auction room], asks £300 a year rent for it, also that the property tax upon that shall be paid by the tenant; also that £500 shall be laid out in repairing the House at present; and that it shall be painted throughout once in every 2 years or 2 years and a half. -

She spoke of Lord Thomond, who is at Taplow, in the highest terms. She said, There is not such another man in the world: He is the best man in it. In trifles He is irritable in the extreme; but in everything of moment calm & firm; hearing whatever may happen with fortitude. - She spoke of His strong & just sense of Religion; of His generosity; & His universal kindness, & while she did it, it was with tears. - She spoke of His fine constitution, saying, "it had the purity of that of a Child." His wounds heal without care. The fever which had nearly carried Him off in August 1804 was owing to His riding to Taplow on an excessively hot day. It was a Coup d'Soleil. - His servant was affected by it. - When He got to Taplow, He did not take care of Himself, but immediately rode abt. His grounds; but on returning home & dismounting from His Horse, he fell back against some paling quite overcome. Dr. Ferris of [B ] happening to come there, & was much alarmed, & urged His Lordship to take a Chaise & return to London, not trusting to have His Lordship's care in His hands. - The next day His Lordship did so, & came to Lady Thomond in Leicester Square very ill. The fever continued upon Him 27 days, & He was often delirious. -

His life was saved by Sir Francis Milman. His Pulse was 120, and Sir George Baker, the other Physician, pleaded for the old practise, that of lowering Him. Sir Francis, on the contrary urged that the * See previous volumes for Old (Philip) Reinagle, John Glover and William Havell.

Constitution shd. be supported & assisted upon three large glasses of Madeira being given to His Lordship every day: saying, if we once lower Him, we shall never be able to raise Him again, & He will sink & die: but we can at any time lower Him if circumstances shd. require it. His Lordship had great repugnance to taking the wine, it felt to Him like oil on fire: & He had some how understood that Sir G. Baker disapproved it. The wine, however, He was induced to take & He recovered.

A Salutary Bishop

Lady Thomson spoke of Dr. Moss, the present Bishop of Oxford. A friend of His died & left Him £12,000. Dr. Moss having learnt that He had two Maiden Sisters not very well provided for, gave up to them the whole of what had been bequeathed to Him. He also gave a living of £800 a yr. to a friend in the Church who was unprovided for.

Mr. Metcalfe is at Brighton much recovered: but has lost the sight of one of His eyes. His acquaintance there attend at His good dinner & He has not been induced by the richness of the Prince for Wales to quit that place.*

Sir William Scott, Judge of the High Court of Admiralty is very rich. He gave in His Income sometime since at £17,000 a year. He has one Son & one daughter: the latter is told by Her parents that she is not to expect to have a large fortune: all their mounds is upon the Son in this respect. They are remarkable Economists.

* Philip Metcalfe, F.R.S., F.N.A., who was a friend and one of the executors of Joshua Reynolds, had offended the Prince. Metcalfe, who was very wealthy, gave £ to his niece Frederica, "to buy her death," on the morning of her marriage in 1799 she was born in 1764. To James Mure or More (as the family spell the name), second of Baron Mure of Caldwell, in Ayrshire, a well known Scots family, dating from 11 Frederica's granddaughter, Mrs. Charles King, owns a copy of a miniature of her grandmother by John Downman. See Vol. I, pages 94 and 171, and Index of Vols. II. and

CHAPTER LVI

1807

Gossip at Lady Thomond's

August 18. Lady Thomond I drank tea with. She had been to visit Her aunt, Mrs. Reynolds, who is ill of a fever. She told me that Mrs. Fitzherbert has lost Her influence over the P-----. He is now devoted to the M-----s of H-----; to whom while they were in London, He constantly went every day & staid from three o'clock till 5. He now complains that Brighton is too cold for Him, & is going to Cheltenham, which is only 15 miles from Ragley in Warwickshire, the seat of the M-----. I remarked that the M----- is not young; she replied that notwithstanding she is an extraordinary fine woman, a Juno.—It is supposed the P----- got the Garter for the M-----, and is to make Him a Duke.---

The P----- is inveterate against the P----- & she is so much upon His mind, that He lately introduced the subject unexpectedly to a Gentleman who mentioned it to Lord T[homond]. The P----- said, He had formed an unchangeable resolution never to set His foot in a House in which she dwells. He believes everything to be true that has been alleged or insinuated against Her.---

Of the Sons of the Royal Family, Lady T[homond] believes the Duke of Cumberland to be the best. He now goes to Church regularly, & has left off swearing. The Duke of Cambridge is thought to be the next best. The daughters of the Royal Family are the comfort of the King, and His Majesty is very fond of them.

Lord Thomond is now out of favour with the Prince of Wales, which may be owing to His Lordship holding intercourse with, & inviting to dinner, the Duke of Cumberland. The Prince does not now notice His Lordship when He meets Him in Company.---The Prince expresses His dislike of the Duke of Cumberland in an extraordinary manner: having forbid the young Princess, His daught. to speak to the Duke, when she sees Him.---The Prince appears to be recovering His Health.---

A Great Project

August 19.---Dance told me that Rennie,* the Engineer, has been consulted by government abt. insulating a projecting point of land a little about Gravesend, by cutting a channel across the land where it projects, & on this Island, when made such, to form a Deg. 1, as a substitute for Hutchins, which by being made all by Deg. 1, is not easily attacked by land wd. be more secure Deg. 1. The calculation of expenses to do this seemed to be immense. Four millions was the estimate reported.

* John Rennie, of Waterloo Bridge fame.

[The value of property insured in the different Fire Offices in Great Britain, in 1796, was about £28,500,000, and in the United Kingdom about £29,000,000.]

Yesterday the price of Bread was 1s. 1d.  $\frac{1}{2}$  the quarter load Wheat and 1s. 1d. Household.

Advertisement in a newspaper.—"The Proprietor of the two wonderful Sibogæ Serpents, now exhibiting at the Large room No. 22 Piccadilly begs leave to inform the Nobility & Gentry, and others, that from the numerous applications he has received of Noblemen & gentlemen to see these extraordinary Reptiles before their Privy, they will have a public dinner on five Rabbits this day, at 4 o'clock, which is expected to be attended with a numerous assemblage of Ladies & Gentlemen. Admittance each person 2 shillings." From small note book.]

He Knows Piranzzi

August 20. Lewis* told me that He went to Italy in 1770, and returned in Decr. 1772. At the time He left England He was 19 years old. He knew Piranzzi well and sd. He was extremely vain of His work and was sensible in the extreme to flattery.

Lewis kept a Diary or Journal while He was abroad, but lately destroyed it. He wrote it in Italian, and being conscious it was written very incorrectly, as He wrote in that language as an exercise in it, He became unwilling that it should fall into the hands of those who might remark upon it. Had he had a Son, brought up to His own profession He wd. have preserved them. He spoke of Sir Robert Taylor,† an Architect, & sd. He was a very early riser, & did His business in the fore part of the day, & in the evening read, in His night gown & slippers those who called upon Him.

Lewis sd. that Soane had pulled down parts of the Bank, particularly the Rotunda, which was designed by Sir Robt. Taylor, & has built the room of it one in a much worse taste. Cocherell remarked upon That Soane in this had displayed some understanding, as by pulling down that which Sir Robert had built, it could no longer be a reproach to Him by its contrast to all the bad taste which He, Soane, had manifested in every other part.

August 23.—Lysons called,—dined with Sir J. Banks & yesterday

* James Lewis was an architect.

† Famous architectural draughtsman.

‡ See Index, Vols. I. and II.

§ See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

at Spring-grove, near Hounslow.---Champaigne & Burgundy on the table with other wines.---Sir Joseph never takes either flesh meat or wine.---Lysons reckoned that He has an income of £14,000. His Lincolnshire estate £8000.---His Derbyshire estate £3000; and Lady Bank's estate in Kent £3000.---She was Miss Higginson, cobwress with one of the wives of Sir Edward Knatchbull.* In the evening the company went to inspect a quantity of bones found at a depth of twelve feet at or near Hounslow.---Mammoth Elephant.---no human.

August 24. Lawrence & Lysons called & with them & Fnseli I went to Mr. Angerstein's at Woodlands [Blackheath] to dinner.---We dined at 6 o'clock. We remained at Woodlands till near 11 o'clock.---Six Pines upon the table, 2 Cant. Other fruit. Claret, Madeira, Port,---Hock,---White Port. We saw Lawrence's picture of 4 Children of Mr. & Mrs. J. Angerstein which He began the week before last at Woodlands.---Mr. Angerstein told me that the estate He has bought in Norfolk or Suffolk, formerly belonging to Lord Mountbath,† contains 6000 acres of land,---poor land which He is endeavouring to cultivate, but wd. not live there if it were given to Him upon that condition.---He told me his habit now is to ride every morning before breakfast from  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 7 for an Hour and a half to two hours, breakfast at 10; go to London to City business abt. 11 and return a little after 5.---In October He annually goes for 2 months or so, to Mr. Bonchures in Lincolnshire, abt. 160 miles from London, & there He hunts almost daily, beginning with 2 or 3 hours, & increasing to 4 or 5 hours: but His Hunting is for air & exercise & not to perform feats.

[Effective strength of the British Army on the 1st of June last,---

Cavalry, British 23,295.	Foreign, 3020.	Total.....	26,315.
Infantry, British 129,263.	Foreign 27298.	Total.....	156,561.
Militia, British 53,810.	Foreign 24180.	Total.....	77,990.

Grand Total: .... 260,866.

* See Index, Vol. II.

† Charles Henry Coote, seventh Earl of Mountbath, died at Strawberry Hill, Devonshire, on March 2, 1802, and the Earldom became extinct. Lord Mountbath's dread of small-pox was so great that he had relays at five houses between his seat in Norfolk and his home in Devon, in order to prevent the possibility of infection. He would not sleep at an inn, and ordinarily led the life of a recluse. Rarely seeing anyone, except on business, he was found to be on these occasions always most friendly, polite in manner, and refined.

All his estates, real and personal, with trifling reservations in England, were bequeathed in fee to Lord Bradford, his maternal relation. He left £6,000 for charitable purposes.

‡ See note, Vol. III., page 258.

The public Revenue of England was, in

1100	£100,000	1300	£100,000
1200	£100,000	1400	£100,000
1300	£100,000	1500	£100,000
1400	£100,000	1600	£100,000

—From small note-book.]

CHAPTER LVII

1807

A Famous Banker and Actress

August 27.—Called on Fuseli. We talked of raising his Salary to £150 a year.---He dines at Mr. Coutts the Banker, every Sunday when Mr. Coutts is in town. The party consists of Mr. & Mrs. Coutts, Lady Guilford & Lady Burdett. Mr. Coutts keeps a very handsome table; & Champagne, & Burgundy, are put on the table with other wines to be drank at pleasure.---Mr. Coutts is 74 years old. He has Shakespere by heart; & can repeat the following line to almost any that can be quoted.

Sir Francis Burdett dines with Horne Tooke* every Sunday & sometimes sleeps there on that night for a month together. Excepting his intercourse with Tooke He is almost always at Home, being very domestic.---Bosville† is one of the party at Tooke's.---

Mr. Coutts assured Fuseli He had nothing to do with Sir Francis Burdett's last Election, having told Him that in other things He might command Him, but in that matter He should take no part whatever.---

The paragraphs in Newspapers, insinuating that Mr. Coutts has an Amour with Miss Mellon, the actress, are most unfounded, He being a most domestic man & attached to His old wife.†---Fuseli thinks His spirits lately have not been so good as usual, which possibly may be owing to these squibs in the papers.---

Great Banking Firm

Coutts Trotter§ I went to & waited some time. The Old Porter told

* See Index, Vois. I. and II.

† William Bosville (1745-1813), celebrated bon vivant. See the D.N.B.

‡ Thomas Coutts, banker, said to be "the richest man in London." His long intimacy with Harriot Mellon was consummated, after his first wife's death, by his marriage to the famous actress in 1815, he then being eighty years old. Coutts died in 1822, and she was married on June 16, 1827, to the ninth Duke of St. Albans. Scott, whom she visited at Abbotsford, thought her a kind woman, "without either affectation or insolence in the display of her wealth." She was handsome, generous, and vivacious to quick temper. Born in London about 1777, the Duchess died in 1837.

§ Coutts Trotter, of Berners Street, was married at Hendon on June 12, 1802, to Margaret Gordon, youngest daughter of Lord Rockville, brother of the third Earl of Aberdeen. He was created a Baronet in September, 1821, and died in 1837.

me that Mr. Countts has now 26 Clerks; including 3 Cashiers,— & 4 Clerks who go out daily, one to Somerset House, 2 to the City, & one to the West end of the town. Formerly there was only one Cashier,—

Mr. Countts has now 4 partners; viz: Mr. Antrobus,* who is a native of Congleton in Cheshire & was formerly a Stock Broker, & resided in Bank Buildings. He has been with Mr. Countts 27 years. Countts Trotter on His coming from Scotland, was first a Clerk in the Navy Pay Office under His Brother Alexander Trotter, Deputy Paymaster under Lord Melville. Countts Trotter has been a partner with Mr. Countts about 4 years. The third partner is Mr. Mapinbanks, brother to Capt. Major banks the India Director. He has been with Mr. Countts abt. a year & a half & is abt. 28 or 30 years old.

Fuseli remarked to day that Mr. & Mrs. Countts visit the Marquis of Bute, their Son in Law, both at Petersham & Luton, but said Fuseli "The Marquis is a Satrap; He never visits them."

Lord Rivers had two Sisters; one of them married to Peter Beckford whose son, Thomas Beckford, the nephew of His Lordship, will be His Heir. Thomas lost £4000 in gaming. Mr. Countts, & Messrs. Farr & Co. Solicitors, advised His Lordship not to pay the debt, but an arrangement has been made for that purpose.

Fuseli and the Princess

Lord Rivers has brought the Princess of Wales, twice or three times to see Fuseli, and she has expressed an intention to purchase pictures from Him when she has money. He said Her manner is so familiar, so familiar for Her station, that it is difficult not to be led by it into some degree of forgetfulness of what is due to Her high rank & station.—

Danell I dined with. Smirke told us that Opie's first wife, a daught. of Mr. Hunn, a Pawnbroker in the City, had 2 natural Children a Son & a daughter, before she was married to Opie. The Son was apprenticed to a watch-maker, but being imprudent got into difficulties & being in a state of necessity stole a watch, which being proved against Him He was sentenced to death and was seen in Newgate in that state lately. He related to an acquaintance of Smirke His progress in Hell & said that from Newgate He had written to His Mother, having through His Sister discovered who she was, and recd. an answer from Her expressing surprise at the discovery but conjuring Him never to apply to Her again unless He meant to be the cause of Her death. He did apply to Her again. The theft being His first known offence it is supposed He will only be transported.—

* Edmund Antrobus, who was created a baronet on May 22, 1814, and died unmarried in 1826. Sir Cosmo Gordon Antrobus, fifth baronet, is the present representative of Fonthill Sale, which concluded on Monday last the 24th inst.* being the 7th day of Sale. The amount of the Sale must exceed £20,000.

Turner's 5th plague of Egypt, .....	155 ga.
Two pictures by Vernet, bought Elwin .....	550 ga.
The Poussins by Mr. Jeffries. ....	370 "
The Raphaels Welsh Porter .....	100 ga.
The Gipsy, by Romney Mr. Kenneys. ....	200 "
The Loggia of the Vatican, Mr. Paul. ....	661 "
The Cabinets with Hamilton's paintings purchased by Mr. Oakley.
The China produced enormous prices.
The mirrors produced near £5000. Three of them sold for 400 ga. each. The modern pictures sold high.
De Cort's view of Salisbury Cathedral .....	80 ga.
" view of Exeter Cathedral to Jeffery ....	20 "
Cannaletto, view of Venice--to Soane, .....	150 ga.

August 29. Lysons I dined with. Ralph Price† sd. that all the wool grown in Spain does not exceed annually 50,000 Bags, while that in England amounts to 600,000 Bags. The Spanish wool makes cloth of a very fine quality, but the English is the best for Cloth which is close & warm, not porous, but fitted for the Northern Countries.---

September 3. Caleb Whiteford was at the Gallery. He was at Fonthill with Nollekens during two days of the Sale. By taking down the House & selling the furniture Mr. Beckford will be relieved from an annual expense of £3000 to keep it up & probably receive £25,000 for what is sold.---

* The above sale is not recorded in Redford, Graves, or any such compilation known to us. The following account is taken from a newspaper of the period:

"This attractive auction closed with the pictures and porcelain, after lasting seven days, attended throughout by all the rank and opulence of the adjacent counties. The sale was conducted in the Grand Hall, and displayed every day an assemblage of the most beautiful females, each seeming to vie with the other in the display of their taste in dress. The crowd was great, and such was the scarcity of beds that cottagers let their hovels for one and two guineas a night. The Park and Lake afforded every day an enchanting scene. The company in groups hestrewed themselves over the verdant hills of the former, to enjoy their cold collations, and the barges crowded to the shady retreats of the banks of the lake, the quarry and the woods. The auction was conducted in a very excellent and quiet manner. Competition was general, and much spirit and pleasing opposition occurred to excite the rival bidders, which the auctioneer did not lose the opportunity to improve.

"This distinguished edifice is now dismantled of all its interior elegance, and is to experience demolition next month, being advertised for sale in detail, and is supposed not likely to produce more than £20,000, though erected by the late Alderman Beckford at an expense exceeding £130,000."

† Son of Sir Charles Price, a former Lord Mayor.

CHAPTER LVIII

1807

Protection in Heaven

September 6. Called on C. Copley. He told me Mr. Simeon expressed his reliance not on the strength of our Fleet or our Arm but that the people of this country, in these revolutionary times, would find their protection in the favor of Heaven from their possessing more religious & moral worth than in this world age is to be found elsewhere.

September 7. [Wedderburne Webster, a young Officer, for a wage of 1000 guineas, this morning rode his Horse Huzzard from Ipswich to London, 70 miles in four hours & 50 minutes. He was to perform it in 5 hours. - Small note-book.]

Pitt

September 8.—Lawrence I dined with. He mentioned more particulars given of Mr. Pitt by Lord Mulgrave. Mr. Pitt had the greatest veneration for His father, & seemed to have adopted many of his opinions.—He thought, with Lord Chatham, very highly of Lord Hollingbroke as a writer & as an Orator. Mr. Pitt thought Lord Hollingbroke superior to Burke—that He had a more pure taste. Mr. Pitt sometimes repeats a Parody of Dryden's Alexander's Feast, written by Lord Chatham, subject of it George and, ridiculed, - but He wd. not give a copy of it.—Mr. Pitt was a warm admirer of Milton, in this differing from Mr. Fox, who Lawrence has heard give a preference to Tasso & Ariosto, - Spencer our Poet.—The subject of Milton's poem relating to religion made Fox so feel prejudiced against it. -

September 15.—I sat to Lawrence the whole day, He having drawn the outline began to paint & laid the picture in. I dined with him. -

Teeth and Eyes

September 17.—Went to Elms (the dentist in Leicester Square) to get in a new front tooth.—I paid Him two guineas &  $\frac{1}{2}$  for what He had done to my teeth & for powder & liquid.

September 19.—At  $\frac{1}{2}$  past one called upon Mr. Watkin Phillips, Oculist, in Cork Street, Burlington Gardens, who examined my eyes.

told me that my complaint was seated in the Eye lids, which from having been over exerted had lost their tone, & did not properly supply moisture for their functions. He recommended to me to apply a large Sponge, steeped in Water as Hot as I could bear it to my Eye lids for the space of 6 or 7 minutes 4 or 5 times a day, & to call upon Him again on Monday next, when He shd. better be able to determine what to do.---I dined alone.---His hours for receiving patients from half past one till 4 every day except Sundays.---I gave Him one guinea.---

September 21. Passed the day with Lawrence sitting for my picture 6 Hours.---2nd sitting for painting.---Watkin Phipps I went to who applied a sharp stimulus to my eyes.---Directed an ointment to be touched to the edges & corners of my eyes for a minute the last thing at night,---and then to be wiped off with a soft Handkerchief.---The bathing the eyes to be continued as often as I please.---He sd. He shd. soon put my eyes to right.---

September 22. Sat to Lawrence to-day & he finished my portrait & the picture of a Three quarter size.---I have sat once for the outline & Three days for the painting,---abt. 6 Hours each day.---Lawrence decided it to be His best picture.---& that it shewed his other pictures.

Taylor and Lawrence dined with me.---Taylor mentioned that Pope [the Actor], who has married Mrs. Wheatley, yesterday expressed himself warmly of my kindness to Mrs. Wheatley under Her difficulties.

Not Calm Enough

September 24.---Lawrence came in the even'g.---He sd. He should paint over my portrait again, it wanted a finer pulp of colour,---a mellowed Hue,---& the expression is not what it shd. be, not calm enough.---

September 25. Watkin Phipps I went to.---He gave me a caustic waxy preparation inserted in a quill & shewed me how it was to be applied. The size of a pin's Head to be taken on the point of a small camel Hair pencil, & dissolved by passing it through the flame of a candle or holding it to the bent of a Candle or a fire, & then drawing the point of the pencil upon the lid of the eye, between the eye lash & the eye, of the upper & lower lid of each eye.---The eye not to be touched, though no injury wd. ensue from it.---He directed me to continue the use of the warm water Bath, & the eye water, but recommended the Caustic application to be applied every morning rather than at night, as it would be better seen how to do it.

Attack upon Denmark

[This day a Declaration was published by Ministers justifying the attack upon Denmark.---The following passage appears in it---"His Majesty has recd. the most positive information of the determination of the present Ruler of France to occupy, with a military Force, the territory of Holstein, for the purpose of excluding Great Britain from all Her accustomed Channels of communication with the Continent; of inducing or compelling the Court of Denmark to clear the passage of the against the British commerce & navigation and of availing himself aid of the Danish Marine for the invasion of Great Britain and of Ire

Organ Playing Condemned

September 27 In Hells Messenger it was stated, "That a Organ, lately erected in St. Andrews Church, Glasgow, was open Sunday the 6th inst. and accompanied the Psalmody during Service, with the unanimous consent of the whole congregation.
 is the first instance of instrumental music being admitted in the w of God in any Presbyterian Church in Scotland."

On October 14th the Presbytery of Glasgow, who have had me on the subject of introducing an Organ into one of the Churches of Gl came to the following resolution, viz.: "That the Presbytery opinion that the use of Organs in the public worship of God is con to the Law of the Land, and to the Law and Constitution of the Estab Church, & therefore prohibit it in all the Churches & Chapels their bounds; and with respect to the Conduct of the Clergyman in matter, they are satisfied with his judicial declaration, that He not again use the organ in the public worship of God, without authority of the Church."—[From small note-book.]

CHAPTER LIX

1807

Public Institutions

[September 28. Public Institutions. In the Bills of Mortality there are 502 places of public worship. Three thousand and fifty seminaries for education including 237 parish Charity Schools, Eight Societies for the express purpose of promoting good morals. Ten Societies for promoting the learned, the useful, and the polite arts. One hundred & twenty-two asylums and Almshouses for the helpless & indigent, including the Philanthropic Society. Thirty Hospitals & Dispensatories for Sick & Lame, and for delivering poor pregnant women. Seven hundred & four friendly or benefit Societies, and institutions for charitable & humane purposes which several institutions are supported at the almost incredible Sum of £750,000 per annum.—From small note-book.]

England Invincible by Sea

October 2. Landseer called, on the subject of obtaining the rank of Academicians for 3 or 4 Engravers & also to have a Professorship established in the Royal Academy for Lectures on the subject of Engraving.—Paul Sandby is friendly to the proposal.—Cosway also seems to be so & had spoken to Wyatt upon the subject, who said the proposal should first be made known to the King.—Landseer had delivered to me a printed address and letter, and intended to send one to each Academician for His consideration.

Lawrence came in the even'g, having dined at Kemble's who told Him that the late Lord Nelson had said to Him, "that in the present circumstances of the world, Great Britain would never have a secure & honorable peace till she had been at War with all the powers under Buonaparte's controul, and made Him & them feel the invincible power of this country by Sea."

A Good Landlord

October 5.—Revd. Mr. Martin Junr. called [at the Rev. H. Hamond's, * Weasenham, in Norfolk].—He informed me that the decline of the late Marquess Townshend was very gradual; that on the day {September 14} before He died He was at Fakenham, 3 miles from Ramham, in His carriage. His death was not expected when it happened. He was urged to take a glass of wine which he rather declined, but on being told that the Gentlemen who were below stairs at dinner were drinking the King's Health, He took the glass, & said "Here's the King's Health, God Bless Him, it is the last time I shall drink it," and soon after, in the course of that evening He expired without being observed till He was perceived to be dead. He was a good Landlord to His tenants, and good to the poor; as was also the Marchioness.

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

Mr. Blake, a Solicitor from London, came down on business for the present Marquess, & observed that He never before saw so many melancholy faces, as in that House & neighbourhood. The present Marquess since the death of His Father has frank'd His Lady's Leicester, Townshend. He is believed to have a great objection to the title Townshend, being very proud of His Baroncy of De Ferrers & His Earld of Leicester. He has had all His daughters christened with the addition Ferrers to that of Anne or Mary or whatever they might be first named.

{Cutley, the Highton Shepherd, ran 1 mile in a few seconds less than 4 minutes. He was to perform the mile at 4 starts in the space of the hours. He went the first quarter in a minute, and after taking some rest, He performed alternately the other quarters in less than 3 minutes. He reserved a few seconds for the last quarter of a mile, having done the third with astonishing speed. It took place this day on Clapham Common for a wager of 20 guineas. From small note book.]

A Norfolk Family

October 10.—At 2 o'clock I called on the Hon<sup>ble</sup> & Revd. W. Wodehouse at Little Massingham with H. Hancom & saw Him & Mrs. Wodehouse & Miss Hussey. Mr. Wodehouse sd. it is reported that measure of seizing the Danish Ships was suggested by the Marquess Wellesley.—Mr. Wodehouse is between 25 or 6 years old, Mrs. Wodehouse 29.—They were married in February last. She had £10,000 made up by a legacy from the late Lady Walpole, Her grandmother, & others.—He has 2 small livings, & their income is made up [to] £900 a year.—They have a carriage, but do not keep Horses. Lord Wodehouse has 3 other Sons,—viz:—Hon<sup>ble</sup>: Coll. Wodehouse of West Norfolk Militia,—Hon<sup>ble</sup>: Capt. Wodehouse of the Navy, Hon<sup>ble</sup>: The Rev. Armine Wodehouse, Rector of Litcham, £600 a year.—We returned home & dined witht. company.—

Barclay of Urie

October 12.—[A Pedestrian race took place this day at Newmarket for 600 guineas. Wood, a Lancashire man, against Captain Barclay of Urie. The wager was which should go farthest in 24 Hours, Wood gave Capt. Barclay 20 miles. They started at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Wood having gone 40 miles in 6 Hours and 20 minutes resigned the Contest.—The following is an accurate acct. of the progress made by each.—

Wood.		Barclay.
Hours.	Miles.	Hours.	Miles.
1.	8.	1.	6.
2.	7.	2.	6.
3.	7.	3.	6.
4.	6½.	4.	6.
5.	6.	5.	6.
6.	5½.	6.	6.

Captn. Barclay stopped, & took some warm fowl after having gone 18 miles, & He stopped again after having gone the other 18 miles, & it was then while He was taking other refreshments that Wood resigned the contest.—The Captn., however, ran four miles to decide some bets, and He did 40 miles in 6 Hours & 20 minutes.*—From small note-book.]

October 13. This morning I began to draw for the first time that I have attempted it since my eyes were affected,—& was able to apply near 2 Hours. —

How to Live Long

October 15. The Revd. Mr. Spurgeon came after dinner. He told me His father, Mr. Spurgeon of Yarmouth [an attorney], is still living and in His 90th. year, but within the last year has nearly intally lost His mental faculties, having no consciousness of any person or thing but for a very short time together. Knows His Son for a few moments & then wanders off to something that happened 30 years ago.—He is confined to His room & cannot walk witht. placing his hand on a table or Chair, His appetite continues. Such is the decay of old age.—His wife is also living in the 83rd. year of Her age.— Mr. Spurgeon's mode of life has been as follows, but not according to any rule laid down by Himself.—

the year round.
His Hour of rising has been ½ past 8.
Breakfast	at	9.
Dinner	at	3.
Ten	at	6.
light supper,	at	9.
To bed,	at	11.

From breakfast till dinner time He has been occupied professionally.

* Robert Barclay Allardice, commonly known as Captain Barclay, the pedestrian. His most extraordinary feat was walking at Newmarket one mile in each of 1,000 successive hours, which performance lasted from June 1 to July 12, 1809. Yet he was so little exhausted that he joined the Walcheren Expedition on July 17 as aide-de-camp to the Marquess of Huntly.

Three days before his death from paralysis on May 8, 1854, he was injured by a kick —From tea till Supper time He always retired to Himself & passed the time in his Study in reading & chiefly History; and if not incommode wd. again have His Book after Supper. Till He was 60 years of age He only drank White Wine as He found that Port Wine prevented digestion. At 60 He was advised to drink Port wine, but He did not long continue to do so. His usual quantity was 2 glasses of White wine, which he filling only Half glasses He made into 4. He was always indifferent as to what food was provided, and did not eat much. His Health continued but His mental faculties are gone within a year or two. His memory had been remarkably good. He was of the Tory interest in Norfolk.—

Mr. Spurgeon occasionally visits Lord Cholmondeley at Houghton. His Lordship neither Hunts, Shoots, or rides. His outdoor amusement is to walk out with His Steward & mark a tree to be cut down, & He also attends to the planting of young trees. He seems to be very fond of the conversation of foreigners. The Duke of Clarence is at Houghton at present & stays till Sunday next. He went with Lord Cholmondeley to Lynn on Tuesday last; and was received at the Mayor's, Mr. Scarlett Everard's, & afterwards, at the Town Hall, was complimented with the Freedom of Lynn.—H. Hammond was told by the Post Master at Roughton that the Duke writes to Mrs. Jordan every day.

Roughed into Manhood

Lord Malpas, son of Lord Cholmondeley,* a boy of 15, seems to be a lad of little promise, & to be bred up in a trifling way, Spurgeon ad. at His Mother's apron string.—He goes to Eaton School, but there has a private Tutor, and is not likely to be roughed into manhood by intercourse with other Boys.

Lord Cholmondeley was desirous to sell Houghton Hall and the estate but Lord Chancellor Eldon set His face against any attempt to annul the entail.—The House is in a dirty state,—no part being properly clean except the Kitchen.

* George Haratio Cholmondeley was born in Paris on January 16, 1792, and was styled Lord Malpas. In 1817-21 he sat as Tory M.P. for Castle Rising under the name of Earl of Rockingham, and on January 6, 1822, he was called to the House of Lords in his father's Barony as Lord Newburgh. He was Joint Great Chamberlain of England, and from 1858 Constable of Castle Rising until his death on May 8, 1870. He succeeded his father in 1827 as second Marquess of Cholmondeley.

The first Lord Tollemache said: "If all Englishmen were like Lord Cholmondeley (i.e., the Lord Malpas referred to above) they would be religious and delightful men, but the French would soon come and take London."

CHAPTER LX

1807

The Duke of Clarence

October 18.---H. Hammond returned from Lynn to breakfast.---The Duke of Clarence recd. the freedom of that town on Tuesday last & took the usual oaths.---He afterwards partook of a Collation at Mr. Scarlet Everard's, the Mayor, where a Chair was placed for Him at the Head of the table, according to Etiquette, but on his sitting down He ad. He would not part man & wife & He desired Mr. & Mrs. Everard to sit near Him.

October 19. Tom Bagge* told me He dined with the gentlemen from Lynn at Lord Cholmondeley's at Houghton on Friday last. Abt. 40 sat down to dinner in the Hall, abt. 6 o'clock. The Duke of Clarence sat at the middle of the table with His back to the Fire and took the lead in everything. He proposed Six bumper toasts & prefaced each by a speech. He said the Whigs had brought His family to the Throne of this Country & He would always give His support to them. He spoke of Sir Robt. Walpole as being instrumental in effecting that object.---He drank, Mr. Bagge supposed, 2 Bottles of wine,---& kept the Company at the table till 9 o'clock, a thing very unusual at Houghton as Lord Cholmondeley generally goes to the Ladies in half an Hour after they retire. He attended to the glasses of several to see that they filled bumpers. He drank Lord Spencer's Health & prefaced it by recapitulating the names of the great Naval Officers employed by Him while first Lord of the Admiralty, viz.: Lord St. Vincent,---Lord Nelson &c.---Lord Spencer sat next to the Duke.---Mr. Coke was there.

* Thomas Philip Bagge (1771-1827), of Stradsett Hall and Islington Hall, Norfolk, J.P., D.L., was married on April 28, 1808, to Grace, youngest daughter of Richard Salisbury, of Castle Park, Lancaster. He was succeeded by his second son, William (the eldest died in 1816), M.P. for West Norfolk, who was created a Baronet on April 13, 1867. Tom Bagge's father lost his second wife on August 15, 1807, and the shock affected him so much that he died four days after her.

The present Baronet is Sir Alfred William Francis Bagge, B.A., LL.B., barrister, and captain of the 4th Battalion Norfolk Regiment. The family dates back to the fifteenth century.

October 24.—In the evening of this day I saw the Comet with its tail, at 9 o'clock very distinctly with the naked eye.

October 30.—At noon I left Massingham & H. Hamond drove me to Wessingham where I waited with him till  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 2 for the Fakenham Coach which had been delayed an hour &  $\frac{1}{2}$  waiting for game from Mr Coke's at Holkham, the consequence was we did not get to Cambridge till  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 2 the next morning. I slept at the Hull Inn.

Jackson the Bruiser

October 31.—At 8 o'clock left Cambridge in the Telegraph Coach & got to Fetter Lane  $\frac{1}{2}$  before 4 o'clock. Jackson the bruiser, was an outside Passenger. He had been to Cambridge to instruct the Marquis of Tavistock & other young men of rank, who take him much into their association. He has a room in the Albany building, Piccadilly where He gives lessons in Pugilism, & is supposed to make 4 or £500 a year.

A Glutton

November 1.—Oliver called to speak abt. the Election of Associates. He has been much employed by the Duke of Norfolk, & much with him at Arundel Castle. When the Duke has only a few friends who are domesticated with him, He does not drink more, rather less than a pint of wine a day: but perhaps once in a week or so, He had a party to dinner & will then drink 2 or 3 bottles. He has an uncommonly great appetite, but makes it a rule never to eat anything between breakfast & dinner. He says no man ought to be called a Glutton but He who eats more than He can digest. He is fond of Discussion over His wine as subjects may arise.

November 2.—Thomson's I dined at, Owen there who has lately been at Sir Willm. Heathcote's in Hampshire, 3 miles from Sir N. Holland's* House. Sir Nathl. is said to possess £24,000 a year, but does not expend more than £5000 a year. He lives very handsomely however, both in His House & equipage; Has a man Cook, & when He gives dinners they are sumptuous. He is extremely fond of a young girl, the daughter of His Butler, and just emerging from Childhood. She sits at His table while Her father waits at it. . . . and is taken by them [Sir Nathaniel & Lady Holland] when they pay visits, which causes some difficulty in others to know how to receive her. He makes sketches & occasionally paints, but complained of His eyes when speaking to Owen. Though He is considered a singular man in His manner, He is on the whole very well liked by the neighbouring gentry.

The Navy

[On Saturday Oct. 31, the Gazette contained Admiral Gambiers acct. of the evacuation of Copenhagen & the Island of Zealand also Lord Cathcart's acct.]

* See Index, Vols. 1. and 11.

Present state of the British Navy—

100 Ships of the line at Sea.

11 from 50 to 44.

14 frigates.

175 Sloops &amp;c.

175 Gun brigs &amp; smaller vessels.

Adding to which those in Commission & under repair, including the guard ships give 146 of the line,--21 from 50 to 44; 186 frigates;--219 Sloops &c; --220 gun brigs &c., making a total of 790 Ships of war.

44. Sail of the line are building.

45 in ordinary - making together 235 sail of the line, independent of the Danish fleet.--[From small note-book.]

CHAPTER LXI

(1802)

LOUIS XVIII. in England

[November 2. Louis took under the title of Comte de Provence, accompanied by the Duke De Berry, and were landed at Yarmouth Monday and next, & latter breakfast with Admiral Douglas for Goeheld Park, Essex. He was attended by Montmorency, the Duc de Choiseul, Duc de Bourbon, Duc d'Angoulême, Duc de Grammont, &c. On their arrival on the 11th at the Cape, Colchester, a great number of people had assembled at the Inn to see the illustrious. The people were of all ranks. The elegant large new room being open for the reception of the Royal Guests, it was permitted their wishes might be fully gratified, & they were admitted room without the least restraint. The Royal Stranger expressed satisfaction at the good wishes evidently expressed in the countenance of those whom curiosity had excited to appear in his presence. small note book.]

Sir Joshua's Sister

November 4. Maria called to inform me of the death of Reynolds, sister to Sir Joshua Reynolds, on Sunday last, aged 64. She came to London to reside with Her Brother in 1784.*

* Frances Reynolds, Sir Joshua's eldest sister, kept house for him when he followed Edgeworth's advice, took rooms in St. Martin's Lane, then a neighbourhood frequented by artists. But she was not a woman who that says so. Features were a highly nervous disposition, little things worried her, and her brother's indecisions were, doubtless, the cause of great trouble between the two. Maria is said to have added to her torments, as often to did her failure as a painter of and copies of Sir Joshua's pictures, which made him say and other people long and the ill-matched pair separated, she going back with a pension, to Devon where she passed most of her time in painting. She married Francis in 1784, and later in Dr. Hoole, translator of Aristotle. Louis L'Amour's Life of Reynolds gives sadly extracts from her own notes and drafts of letters never posted, and in L'Amour (Vol. I., page 462) we read:

"Miss Reynolds, speaking of him [Sir Joshua] after his death, said she saw in him as a man but a gloomy tyrant. On her recollection in all probability there been more particularly noticed in his will the last Her words given a very full mind. Malone joined me in saying that during the time Miss R. lived with him she rendered him uncomfortable by Her capricious temper, which obliged him to fix on another residence."

[His Majesty has recently bestowed a Pension of £2000 a year upon the Comtesse of Albany, widow of Charles Stuart, commonly called the Pretender. She is a Princess [Lionie] of the House of Stolberg & lived at Brussels when she was married.-- From small note-book.]

November 5. Lawrence called, preparing to go to day to Sir Francis Baring's at Stratton in Hants to paint portraits in one picture, of Mr. Baring, & Mrs. Wall, eldest Son & daught. of Sir Francis & a Son of each of them; also of the late Lady Baring from a miniature.--

Lawrence told me that to make His colours dry, He has a little of the Essence of Asphaltum mixed with the following colours when His pallet is set, viz.: Black, yellow Lake, Lake, Brown Pink, and [ ] to which He also adds a little Sacrum Saturnae to avoid using too much of the asphaltum. When thus prepared He uses no other vehicle but Linseed Oil.--He never uses drying oil or Alcagilp which latter He thinks changes & makes colours horny. Lawrence buys [the Essence of Asphaltum] from the Shop where Gainsborough purchased it.--Strahan & Strong Long acre.

[On Tuesday Oct. 27, at a meeting of the Governors of the Hospital at Exeter, the Revd. Jonas Dennis stated to the honor of the County, that the first discovery of vaccination was made abt. 20 years ago, by a Mr. Bragge of Axminster, who ascertained that the Cow Pox was not only a preventative of the Small Pox but also that it might be communicated by means of inoculation. Dr. Jenner* however had the merit & been the means of the happy instrument of extending its practise, but it proved that vaccination was not so novel as some had imagined.-- From small note-book.]

Claude and Dutch Painters

November 6. I had company to dinner. A contest of opinion took place on the powers of Claude Lorrain compared with the Dutch Masters. Dance said the works of Claude had such perfection as was seen in the Greek Sculpture, & that the Dutch Masters in attempting to represent the lines & efforts seen in nature were inferior to Him a thousand degrees. Daniell supported by Smirke contended that Claude cd. not draw, could not make such forms of Clouds, as are seen in the best Dutch masters, & that Claude was limited to one kind of Sky, and could not have done what the Dutch masters executed. He instanced a picture of De Vleiger which He had lately seen.--

[Mr. Watson, a manufacturer at Preston in Lancashire, failed lately for between 1. and £500,000. His own acct. stated deficiencies to upwards of £300,000. Twin Mr. Barton's of Manchester, married His daughters, & by false representations He has taken them in for near £50,000. For this Sum they have in part security, but their loss will be heavy.--Thornton's (Russia House) £50,000. Lord Derby 6 or £7000 advanced to pay Election Bills.--£300,000 in Bills are running

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

& will produce much private distress & public inconvenience.—(F small note-book.)

Lord Winchelsea

November 7. Woodforde called. He was in September last 3 w at Burleigh on the Hill in Rutlandshire, Lord Winchelsea's* seat, w
He began to paint a portrait of His Lordship a whole length. It very large & noble House & was built abt. two years ago. Lord W chelsea does not reside there much as it wd. be too expensive for circumstances, but lives in a high state when He is there. He Bachelor, abt. 56 years of age, is 6 feet 1 inch high, & very agree in His manners. Many people of distinction, gentlemen & Ladies ca
& the Hon. Miss Finch, His Lordship's sister, was there. Dinner usually served at 7 o'clock, & took up abt. 2 hours before the gentle went to Coffee with the Ladies. His Lordship drank His wine cl during dinner, taking a glass with most or all of the gentlemen, & also with the Ladies. After the Ladies retired the gentlemen adjourned to them. His Lordship visits a Lady, Mrs. Thompson, resides at Brompton at a beautiful Villa built by the late Earl of B & designed by Adam, but always returns at night to his House in S
St. He has a Son, 14 years of age, who is called Finch, or Thom & was with Him at Burleigh. Lord Winchelsea is at present Govern the State, 4000 a yr.

* The ninth Earl and fourth Earl of Nottingham. He was unmarried (1722-1811).

CHAPTER LXII

1807

War against Denmark

November 7. [The Gazette contained a Declaration of War against Denmark, in consequence of the King of Denmark having declared War against England.]

The Gazette contained an order for general reprisals against the Ships, goods & inhabitants of the territories & ports of Tuscany, the Kingdom of Naples, the port & territory of Ragusa, and the Islands lately composing the Republic of the Swiss Islands, in consequence of their antient governments having been subverted by France, & new governments under Her influence are aiding in her hostile designs against the property, commerce & navigation of his Majesty's subjects.

Portuguese Proclamation, dated Oct. 20, 1807:—published in the papers to day. Extract: "It being impossible to preserve any longer neutrality during the present war, I have judged it proper to succede to the Cause of the Continent by uniting myself to His Majesty the Emperor of the French & King of Italy, and to his Catholic Majesty, in order to contribute as far as may be in my power, to the acceleration of a maritime peace; wherefore I am pleased to order, that the Ports of this Kingdom shall be immediately shut against the entry of Ships of War and Merchant vessels belonging to Great Britain." by order of the Prince Regent. Lisbon Oct. 22, 1807. From small note-book.]

Bonnettes of Bath

November 10. Mr. West having returned from Bath with Mrs. Vest on Saturday last called on me this afternoon. He sd. Mrs. West suffered from bathing, but was benefitted by drinking the Bath waters, & on the whole was better, & he thought wd. weather the winter.—I was struck with the strong marks of age in his countenance, but He appeared to be well. He spoke of Bath & its vicinity with rapture as bounding with picturesque Scenery.—Take Bath & 20 miles round it He sd. & there is not in the world anything superior to it. Rocks of the finest forma for a painter that He had ever seen,—large, square forms.—Quarry's worked out, now most picturesque & romantic.—Wyck, & Hampton rocks, Cheddar Cliffs, much picturesque, distances the most beautiful, roads with occasional pools & streams of water falling from the Hills & Cattle & figures such as Beighem never saw. Take Tivoli away & Rome & its vicinity of 20 miles not to be compared with Bath & its neighborhood.

Artists at Bath

Artists much encouraged at Bath. The two Hackers* very ingenious, the eldest indeed lives upon the reputation of His Woodman but His portfolio is stored with subjects of Peasantry &c. landscape admirably drawn with Chalk on stained paper, for truth of expression excellent, unrivalled. West told Him if He wd. put them on Canvas they wd. be captivating. Benjamin, the younger Brother, is the better landscape painter.—Shaw, a landscape painter, told West that He had Commissions which wd. occupy Him more than a year and a half. has 40 guineas for a picture abt. Kitcat size takes in orders for pictures & finishes His Commissions in totation. Employed by gentlemen of the West of England to decorate their Houses viz: for Chimney pieces, over doors &c. If time to spare His pictures wd. be taken by a picture dealers at Bristol to sell again.

Exhibition to be opened at Bath the next Spring, upon a plan for a Society which West recommended shd. be formed as much as ed. be on that of the Royal Academy. Drawing masters at Bath make fortunes....

West had the carriage at Bath in which He & Mrs. West & Mrs. Banks went from London, & He used it to all His excursions, hiring 2 or 4 Horses as the distance might require. He employed His mornings in making sketches, & made a design of "the discovery of the good qualities of the Bath waters." Drawings do not sell at Bath, as He was told by the Artists; oil paintings are the works in request * Richard Barker, of Bath, and his younger brother, Benjamin.

† Joshua Shaw was a native of Hellingborough, in Lincolnshire, in 1776. Left an orphan at an early age, he was apprenticed to a portrait & sign painter, and after his time expired he became a painter of landscapes and flower pieces. He was also employed, both in England and America, to make copies of pictures by men such as Beighem and Gainsborough, which were sold as originals. According to the mottoes of his death it unknown He contributed irregularly to the Royal Academy from 1812 until 1814, and lived in Wells Road, Bath, up to 1810.

[Mr. Bail S. Long, The Nook, North Road, Bournemouth, writes: You refer in a footnote to Farlington's Diary to Joshua Shaw, the artist. The following facts, communicated a few years ago by the late Mr. Charles Henry Hall, of Philadelphia, are not generally known in this country. Shaw went to America in 1812 on the same ship that carried West's picture of "Christ Healing the Sick." He first exhibited at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in 1819. He taught drawing for many years and published "A New and Original Drawing Book," old long sale, at Philadelphia in 1819. He subsequently became an inventor, and his improvements in fire-arms were adopted by the United States and by Russia. He died at Burlington, New Jersey, 28th September, 1860. In his eighty-third year.]

November 15. W. Wells called on me, & shewed me a letter from Wilkie, who is so full of commissions that it may be long before he can paint a picture for Wells, but will put Him down in His list, & approves His subject viz: "A Blacksmith listening to a Taylor's news," vide Shakespeares Play, King John. Wells sd. that in some of the pictures by Claude Lorrain & in some by Wilson, there has appeared to him something of an artificial light upon parts of them, a sort of Candle light, an artificial warmth.

I dined with Baker, & walked there with Edridge who noticed the free manner in which Hoppner speaks of Artists & their works. - He had always lived well with Hoppner, but lately when Edridge's works were spoken of favorably, Hoppner said, "Aye, very well, but we do not call that Art." Edridge sd. He had always given to Hoppner the Palm, as being the painter who comes nearest to His great Prototype Sir Joshua Reynolds, but He added that there were others who certainly had more originality.

CHAPTER LXIII

1807

Hanbury of Kelmorah

November 15. Duppa told me that Mr. Hanbury of Northamptonshire is now at His seat at Shobdon Court in Herefordshire, & in a state. Mr. Stone, a medical man who attends Him daily from Leominster told Duppa that he was a week ago supported only by raw meat & Him in the shape of jellies. Mr. Stone attended Him every night. The estate attached to Shobdon Court is estimated at £8000 a year. Bateman left it to Mr. Hanbury who was related to Him by a female line in preference to a male relationship.*

Gerard spoke of the death of the Revd. Mr. Beath. He was advanced years of age, & died of a Palsy, which was attributed to the effect of the coming into possession of His Father's large property had upon his mind. While His Father lived He had been kept in very limited circumstances. His Father left £10,000 as appeared by His accounts & very considerable estates near Ludlow, & it has lately been found He had a considerable Sum in long annuities.

Constable and Mulready Students

November 16. Constable called. He attends the Life Acad every evening, and has for 3 months past been employed by Lord Dyson in copying pictures & painting original portraits. The Dowager Lady Dyson spoke to Him of the fine Head Lawrence is painting of Mr. Rigaud is the present Visitor at the Life Academy & is one of the best Visitors that the Academy affords & sets very good figures. Tresham who was the last Visitor, said that He never saw so many good drawi

* For William Hanbury and Lord Bateman see Vol. II, page 166, and Index, Vol. III.

[ Benjamin Beath, a director of the East India Company, was a friend of Sir Joshua Reynolds, who painted an excellent portrait of him. He was also a patron of Richard Wilson, the great landscape painter, and formed the splendid collection of his pictures and drawings which was exhibited by Captain R. Ford, his great-great-grandson, at Brighton Art Gallery in 1910. See Vol. I, page 174, of the Diary, and entry on January 3, 1808.

in the Academy at one time before. Mulready* a young man Twenty one or two years of age is reckoned to draw the best, but sets Himself high upon it as if He had done His business. He was a pupil of Varley† & married His Sister. Hilton,‡ another student draws very well.—He is abt. 25 or 6 years old.---

Hoppner Snubs a Lady

Constable gave a trait of Hoppner, which He had from a Frame Maker. This man happened to be in Hoppner's showroom when a Lady of Fashion came in, & looking at the pictures desired to speak with Hoppner. The Servant sd. He was then engaged, but she bid Him tell Her name, & accordingly Hoppner came to Her, and she began to make remarks upon the Copies she saw of Mr. Pitts portrait, observing that the nose was too long. Hoppner impatient at the interruption He had suffered asked Her whether she desired to have a Copy, she replied undetermined, but said she possibly might. "Well then, sd. Hoppner, when you order a copy you shall have either a long nose or a short one as you may choose" & left Her. Constable observed that Hoppner abuses the people of Fashion, & they Him, but they go to Him.—Constable sd. He had now the comfort of feeling Himself completely settled in His profession, and to know that His Father, finding that He is getting on and employed is reconciled to it.---

We talked of the late election of Associates. He sd. He thought the Academy had done very well in electing respectable men, whose manners wd. not disgrace the Academy. He sd. Drummond§ is the King of a Pot House, and has such low habits & notions, that He seemed unfit to be associated with men of rank at the Academy dinner.---

Lord Egremont

Phillips|| called upon me to speak abt. the ensuing election of two Academicians. I told Him that it was a subject not yet taken up, but that as far as my opinion cd. go it was that He might feel comfortable in the fair prospect of success as it appeared to me. I sd. that His moral character had never been objected to, & He knew how He stood as to His professional abilities. He was well satisfied with what I said.---

He told me He was going for a month to Petworth, Lord Egremont's¶. He said Company from 10 to 20 or 30 sat down to dinner there every day, His Lordship living magnificently. Dinner at 6 o'clock, but He added, that He was always glad to return to town to His own private * William Mulready, afterwards R.A.

† John Varley. See Index, Vol. II.

‡ William Hilton, afterwards R.A.

§ Samuel Drummond was elected A.R.A. in 1808. See Vol. II., page 248.

|| Thomas Phillips, A.R.A., afterwards R.A.

¶ See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

repast, being soon tired of living in so much company. Lord Egremont does not what is called quiz: any of his guests, but He is fond of seeing others carry on that sort of Humour. Humphry was sadly quizzed in consequence of His boasting of His ancestry. He was laughed at, & told He was descended from a Jew Pedlar. Philip, J. Lord Egremont has behaved very kindly to Humphry, having taken a portrait from Him said to be painted by Raphael for which He has settled upon Him an annuity of £100.* His Landship having withdrawn from Humphry that His circumstances were very limited.

Lady Louisa Manners

Lord Dysart is aht. 68 years of age. He is a very shy man, & comes into a room sideways or almost backwards. He is a very good man & kind to all who are dependent upon Him. He has more than £40,000 a year, and being a widower with 4 children will leave £40,000 a year to Sir Wm. Manners, Son of the late Jack Manners, the Countess, who has already £30,000 a year. He being Lord Dysart's nephew, Lady Louisa Manners† the Mother of Sir Wm. is His Landship's Sister. The title will be extinct. The present Lord Dysart & His Brother, the late Lord, married two Sisters of a Mr. Lewis of Warwickshire. Lord Dysart amuses Himself with painting & applies more or less most days. He was much acquainted with Sir Joshua Reynolds.

French Ports Blockaded

[A Proclamation was issued by the King in Council, directing a strict Blockade of all the French Sea Ports, and of all Sea Ports belonging to Countries under the Dominion & influence of France, and that all trade in the produce of such countries & Colonies, shall be deemed unlawful,

* In his "Life of Ozias Humphry, R.A.," Dr. L. L. Wollaston says: "Humphry persuaded the Earl of Egremont to buy a copy of a portrait of Francesco Maria della Rovere which he had made in Italy. He asked two guineas for it. Lord Egremont said it was 'overvalued,' and eventually in Midsummer, 1804, he agreed to give Humphry for it £100 a year for his life. The artist therefore received £400 for the painting, as he died four and a half years after the arrangement had been made." See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

† The Earl of Dysart died in 1821 and was succeeded by his sister, Lady Louisa Manners, nee Countess of Dysart. She, however, with her sons John and Charles, and her daughter Laura, took only the surname and arms of Tollenbach. Hoppner painted Lady Louisa's portrait, and in 1901, at Robinson and Fisher's, it was sold for 14,000 guineas, at that time the highest price ever paid for a portrait in England.

In March, 1807, Lady Louisa's own copy of C. Turner's mezzotint after Hoppner's early masterpiece was exhibited at the Leicester Galleries, London. On the margin of the print was attached an envelope addressed to "Lady Louisa Manners, Pall Mall," as well as a verse written to her by Tom Moore, which runs:

"Thou art still so lovely to me,
I would sooner, than beautiful mother,
Repose in the sunset of thine
Than hark in the noon of another."

THE RT. HON. LADY LOUISA MANNERS
From a Print in the British Museum

[To face p. 216]

and every vessel trading to the said countries laden with such produce or manufactures shall be lawful prize.—Neutrals, however, will still be allowed to furnish themselves with enemy's Colonial produce, for their own consumption; and for this purpose such trade may be carried on directly with the ports of his majesty's dominions, or his allies under certain restrictions.—America, for instance, may import the produce of the West India Islands, direct into an American port, for her own use, but she cannot export it again to a French port, & thus the order entirely cuts off the neutral carrying trade between the enemy's colonies & the Mother country.—The Second order permits universally the importation into Great Britain of the growth & manufacture of countries at war with his Majesty, in the vessels of any country in friendship or alliance with England, upon the same terms as they may have been hitherto imported into Great Britain, in British Vessels; and with regard to such articles, as are prohibited by law, they are to be reported for exportation to any country in alliance or amity with His Majesty.

Warning to Neutrals

The articles so imported into any port of the United Kingdom or of Malta & Gibraltar, except Sugar, Coffee, wine, brandy, Snuff and tobacco may be exported to any country whatever; and with respect to these articles, they also may be exported under certain conditions; By the operation of this regulation, no neutral power can supply France with any article whatever, nor the growth & manufacture of such neutral Country, unless through the medium of some Port belonging to Great Britain,—so that France cannot obtain a single ounce of sugar, coffee &c. which are the peculiar growth of the French West India Colonies unless indirectly through a British Port & upon such terms as His Majesty may think fit.—The third order recites that a great part of the Shipping of France, & Her Allies has been protected from capture by transfers, or pretended transfers, to neutrals, & directs that in future the sale to a neutral of any vessel belonging to His Majesty's enemies shall not be deemed to be legal, & all such vessels shall be captured, & adjudged lawful prize to the Captors.—From small note-book.]

CHAPTER LXIV

1867

Calumnies

November 18. Devia* called being very desirous to bring Mr. Graham, the Magistrate, to me to refute the calumnies uttered against His character. He spoke much of what Beechey† had sd. of the prejudice against Him among the Academicians. He sd. Beechey asked Him, "Whether He was married to the person who passed for His wife, & who died sometime ago?" He replied that He was married to Her, that she was a French woman, and that He was married to Her by a Roman Catholic Priest according to their rite. That He had afterwards asked a Doctor of Civil Law & others whether the marriage was valid, & was assured by them that it was so. He sd. she died in France. —He added that He thought it very odd that Beechey shd. put such a question; He who had lived with the present Lady Beechey whilst His first wife was living & introduced Her into company at that time as His wife. I repeated what I had before sd. to Him that His conduct had been reported to be irregular, which had operated against His being elected an Associate of the Royal Academy, I declined receiving Mr. Graham, telling Him that my conversation with Him rendered that unnecessary.

Catalani's Salary

[Madame Catalani's engagement for the coming season, at the King's Theatre, says the Morning Herald, was finally settled on Saturday last. She is to have 7500 guineas, & two clear benefits, and is to suffer no deduction of salary in consequence of any indisposition. Madame Catalani, the celebrated Singer published a letter in the Morning Herald [on November 28] stating that she had cancelled an engagement with Mr. Taylor of the Opera House. She was to have had 5000 guineas for the season, but on condition that she shd. perform alternately in the first serious & first comic characters, thus binding Herself to exert Herself "twice the number of nights that she did the * Arthur William Devia. See Vol. III., pages 128 and 1380.

† Sir William Beechey, R.A. See Vols. I, II. and III.

last Season." Her only motive for wishing to renounce the engagement was the great fatigue it would have imposed upon her.—

A Curious Case

On Monday last, Novr. 16, Sir Wm. Scott gave judgment at Doctor's Commons in the Case of Wakefield versus Mackay, alias Wakefield. It appeared that Mr. Wakefield, a Student of one of the Inns, had married Mrs. Wakefield by banns, published under the name of Isabella Jackson, and that she was the illegitimate daughter of John & Ann Mackay; that in the year 1800, she went by the name of Lascelles, and afterwards by the name of Shaupe. It further appeared that the Lady in question had been baptised by the name of Isabella Jackson, which ceremony was performed by a Catholic Priest, her parents being Roman Catholics. It was contended by Mr. Wakefield's Council that the marriage was null & void inasmuch as the banns were published in a wrong name;* and further it was contended that Mrs. Wakefield having proved to be an illegitimate child, was not entitled to any name, except that she acquired by reputation. On the part of Mrs. Wakefield, it was contended, that she was, from the evidence produced in the cause, clearly entitled to the name of Jackson, and that the banns were properly published. The Court, after minutely stating the evidence on both sides and making several judicious observations concluded by confirming the validity of the marriage. [From small note-book.]

White Wine and Red

November 19. J. Tilley told me He had been this day to consult Dr. Reynolds who recommended to Him to Go to a surgeon, Mr. Ford of Golden Square, who ascertained the cause of disagreeable symptoms. Dr. Reynolds lately told Him, that He, the Doctor, had for sometime been troubled with Cramps in His legs, and could not exert for the cause, but finding that for some days He had been free from this complaint, He reflected that He had during that period drank only White Wine, owing to the Key of His Cellar having been mislaid. To be certain of this being the cause of the relief He had felt, He again drank Port Wine & the Cramp returned. He again desisted & those pains left Him. He repeated this experiment again with the same effect & then remained convinced that there is a quality in Port Wine which so operated upon His constitution.

* This case was, of course, before the statute of George IV. making null and void a marriage in names known by both parties to be false. A case of this kind came before Sir Henry Duke, President of the Divorce Court, on the 18th January, 1823.

The parties concerned were married at St. Alban's Church, Great Mord, Essex. Their names were given as John Harry Small and Mary Taylor, whereas his real name was John Henry Smallwood, and the Judge pronounced for the dissolution of the marriage on the ground that the ceremony was rendered void by the banns having been put up in the petitioner's false names.

† Henry Revell Reynolds, eminent doctor. See Vols. II. and III.

‡ See footnote, Vol. I., page 174.

November 20.—At 12 I called on Wm. Wells at the East India Dock Office, Lime St. Square, & went with Him to Mr. Brickwood's* Lime St. Square & saw two large Landscapes by Wilson† which were painted by Him for Sir Patrick Blake, whose son has sold them to Mr. Brickwood for £400.—Sir Patrick paid Wilson 160 guineas for them.—They were painted in 1765 & in His best manner.—I told Mr. Brickwood they would make His House famous. These pictures I saw [at an earlier date] with Henry Bunbury at Mr. Manning's in the City.—After we left Mr. Brickwood's, W. Wells told me He would give me one of His pictures by Brooking.‡

A Successor to Burke

November 21.—[Dr.] Hayes called. Mr. John Adolphus§ of Warren St. was yesterday admitted a Barrister of the Inner Temple. He was immediately employed, read. His first fee 5 guineas from Cooper the Attorney,—& got 40 guineas in the first week. He is 41 years old, is married, & has two children, one of them & Son aged 12 has made an extraordinary proficiency in learning languages, reads French & Latin & Greek & is learning Hebrew. Mr. Adolphus is the writer of the political article in the Annual Register which was formerly written by Mr. Burke & afterwards by Dr. Lawrence|| Adolphus says what Dr. Lawrence wrote upon the French Revolution was very ably done.—Adolphus also wrote Memoirs of the French Revolutionists, in 2 vols.—He is of German extraction but was born in London. He has Chambers in Pump court, Temple, & much is expected from his talents, & eloquence. He has fixed to go to the Home Circuit, & to practise at the Old Bailey.—He is a strong Government Man, opposing the conduct of the Whigs as they call themselves.

A Cambridge Librarian

November 23.—I was at Home all day,—the weather dull & wet.—Lysons¶ dined with me.—He returned from Cambridge today where * Wine merchant.

† Richard Wilson, R.A. See Index, Vols. I, II. and III.

‡ Charles Brooking. See Vol. III., page 106.

§ According to the D.N.B., John Adolphus was born in 1768, of German parentage, his grandfather having been domestic physician to Frederick the Great, and author of a romance, "Histoire des Diabes Modernes," wrongly ascribed in Watts's "Bibliotheca" to John Leicester Adolphus, his son, who was a barrister and author of "Letters to Richard Heber, Esq.," in which he sought to prove that Scott was the author of "Waverley." In 1793 John Adolphus married Miss Leicester, a lady "of good family and little fortune." He wrote several Histories, including "Bibliographical Memoirs of the French Revolution" (1799) and the "Political State of the British Empire" (1824). His first notable success on the home circuit was his defence in 1820 of the Cato Street conspirators. Adolphus died on July 16, 1845.

|| Dr. French Lawrence, writer for the "Rolliad." See Index, Vols. I. and III.

¶ Samuel Lysons, librarian. See Vols. I., II. and III.

London, 1911. The Thames, from the river, looking north, Richard Wilson

He collected what remained to be acquired respecting that County for the Magna Britannia. He was with Kerrick* who is Librarian at Cambridge & resides entirely there & is a great admirer of the Works of Rubens. Tynous speaking to Him of introducing Mr. Pitts name into the Magna Britannia asked what epithet shd. be given Him? Kerrick replied in the negative, adding "Would you place an epithet before the name of Rubens?"

* Thomas Kerrick (1748-1818) was an accomplished painter, draughtsman and etcher. The Academy of Painting at Antwerp awarded him with a silver medal for the best drawing. To the British Museum he left a valuable collection of manuscripts and drawings of ancient costumes, and his son bequeathed seven pictures, a number of books and many portfolios of early prints.

CHAPTER LXV

1807

A Total Abstinence

November 23. Sir Joseph Banks was at the Royal Society on Thursday last. He continues to abstain wholly from Fish or meat, & has done so for 4 years, and also from wine & spirits. He finds himself much better for it. He eats only vegetable diet, including puddings, and drinks milk or water only. Whether He is in or out of town there is every morning throughout the year a breakfast party in His Library for His friends at 10 o'clock. Sir Joseph Lady & Banks are of the party when in town.

A Gloomy Room

The Prince of Wales on his late visit to Lord Berkeley* at B. Castle made those who received Him glad when it was over. Prior to His coming one of His pages arrived to prepare everything for Him. On being shewn the room in which the Prince was to sleep He exclaimed "This the room, a gloomy room like this, it will not do." The Servant of Lord Berkeley observed, that Berkeley is an ancient modern building & the room they were in had been considered the best in it. The Page however demanded to see another and was introduced into an adjoining apartment, which had been intended for Lady Berkeley. "This will do, He shall be the room for the Prince & I will sleep elsewhere," which accordingly was settled.

One day the Prince having dined there at six o'clock Lady Berkeley did not ask Him to fix an Hour the following day but ordered the Prince to be ready at Six, & at that Hour the Prince was informed that the dinner was ready. He sent word that He could not then dine, and the Prince was taken off the table, & they waited till eight o'clock before He appeared.—He was there on a Sunday & Lady Berkeley asked Him whether He proposed to go to Church? To which he answered "That if she desired it, or it wd. oblige Her He would go."—

* Frederick Augustus, fifth Earl of Berkeley. See Vol. I., page 274 and notes.

He made no reply & He did not go. --At Bristol, at Gloucester, & wherever He went the people were dissatisfied with His behaviour.--

[Died on Saturday morning last, the 21st. inst. Abraham Newland Esqr. late Chief Cashier at the Bank of England, aged 77. He was elected a Clerk in the Bank in the year 1747, appointed Chief Cashier on the 8th of Jan'y. 1778. On resigning that situation a short time since He refused an annuity of £500.--A piece of plate of the value of £4000 was voted Him. He declined gradually & died with pain, leaving £7000 a year to distant relatives.]

Novombor 24. Dr. Jenner has lately had a remittance of £1000 from India a gift for His invaluable discovery.--[From small notebook.]

Novombor 25. --Lysons I dined with.--He had seen Davis* who was much pleased with what He communicated respecting my supplying drawings for the Magna Britannia.--Ralph Price came to tea.--He told us that money was abundant in the City,--& no despondency in consequence of our Proclamation of Blockade of French &c. Ports.--He only feared that Ministers wd. give way & not adhere to their resolution.--English goods cannot be kept out of France.--He is now shipping 70 tons of oil for France, which are to be sent in Casks made in imitation of French Casks. Should America be induced to go to War with us, a Civil war wd. take place in that country.--In short we are upon high ground, though the times are critical, but all we require is to maintain our resolution.

He Wore Pink Ribbons

Lysons told me that a dispute subsists between Lord Chartley Son of the Marquiss Townsend (Earl of Leicester) & His Father.--Lord Chartley insists upon being called Earl of Leicester as being now the second title of the Family, which His Father objects to as being a title granted to Himself. It was referred by Lord Chartley to [ ] of the Herald's College who decided that Lord Chartley had a right to the title of Leicester, but Sir Isaac Heard, Garter King at arms, & Townsend the Herald, have since decided against the claim of Lord Chartley; which has caused a reference to the Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal, who has given it in favor of Lord Chartley's claim, saying that a similar instance happened in His own family where the claim was allowed. While this question is depending both Lord Chartley & His Father refuse to sign an instrument of importance to both.--Lord Chartley is a very effeminate young man,--sometime He wore pink ribbons to His Shoes, & having married a young Lady only a few months ago, He is said to be upon the point of separation from Her.--In Italy, while on His travels, some circumstances were observed in Him that gave an unfavourable opinion of Him.--

November 27.—[.]. Byrne called to settle with me for my sl money recd. from Mr. Croastwaite of Keswick for prints of vi the Lakes. He told me His Father provided drawings for pr be made of views in Cumbrica to accompany Lysons's work, ch to the work only 3 guineas for each drawing, by which He was a loser. He paid Alexander 8 guineas each for 7 drawings, & to M architectural draughtsman, 25 guineas for a drawing of King's Chapel, Cambridge. For engraving the plates He had 25 guine each plate.

Ward Is Grateful

November 28. Ward came to tea; and spoke to me abt, i to dinner those Academicians who had supported His election, and me a list of the Members of the Academy, & marked the names o who I thought might, if He shd. make two dinners, be invited a make each party agreeable to each other. He told me the St who attended the British Institution last Season gave a din Monday last at the Thatched House Tavern, to Valentine Gree Keeper, and Mr. West was invited, & was the only Member of the A present. The Tickets one guinea each, and abt. 50 attended. We upon the impropriety of the students giving such an enterta & of Mr. West attending it.

Valentine Green has now a Salary of £150 a year from the Institution [as its Keeper], but complains of want of remun for His trouble. A few weeks ago He signified to Ward that Direction of the British Institution will have nothing to do w payment of any pictures sold there, whatever money He rece pays to the Artist is an act of His own for which He is wholly resp For this He signified that He ought to be remunerated by the by a percentage upon pictures sold. He observed that were I to receive the Deposit money for the Artists and half the pictur have been sold that have been disposed of. Were gentlemen referred to the Artist, the trouble of going to Him & other circum wd. cause many to give up their intention. Ward expressed v ness to remunerate Mr. Green but not by a percentage or in a that shd. be made a standing rule, but wd. join with others in subsc a Sum to make up a purse for Mr. Green.

Denmark and Britain

[Denmark has issued an uncommonly vigorous Proclamati nouncing Death against any of Her subjects who carry on an inte with Great Britain, together with the confiscation of the goods may be the object of such intercourse, if they can be found; and the full value of them is to be advanced from the effects of the cri —From small note-book.]

CHAPTER LXVI

1807

Dissipated Young Men.

November 29.—Wm. [Offley, wine merchant] spoke of the prevailing dissipation among young men,—& mentioned that Mr. Best who shot Lord Camelford* is now in the Kings bench.—Mr. Ford,† the surgeon, who lives in Golden Square, shewed Him a House opposite in which Madame Parissot the Opera Dancer lives with a gentleman she was lately married to.—She had loose connexions before that period.—She has saved abt. £12,000 obtained by Her stage exhibitions.—

J. Offley expressed great satisfaction on having read Paley's treatise on natural Theology,—and on His proofs of the truth [of] Christianity which He thought conclusive.—Cobbet having written strongly against the predominating influence of Commerce J. Offley agreed with Him in thinking it had obtained too much sway in this Country, as is manifested by the great number of commercial men who have at present seats in the House of Commons.—

The Grosvenor Family

November 30.—Lysons sd. He had been informed by a gentleman from Chester that Lord Grosvenor, who is at present Mayor of Chester, at an entertainment which He gave in that City, made a very intemperate speech, expressing His intention to support two members for that City & how little He regarded the expence which He might incur.—

The Grosvenor family is very ancient. A Cause in Chancery was carried on by a Sir — Grosvenor against a Sir — Scroope in the time of Richd. 2nd. each maintaining a claim to certain Arms which was decided in favor of Scroope. The writings on both sides are in the Tower Record Office, & wd. cost £100. to have them copied, consisting of 40 Sheets of parchment on the side of Scroope & upwards of 30 on that of Grosvenor.

* See Vol. II., page 199 and note.

† See Vol. I., page 174<sup>n</sup>

[It was shown that Grosvenor had borne certain arms from the quest.*

Constable's Uncle

December 1. Constable called & brought a Card from Mr. Pike Watts requesting me to dine with Him on Saturday the 12th at No. 33 Portland Place. Constable sd. His Uncle, Mr. Watts possesses the great fortune of the Late Ben Kenton, & Wine merchant mentioned to him that Mr. Kenton who sprung from a low origin observed that He could not extend His intercourse in proportion to fortune He had made, being unprepared by education to join w * Richard le Scrope (1127-1141) was first Baron Scrope of Bolton, Chancery England. While Scrope was active in the Scottish expedition of 1185, he challenged Sir Robert Grosvenor to bear the arms, azure, bend or, which were his own. At an earlier date (1141) Scrope was also successful in maintaining his the crest of a crab issuing from a coronet, the crab device passing to the Manners of the family when Scrope's son, the Earl of Wiltshire, adopted a plume of feathers as a crest.

Constance Lady Russell, writing from Swallowfield, says: "In the interim which lasted five years between Richard Lord Scrope and Sir Robert Grosvenor touching the bearing of azure bend or, the existence of the poet Chaucer is interesting upon the antiquity of the rival claim." The following is his deposition:

" Geoffrey Chaucer, Esquire, of the age of forty or upwards, arrived for twenty years, produced on behalf of Sir Richard Scrope, asked how long a time the said Richard had used the same arms, and he had heard say that it passed the old man. Asked whether he had ever heard of any interruption or challenge made by Robert Grosvenor or his ancestors, he said No, but that he was once in Finsbury Street saw hanging a new sign made of the said arms, and he asked what Inn that was that used the arms of Scrope, and one answered, ' Sir, sir, they are not hung out by the Scrope, but they are painted and put there for a knight of the county of Cheshire men call Sir Robert Grosvenor,' and that was the first time he ever heard speak of Sir Grosvenor or of his ancestors or of any bearing the name of Grosvenor."

Mr. Arthur Oldham also writes on the same subject: "Farington's reference Grosvenor-Scrope race and your interesting elucidatory note thereto are both supplementing. No less famous a personage than Geoffrey Chaucer was a witness on behalf of Scrope, and testified that he had seen the "arms azure, with a bend borne by two members of the family, Sir Richard and Sir Henry, in France."

Mr. Oldham then repeats in almost similar terms the story told by Lady Russell.

1 Ben Kenton, one of the richest men in the London of his day, was brought charity school. His mother was a piecengraver in a small way in Whitechapel, served an apprenticeship to the landlord of the "Angel," in Goulston Street chapel, afterwards going as barman and waiter to the " Crown and Mistletoe," Street, Abingdon. Ben's shrewdness, unfeeling humour, and country-made him vulgar, and when the landlord died the regular customers enabled him to become barman of the tavern, thus laying the foundation of his vast fortune. In 1764 he gave up the house and started business in the Moortree as a wine merchant, in addition to the export of ale and stout. He and his Kenton joined Alderman Harbottle, the eminent in successful speculations, and when the erstwhile barman died, on May 24, 1780, he left legacies to twenty-four London charities and about £20,000 to Constable's mother Pike Watts, who had been his clerk and daughter's lover. Ben, however, did not die in the match, the girl died of a decline, and her father, apparently feeling that he was measure responsible for her death, softened towards Watts, and made him his fortune referred to above.

higher ranks and more liberal part of Society.—Mr. Watts added that His own education though not the best, was better than that of Mr. Kenton, & He felt a desire to associate with men of talents.—He therefore sent this invitation to me & proposed also to invite Messrs. West, Northcote, —Daniell, Stothard, —Dr. Crotch, the musician, & Carlisle the Surgeon.

Constable told me He was at the dinner given on Monday Novr. 23rd. at the Thatched House Tavern, by the Students of the British Institution;—that Pocock was in the Chair & [Conversation] Sharpe vice President.—He sd. Douglas Guest disgusted the company by long speeches in which He exhibited His vanity, & was well answered on one occasion by Sharpe, & at last was laughed, & cried down when making another speech.—This mortified him greatly, & it appeared that on reflection He perceived that He had exposed Himself, & on the following even'g at the Academy, He endeavoured to shew to Constable that He was drunk meaning it to be an apology, but Constable told Him He appeared to be sober at  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 12 o'clock. He then sd. He had drunk before dinner.—These are feeble traits of a character likely to be troublesome in the profession.\*

West Weeps

West was the only Member of the Academy present, & was flattered by [Valentine] Green in a speech, on which West commented & sd. it had brought tears into His eyes; He went on & assumed to Himself the credit of having occasioned the establishment of the British Institution; said that while He was in France He saw such advances in art made there that unless something should be done in this country we shd. be behind them, and this had caused Him to propose this institution.—I told Constable that I might with as good a right claim the merit of being the author of it, for I was present, with Mr. West when Mr. Bernard the real author of it, read His Proposal for forming it.—To such lengths does West's self-love carry Him, to expose Himself to be confuted by many.

Constable remarked on the impropriety of Mr. Bernard having said to Daw,† a young artist who obtained the gold medal of the Royal Academy for the best Historical picture, & has been employed by Thomas Hope‡ to draw designs for furniture, "That as Douglas Guest intended * Douglas Guest, then a Royal Academy student.

† George Daw. He was born in London in 1781, entered R.A. schools in 1794, and nine years later won the medal referred to. Made an Associate in 1809, he became a full Academician in 1814. Daw twice won the 200 guinea premium at the British Institution. He spent nine years (1819-1828) in Russia, painting portraits of eminent officers. Similar commissions came to him, and he amassed a great fortune, which, however, was largely lost owing to unwise speculations. Daw, who wrote a "Life" of his friend to paint for the first prize of the British Institution it wd. be in v any other to hope to obtain it."

R.A. Affairs

At noon I went to the Royal Academy General Meeting to the Premiums to be given this year. [See December 10th.] I was much interested abt. His Son's picture painted for the Gold - & desired me to consider it. After much communication with members I found the prevailing disposition in favor of Lascelles' picture. Dance, Westall & Bourgeois were for it, & received that Shree, Tresham, Breechey, Turner &c. were of a opinion. West said there was more mind in Hoppner's picture than Hilton's, but the latter's was more of a picture as a piece of painting. I asked to which Nicola Poussin wd. in his opinion, have given preference? He said He thought to Hoppner's as it had more which He excelled in. Northcote, on the contrary, objected to on acct. of it having something Poussinish in it, adding that He that sort of painting, so formal, so insipid, so cold &c. - Westall &c. were present and laughed at so singular an opinion.

* See entry under December 10.

CHAPTER LXVII

1807

Sir Francis Baring's House

December 2.—I was informed from good authority, that on so great a scale has been Sir Francis Baring's* house that for two years the House had to make weekly payments of £80,000,—amounting annually to Four millions, one hundred & Sixty thousand pounds.

Russia and England

[Mr. Canning, Secretary for foreign affairs, wrote to the Lord Mayor this day as follows, viz :—

Stanhope St., Decr. 2.
Eleven o'clock.

“ My Lord,

I have the honor to acquaint your Lordship that dispatches have been recd. from His Majesty's Ambassador at the Court of Petersburg, by which it appears that the Emperor of Russia, having published a Declaration, in which His Imperial Majesty announces his determination to break off all communication with England, to recall His Minister from this Court, and not to permit the continuance of a British Mission at the Court of St. Petersburg: His Majesty's Ambassador has demanded His Passports, & is now on his return.

I have lost all time in communicating this intelligence to your Lordship, in order that it may be made as public as possible.

I have &c.

G. Canning.—”

Government has determined to prevent the further entrance of all Foreigners into the Port of the United Kingdom. Orders to this effect have been issued to the Commanding Officers at all the Ports. No person of any description under any pretext, except He can produce an authenticated Passport, is in future to be allowed to land in England.—
[From small note-book.]

* See Vols. II. and III.

Art Council

December 4. Sir George Beaumont's I dined at. Sir George shewed us the first No. of Forster's publication of Prints* from celebrated pictures, & thought it the best work of the kind that had been published but sd. He shd. tell Forster that unless the succeeding numbers were equally well engraved He should withdraw His subscription.

Sir George talked abt. Wilkie having an Exhibition of His own pictures the next Spring, to which Wilkie seemed to listen with approbation.

I gave my opinion that He shd. either do it at the time mentioned or it wd. be much less certain that it wd. succeed, which I felt assured wd. do if not delayed. Sir George had been to day at Mr. Angerstein & expressed the warmest admiration of the Rembrandt "The Woman taken in Adultery," as being the finest of all Rembrandt's productions. Conway's objection to it as not being by Rembrandt was decided, & ridiculous assertions & fancies laughed at. Sir George spoke in the highest manner of the excellent Landscape sketches made by West while at Bath, saying they were of as high a character as the designs of Nicolo Poussin, "the true Heroic Landscape." Also of His very able design "King Bladud discovering the virtues of the Bath waters," the touching upon West's extravagant act, of His reception at Bath, His vanity, & ungrammatical expression, He quoted the line from Pope ending with, "A man in very high, or very low."

Bonaparte

We dined before 6 & did not go to tea till past 9. We talked Politics & agreed that the Country must either be what it now is nothing.—Bonaparte has no half measures in His mind with us. Sir George only feared a Peace. Mr. Phipps spoke of Lord Hawkesbury† as being a very able man. I told them that in Norfolk [he] was considered a sort of half madman. Sir George said, Long [afterwards Lord Farborough] had when Windham quitted Pitt wished, in his mind, the opposition joy over him. He sd. such of the nature of Windham's mind that while acting with Mr. Pitt & w. He had proposed or supported a measure upon grounds which were admitted to be just & agreed to He would then begin to oppose His reasoning & endeavour to shew that what He had before maintained was not fully established.—Thus wavering & indecisive there was an end to His doubts.—

Newspapers and the Public

December 5.—Lysons I dined with.—Smirke & myself met D. partner of Cadell, to speak of publications. Smirke's the intended pu-* British Gallery of Engravings (1807-1811), by the Rev. Edward Forster, F.R.S.A. He was born in 1769 and died in Paris in 1828. See Vol. III., page 54.

† See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

cation of Don Quixotte; & upon the subject of views to accompany Lysons's Britannia. It was settled that Davis should call upon me in Charlotte St. to go further into the business. He was not satisfied with what J. Byrne has lately done, & noticed this being disposed to think his plates finished before they properly were so. He complained of the indisposition of the public to purchase literary works such as 30 years ago wd. have had a great sale - & instanced Roscoe's* last work, & a work published since by Dr. Gillies.†

He said nothing wd. insure a great sale but a name of the first reputation; respectable names wd. not have the effect.--He said that even Political Pamphlets do not sell now as formerly; the newspapers satisfy the people in this respect. In other respects light superficial works are must read. Booksellers who formerly, wd. have taken 30 copies of a work published with a respectable name, now take 5 or 6 copies.--He expressed much dissatisfaction at several of Smith's‡ views in Cornwall; particularly that of a mine, which appeared like a Sand-pit, whereas He sd. a mine with the machinery, might be made a very grand subject.--

American Censure

December 7. [This day appeared in the papers the message of Mr. Jefferson, President of the United States, to Congress delivered the 27th. of Oct. It evinces more partiality to France than any document which the American government has for a long time published. While Mr. Jefferson declaims with great warmth against what He calls the depredations of this country on American commerce, the numerous aggressions of France are passed over without observation. Our Order of Council of the 7th. of Jan'y. is strongly reprobated, but no censure is passed on the famous decree of Buonaparte which rendered the restrictions, prohibiting the trade from port to port of the enemy, necessary on our part. Of the Treaty concluded during the late Administration He says: "Some of the articles might have been admitted on a principle of compromise, but others were too highly disadvantageous"; but He does not point out the particular stipulations to which either of these observations apply. The affair of the Chesapeake is mentioned with much irritation. The finances of the United States are stated to be very flourishing. From small note book.]

* See Index, Vol. I.

† See Index, Vol. I.

‡ John Smith, known as "Watwick" Smith (1749-1831), water-colour painter. See Index, Vols. I. and III.

CHAPTER LXVIII

1807

Miss Walpole the Actress

December 8. [Yesterday in the Court of Kings Bench, T. Graham Esqr. Solicitor of Lincoln's Innfields was prosecuted by Atkyns of Norfolk, sivevant Miss Walpole,* the actress, charging with perjury in certain answers returned to a Bill in equity, in the Court of Chancery in His Capacity of Trustee, of certain property belonging to Mr. Atkyns, deceased, husband to the Prosecution. He was most honorably acquitted, & the conduct of Mr. Plowden Barrister, Her adviser, severely condemned, by the Attorney General Sir V. Gilbart,† and by Lord Ellenborough.‡ After the Attorney General had replied to the accusation Mr. Garrow would proceed no further in the case. It appeared that Mr. Graham had been a great friend to the family, and prevented it from ruin.]

Miss Branton,§ the actress, a few days since sent in Her resignation to the Managers of Covent Garden Theatre, preparatory to Her union with the Earl of Craven, who by the marriage articles has settled a year upon Her [see December 11]. -From small note-book.]

Coloridge and Kindness

December 9. -[Humphry] Davy|| of the Royal Institution dangerous state - a low fever, pulse 120 drinks a bottle of * Charlotte Walpole, the actress, was a friend of Marie Antoinette and wife of A. Atkyns, of Ketteringham Hall, Norfolk. There is a stipple engraving of her in the British Museum after a portrait by H. W. Bunbury, showing her when Miss W. the character of Nancy in Tickell's The Camp. She died in 1836.

† See Index, Vols. II. and III.

‡ See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

§ Miss Louisa Branton (1785?-1860) was a daughter of John Branton, the actor, made her first appearance at Covent Garden in 1803. Her principal parts included Townley in The Provoked Husband, Cecilia in As You Like It, Anne Bullen in Henry VIII. and Lady Anne in Richard III.

|| See Vol. III., page 165.

day.—Has lately discovered in Chymistry what oversets Lavoisian system.—Hoppner dined at Richd. Sharpe's, Fenchurch St. on Saturday night. Coleridge was of the party. Hoppner did not like Him. At Malta Coleridge recd. kindness from ——— Stodart, who was settled there in a civil capacity. Stodart who is now in England has complained of Coleridge not having called upon Him.—This Smirke has been told & that kindness makes little of lasting impression upon Him.—

December 10. Academy Annual General Meeting I went to. The Premiums were given, the meeting being in the Council Room.—

For Historical painting, the subject, "The Wisdom of Solomon"—

Lascelles Hoppner* ..... 14 votes appl.
Hilton ..... 1 do.

Turner Professor of Perspective

After delivering the Medals Mr. West, the President assigned us a reason for not giving a discourse that there was much business appointed for that even'g. He therefore read an exhortation to the Students recommending to them the Study of Character in figures,—also a close & continued study of the Antique in order to acquire a pure taste & knowledge of perfect form, & not to be eager to go from the Model Academy where they had the benefit of Mr. Fuseli's advice, to the Life Academy before they were properly prepared. He ad. the Greeks in Architecture as well as in Sculpture, had left models of pure taste, & lamented that in England we see too many examples not of imitations or founded upon the Greek taste, but of the bad taste which has prevailed in Italy.—He read his exhortation very ill & mispronounced words. He said "perspective" for "perspicuous." On delivering the gold medal to Lascelles Hoppner

* William Lascelles Hoppner, second son of John Hoppner, according to the Academician's granddaughters "the Hon. Edwin Lascelles" and Colonel Wilson Bradlyll. This statement apparently is not quite correct. Edwin Lascelles was never "the Honourable." He was Mr. Edwin Lascelles until created Baron of Harewood in 1790, and the barony became extinct at his death on January 25th, 1795. He was succeeded in his estates by his cousin Edward Lascelles, who was created Baron Harewood of Harewood on June 18th, 1795, and Viscount Lascelles and Earl of Harewood on September 7th, 1812.

This was the Mr. Lascelles referred to by Farington, on page 108 of the first volume of the Diary, as having been Hoppner's host at Harewood in 1795, and the "young Mr. Lascelles, who has a taste for the arts and has practised a little," was Edward, his eldest son, afterwards Viscount Lascelles. It was he who was godfather to Hoppner's second son. While Edward Viscount Lascelles was at Harewood Turner met Mr. Fawkes of Farley there, at which time (1798) Turner made and signed two water-colour drawings of Harewood House for the Viscount, and Girtin, Varley, and Hoppner also painted views of the mansion for him. There are at Harewood two portraits of his Lordship by Hoppner, which are not recorded in the "Life of Hoppner," by Messrs. Mackay and Roberts, but the latter catalogue a portrait of him as belonging to the Earl of Morton, and another of "Mrs. Lascelles," wife of Henry, second Earl of Harewood.

The present Viscount Lascelles is himself a collector of very considerable taste and judgment.

He made no observation; but on giving the Medal to Burby He commented him [upon] the ability He had displayed. - Hoppner afterwards took notice of this to me & was much mortified at it. -

The Students having withdrawn, the Members proceeded to elect for a Professor of Perspective. Turner being the only Candidate there was taken by each Member writing Aye, or No. Turner won by 2 to one and Tresham was elected Professor of Painting. No had three votes.

Northcote's Declarations

All the Students who read, premiums except Burby took them without speaking, but He bowed & then in a short speech returned thanks. Northcote* expected to lose the election, & I told Him I found many members who were well disposed to Him in general & to the declarations He had made respecting the works of Nicola & other acknowledged great masters, saying How ed. they voted member to be a Professor of Painting whose sentiments were in variance with their own and those of bygone ages. He sd. O made similar declarations. I said "not in my public" a man. He then sd. He found He was to suffer from the indiscreet speeches, as He had done for what He had sd. of Mr. Pitt for who supposed Mr. Philipps &c. wd. never be upon terms with Him. I expressed a wish to be a Printer, which I told Him there wd. be no of. - I shook hands with Sandby & had lively conversation with for the first time in many years. -

* See Vols. I, II, and III.

CHAPTER LXIX

1807

Embargo on Russian Vessels

December 11.—[An Order of Council for an Embargo to be laid on all Russian vessels, & to prevent any vessels from being permitted to enter & clear out for Russia was issued by the King in Council on the 9th. inst.—and further for the seizing & detaining all Russian vessels whenever met but that the utmost care be taken for the preservation of all & every part of the cargoes on board of any of the sd. ships or vessels.]

Sir Stephen Shairpe, the British Consul in Russia, in a letter to the Governor & Company of Russia merchants dated St. Petersburg, Novr. 11 informs them,—"That the Seals of Government have been put upon all the warehouses of British merchants, & of British subjects, who are foreign guests"; and that an embargo had been laid on all British Ships at Cronstadt &c.

This afternoon Earl Craven aged 36, was married to Miss Brunton aged 24 the Actress of Covent Garden, at His Lordships House, Hill St. Berkeley Square, in the presence of Genl. & Mrs. St. John, the Hon: Berkely Craven, & the nearest relatives of the Lady. Mr. Brunton, her Father, gave Her away. [From small note-book.]

Sheridan's Impocunlosity

December 12. Heath [the engraver] called to desire me to again take the care of the Landscape by Gainsborough belonging to Mr. Sheridan,* upon which & two others by the same, he advanced to Sheridan £500, which sum Miss Linwood† paid Heath to have the opportunity of copying them in Needlework & as a security for the money.—Heath told me that when Sheridan gave a great entertainment to the Prince of Wales, He desired the pictures might be placed in His House that He might seem to have His property abt. Him, but Heath had a hint to * R. B. Sheridan. See Vols. I., II. and III.

† See Vol. III. page 22

take the pictures away in abt. 2 minutes or they might be so Heath keeps them for Miss Linwood.

He sd. it was thought by some that Lascelles Hopper though obtained the gold medal had not painted the best picture. I to eminent Members of the Academy who did not associate with H were of opinion that the picture by Lascelles Hopper had more p in it than the other. He sd. He cd. not suppose that Turner sufficiently informed of the Science of Perspective to qualify give lectures in it. Tresham, He sd. has got the Professorship of ing, which He has been long looking to & may give Poetry w lectures. He mentioned the insanity of Sheldon Professor of A in the Academy, & sd. Mr. Wilson who had the care of Dr. Wm. I university wd. willingly act as a Substitute for Him with. re
He told me He reckoned that He shd. be able to finish the Plat death of Lord Nelson from West's picture in abt. 2 years more. for the sake of introducing many portraits, West has put in so many that something of a spotty effect is produced by it which will he to regulate.

The Foundling Hospital

Mr. David Pike Watts's* I dined at. Mr. Watts told me th
Bernard quitted his residence at the Foundling Hospital in conse of having had continued disputes abt. the management of the r of the Hospital, with a party of which Mr. Everitt of Bedford was the Head & His principal opponent. Mr. Watts sd. Mr. I & Mr. Everitt were the Pit & Fox of the Foundling Hospital. He highly of the good disposition of Mrs. Bernard who with, ne anything is highly accomplished, speaking several languages &
Bernard has much knowledge of building, & speculates in th by buying or erecting Houses under His own superintendence.

Crutch and Catalani

Dr. Crutch spoke of Catalani the Singer. He said she is * Constable's uncle. See Vol. III, page 181.

† On October 18, 1779, it was announced in an advertisement that "Mrs. arrived in town, with her son, the Musical Child [not yet five years old], who will on the organ every day as usual, from one o'clock to three, at Mrs. Hart's, Milliner dilly." Such was the introduction to London of William Crutch (1775-1847), born in Green's Lane, Norwich, to Michael Crutch and his wife Isabella. He b to play on an organ built by his father, performed at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, a of fifteen. Soon thereafter he became organist of St. John's College, Oxford, pr Music at the University in 1797, and on the establishment of the Royal Academy in 1822 he was appointed first Principal. His musical compositions include the
"The Captivity of Judah," written in 1789 (a work wholly distinct from the o the same name in 1834), and "Palestine," his most important work, which was on April 29, 1812, at the Hanover Square Rooms. It is not definitely known settled in London, but Farington proves that he was here in December, 1807.

Crutch's last public appearance was at Westminster Abbey on June 28, 1834, played the organ at a Handel Festival.

in her deportment & a good Mother to Her Children. Of Her powers as a Singer He said she has an admirable delivery of Her voice, so that the words she expresses may be heard when she is a hundred feet from those who listen to Her. She has the true Italian delivery, which is distinct & flowing, & so generally does this power belong to the Italians that even indifferent singers of that Country possess it. She has also taste & sings with so much feeling that He had not heard her 5 minutes before his eyes watered. Her defects are that she frequently sings out of tune & overloads Her songs with flourishes, such as Operate on the Gallery of the Opera, but destroy the simplicity which shd. prevail, in her singing. — He said there is in many a strong prejudice against Her. —

Overcharged with Wind

Of Madame Mara,* He spoke very highly. He thought she sung with more feeling than anyone, but Her delivery was in the German stile. Porta mento is the word used by Dr. Burney for delivery. He explained what He meant by German delivery by comparing it with the pipe of an instrument so overcharged with wind, as to prevent the sounds from flowing smoothly & easily. —

Of Mrs. Billington† He sd. that she never afforded Him the least pleasure. She had as much execution as Madame Mara, & a very fine voice, but not the least feeling. —

Madame Grassini‡ had a very fine figure & fine action, but Her voice & powers were inferior to Catalani — Mara, & Billington, — yet such is the modesty of Catalani, that speaking to Mrs. Frazier, (Miss Bunke) she sd. "Grassini cd. have sung this better than I can do." —

The Noblest Music

After tea Dr. Crotch played a considerable time on a Piano Forte. West asked Him which is the noblest of all musical compositions. Crotch answered, "The last Chorus of the Messiah," adding, "it comprehends all the excellencies of musical composition." —

West said He last night recd. a letter from Fulton at New York, who informed Him that He has invented & established a Passage Boat to be navigated by Steam only. — It goes to Albany twice a week & carries 70 Passengers, & in less time by 15 Hours than the Boat which carries the mail. —

* See Vol. I., page 60.

† See Vol. I., page 21.

‡ Josephina Grassini was born in Lombardy in 1773, and was engaged to succeed Banti (see Vol. I., pages 60 and 307) to sing from March to July at a salary of £3,000. Grassini left London in 1806 and died at Milan in 1850. Vigée's portrait of her as Zaira in Winter's opera was engraved by S. W. Reynolds.

Wordsworth and Wilkie

Constable spoke of a picture of Card players now painting by as being most admirably executed as far as is done. He was with yesterday who told Him that when he has made a Sketch for a & settled His design, He then walks about looking for a person to be a model for completing each character in his picture, & He everything from the life. He sd. He sometimes walks abt. for before He can meet with the character of head &c. that will suit.

Constable says, He has great resolution of mind & is not likely affected by the ill judged suggestions of those who obtrude their Him. He sd. the Card Players He shall finish not declaring it to any particular person but when finished will see who is disposed most for it. He was offended with Wordsworth who offered to subjects to Him to paint, & gave Him to understand that when He not think of subjects as well as paint them He wd. come to Him. —

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH
From a Print by the English Mission

CHAPTER LXX

1807

Wordsworth's High Opinion of Himself

December 12. Constable told me that Wilkie has complained to Him of the loss of time & interruption He suffers from going down to the Admiralty to paint the Mother of Lord Mulgrave with all Her Paraphernalia. He sd. that when He has proceeded on his work at Home one day & feels eager to go on with it the next He is obliged to leave it for the above purpose.

Constable remarked upon the high opinion Wordsworth entertains of Himself. He told Constable that while He was a Boy going to Hawkshead School, His mind was often so possessed with images so lost in extraordinary raptures, that He has held by a wall not knowing but He was part of it. He also desired a Lady, Mrs. Lloyd, near Wootton Bassett when Constable was present to notice the singular formation of His Skull. Coleridge remarked that this was the effect of intense thinking. --I observed to Constable if so, He must have thought in His Mother's womb.

At Carlisle, Sotheby sd. that Wordsworth's poetry not only surpassed any that had ever been written but wd. probably never be equalled. Thus do these persons compare each other.

Money and Mentality

Mr. Watts said He had observed that men who deal in money & have much to do in accounts of money suffer from it in their mental powers, which by such kind of exertion are weakened. He had known Bankers who had proved the truth of it. Went upon this sd. that exertion in his art did not produce the same effect & that study to Him is necessary & grateful. Carlisle then took up the subject to shew that the business of calculating sums is a great strain upon the mind, being forced & dry unaccompanied by any amusement.

Mr. Watts said a gentleman at Putney having provided an entertainment for a Company invited a singing man to add to the amusement who was to be paid for it. When the Dessert was set on a Pine apple was placed upon the table which the singing man made at without ceremony and cut deep into it helping himself to a large part of it. The gentleman seeing this went out of the room & soon after the singing man went out, and the gentleman addressing gave Him the money He was to & dismissed Him by telling Him His company was no longer desired.

We were much pleased with the kind attention of Mr. Watts & solicitors to oblige us. He expressed to me His knowledge of the I had taken of His nephew, Mr. Constable & how sensible Co was of my goodness.

The King and Smirke

December 14. Mr. West called upon before 12 o'clock & remained with Him till past 4, the whole time passed in conversation. We talked of the business of Thursday next at the Academy General Meeting and He expressed a desire that it should be confined to settling a vote to be decided by the King respecting the rotation of Council, as it now stands would be alternately 4 one year & 4 the next; & 5 new Council having been submitted this year. He wished the Council of raising the Salaries of the Officers of the Academy to be put to enable Him in a private interview with His Majesty to prepare for it. This I approved & sd. I wd. act accordingly. He then said Salaries of the Keeper, & of the Secretary might be increased a yr. & that of the Treasurer to 1000. I asked Him what He occasioned the King to strike Smirke's* name out when offered for Keeper of the Royal Academy. He said He could not return it. It originated with Richards, who induced Hershey to go to the King (being then in favor with His Majesty) with such a representation of Smirke as to establish a prejudice against Him in His Majesty's

That Damned Academy Business

Lord Somerville who was then much with the King, said to me who communicated it to West "That Hershey had been with me about that damned Academy business." West had a full personal interest Richards took in the rejection of Smirke when He was carried up as being elected Keeper. The King on seeing the name on the paper said "I thought I should not have seen this name" or to that effect, & then proceeded to draw a line through it & to write of rejection. After the King had done His Richards advanced His Majesty, & thanked Him for what He had done. West was the person then present. I asked West what could cause Richards so malignant a part. He said it was owing to Smirke having an attack upon Him in the Academy, at the great dinner, he allowed His name to be printed in the Catalogue of the Election against a picture painted by His Son Richd. Smirke. This made Him who never forgives anything, his implacable enemy.

* Robert Smirke. See Vols. I., II. and III.

I said that those who attended the King during His last illness, medical men, had mentioned that the King at times raved upon Smirke's name as a Democrat, and of course it must be concluded that such an accusation had been made against him.—West replied That Wyatt was the person who had first prejudiced the King's mind against the Academicians as Democrats & prepared Him to receive such a representation as Beechey might give.—He then said He, Wyatt, had ruined the King, as He had done Mr. Beckford of Fonthill. The Kings private purse had been exhausted by Him in building at Kew & in other places, & now everything is at a stand, & many persons left in a situation subjected to great losses.

CHAPTER LXXI

1867

Beckford and his Fortune

December 14. He [West] told me that the latter end of October while He was at Bath, Mr. Beckford, requested him to come to Bath which He did & staid there three days. Mr. Beckford represented the state of His affairs, exhibiting a very great change indeed His former situation. Four years ago the building of the High Penthill had cost £442,000. He showed that Wyatt by His negligence & inattention, had caused Him an unnecessary expense of £150,000. He said that at present, such is the state of Commerce, that His Jamaica estates are rather an expense to Him than a source of Income; He had to answer claims upon Him been obliged to sell his estate in Jardine which brought £62,000 & His estate in the neighbour St. Pancras for £12,000. Nothing now remains to Him but 1 productive Jamaica estates, & the Penthill estate, which is reckoned £10000 a year; more might be made of it were the extensive grounds turned to greater advantage. Upon this income He is impossible to keep up His former establishment, & He has accordingly reduced it to a very limited scale compared with what it had been. Carriages & Horses have been sent away for sale & Coachman, & attendants, discharged. He also desired West to assist Him in the sale of His valuable collection of pictures and drawings, saying at the time, He should feel much at parting with them as they never be recovered by Him.

Beckford and Persecution

I asked West how He was in spirits? He said, He appeared to be in a manly manner, saying, He had been accustomed to pain & mortification, observing that the change from what He had experienced in early life had been great indeed. Then mention was offered to flowers strewed in his way wherever He went. He seemed to think education had not been conducted judiciously, and that being brought up in private, He had not experienced those checks which are meted out at a public school He should have been expected to make mistakes among others, taking the consequences of things as they might be.

WILLIAM BECKFORD (1733-1804)

Painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds

From a Print in the British Museum, copied by L. A. Dean

He has at times spoken of the charge which has caused Society to withdraw from Him, which He always represents to be persecution founded in injustice & falsehood. He says He can never forgive Himself for two things: One the breaking His promise to His Mother who urged Him not to go to Powderham Castle (Lord Courtney's)* at the time He did, when the affair took place which has so much injured His reputation;—and the other His yielding to the entreaties of His wife, Lady Margaret Beckford to quit England, & go for a time to Switzerland,—while this matter was agitating the public mind. Dr. Lettice, His ci-devant Tutor, & Lord Thurlow, both seconded Lady Margaret in Her endeavour to effect this point.—

In Love with Beckford

West said, that Mr. Beckford's mother never believed Her Son to have been criminal. She wished Him, she told West, not to visit at Powderham Castle as she was convinced there were persons who wished to injure His reputation & lower His importance. She said the fact was, that Lady Longborough, aunt to Lord Courtney, was in love with Beckford, and had a correspondence with Him by letter, while on this visit at Powderham Castle, & Lord Courtney then a Boy, carried the letters, one of which He so mismanaged that it fell into wrong hands, which Beckford discovering & being very passionate, He went to Lord Courtney's room, while He was in bed, it being morning, & locking the door, He horawhipped Him, which causing the Boy to scream out, His Tutor came to the door & found it locked. This gave cause for the suspicion & the reports which were soon after circulated.—

I listened to this relation which with many other circumstances was given to Him by Mr. Beckford's [mother] when at Her desire He visited Her alone at Her House at Hauxton; but I could not but feel the improbability of much of the story, it not at all agreeing with many other well authenticated circumstances, & being in itself difficult to give credit to; and from all I have heard the stories told to clear Mr. Beckford have not been well considered; though on the other hand, it does not appear that there is any proof actually to support the charge against Him.

West told me that Lord Aboyne, brother to the late Lady Margaret Beckford, who went down to Fonthill to effect a separation between Her & Mr. Beckford after the report was circulated, and quitted them in the most hostile manner, has of late written to & had intercourse with Mr. Beckford. —Lady Margaret was pregnant at the time & continued attached to Mr. Beckford till Her death which happened two or three years afterwards while they were abroad.

* William Viscount Courtney (1768-1835), declared Earl of Devon on May 14, 1831, by the House of Lords. Dying unmarried, the Viscounty became extinct, and the Earldom of Devon devolved on another branch of the Courtney family, as heirs male of the guarantee of 1553.

Lawrence's Bravura

I asked West how He liked the portrait of Mr. Pitt painted by Lawrence. He said it was a remarkably strong likeness, & had so much what may be called individuality in it, touches abt. the eyes, & the mouth, which are only seen when a picture is attentively painted from nature, that it surprised Him how such circumstances col. be retained in memory. He then expressed an apprehension, & intended to say to Lawrence, that He is now endeavouring to give to His picture a sort of pencilling & execution as will show them to have been done with facility that kind of Bravura that carries a great charm, but that it is done at the expense of truth & want of correctness, both being sometimes sacrificed by Him to it. He said "take Pitt's coat, & no body would be found under it," the points of the elbow, & the wrist, are not measured & indicated. He said Lawrence was to proceed in this way He would gradually become a mannerist. He then spoke of Him as an artist in high terms, & at the idea of comparing any other artist with Him.

CHAPTER LXXII

1807

America Desires to Remain Neutral

Decemhor 14. I asked West what He thought of our situation with America. He said, that Jefferson in his message to the Senate had seemed rather Hostile to this country, which was to humour the people who will remain irritated about the Chesapeake business,—that the great object of America is to preserve their neutrality, but if they should be forced by Buonaparte to declare themselves it will be for this Country.

Art in France

He spoke of the vast encouragement given to Artists in France at this period. He dined in company with a young American of extraordinary talents a few days ago, who was just arrived from France, & stated, that David has now a Commission from the Government (Buonaparte) to paint 6 pictures each 40 feet wide, the subjects the great actions of the French under Buonaparte &c. —Vincout & other artists are also thus employed.

He Mount Farlington

We talked of filling the Office of Secretary to the Academy in case of the death or inability of Richards. I told Him that when in the last Summer He said to me "That there was one person who above all others was most fit for that office," that I could not but know from his previous opinions & His manner, that He meant myself, He sd. He certainly did. — I added that Smirke had much urged me to take the office & that Daniell joined Him in it. — He then said that of the Academy excepting a few members, I should be certain, it remained only to be assured that I should not meet the fate of Smirke with the King. To prevent this, He would endeavour to find out how the King's mind stands at present, by bringing forward my name as a person likely to be thought of by the Academy in case of a vacancy. — He wd. also do what wd. be equally necessary viz: endeavour to dispose the minds of those who are about the King favorably to me.

The Faringdon Diary

West and His Taxes

He told me He had lately been called upon by the Commis-appointed for the Property Tax at the instance of their Surveyor had not been satisfied with His return, & had accordingly rated Him to pay Sixty three pounds a quarter. He attended a Board at which Collins of Berners street presided & it was so ordered that for present. He showed that the Income which He receives from the & upon which He lives is the payment of a debt, not a gift & that for work done long since. That as Surveyor of pictures, that His Income has 10 per cent deducted before it is paid to Him.
Collins then asked Him what He wd. propose to pay for what he had to be the average annual gatta from his profession, & He named with which Mr. Collins expressed Himself satisfied.

Hubb Doddington

Speaking of how much He knew of the secret movements
Court of this country and how much a few individuals had contrived to produce great much to be regretted effects. He said, that Hubb Doddington, kept a diary* it would have been a most interesting record, & would have explained much that is accounted for in other ways.

December 18. Constable called & told me that Miss Watyesterday expressed to Him that Her Father had great pleasure party which assembled at His House on Saturday last. Mr.
afterwards confirmed it, & hoped that He might have many successes.—Constable then told me that the rough manners of the late Hen Kenton] who left Mr. Watts His great fortune, rather came to go to the opposite side in manners than to imitate Him, & in consequence He was called, Constables mother, Mr. Watts's sister, milk sop, and attended & acted in the management of His Assemblies.---

We talked of Dr. Crotch who married the daughter of a Baron an old attachment, & has children. He said Crotch is a very character, not assuming anything, & on that acct. profits less profession than many do who assume a great deal. He said that man,† the Singer, has 3 guineas a night, when He goes to assist at * George Hubb Doddington (1691-1761), politician, wit, and verse writer, belonged to an old Somerset family, and was in April, 1761, created Baron Melcombe of Mel-combe Regis, in Dorsetshire. Cumberland's "Memoirs" give an excellent description of him, and a life of him was published recently. His diary appeared in 1784.

† See entry December 1.

‡ James Bartleman (1769-1811) was educated under Dr. Cooke at the Charter School, Westminster Abbey, and became famous as a base singer. He was buried parties, & that now Dr. Crotch has the same.—He had been for several times at musical parties at Charles Greville's* at Paddington, & Greville on his running away wd. say to him "Really unless you will fix terms on which you will allow me to have your assistance I cannot request it." Accordingly Crotch informed him that his terms were 3 guineas a night, since which time Greville has never requested his attendance.

Constatble related another anecdote of Greville.—A beautiful young woman called Emily, who lived for a time with Greville & afterwards went to Bengal with Pitt, son to the Surgeon, sat to Sir Joshua Reynolds for a picture in which she was represented as Titania.† This picture when finished Greville could not pay for, but proposed to the present Lord Dysart to take it, & He was to have it for the sum paid if He should claim it. But Greville not being influenced by any strong desire for it, allowed near 30 years to pass witht. applying for [it], but lately on the reputation of Sir Joshua rising, & this picture being spoken of He put in his claim for it & took away paying the too guineas which Lord Dysart had paid for it. The transaction, however, has not been agreeable to the Dysart family through His Lordship who prefers peace to everything else has submitted to it.—

* The Hon. Charles Greville, second son of the eighth Baron Brooke and first Earl of Warwick. He was an early friend of Emma Hart (Nelson's Emma), and his portrait is included by Reynolds in one of the latter's Dilettanti pictures. Romney also painted his portrait (1781), and it was engraved by Meyer and reproduced in Banks's "History of White's Club."

On August 8th, 1788, Greville wrote to Romney: "Sir William [Hamilton] made me a present of his portrait, and I gave him mine, which is now at Naples. . . . You will therefore include in Sir William's note his portrait and all the pictures sent to Naples, except my portrait, which, with the Straw Hat, you will charge to me."

† Mr. R. W. Egerton, of Stansty Lodge, Wrexham, writes "The 'Emily' of the Farlington Diary, published in the Morning Post of 12th February, 1923, is referred to in the second volume of the "Memoirs of William Blizard, 1775-1782." In Ch. XIX. entitled "Mrs. Pitt," Emily Warren is frequently mentioned.

"Sir Joshua Reynolds . . . had painted Emily's portrait many times, and in different characters. He often declared every limb of hers perfect in symmetry, and altogether he had never seen so faultless and finely formed a human figure."

"In Ch. XXIV. of the same book, page 322, is an account of Emily Warren's departure for India with Mr. Robert Pitt."

[Emily Warren (alias Bertie, alias Het. Coventry) sat to Sir Joshua Reynolds for the picture of "Thais." Moreover, it was Charles Greville who paid for the full-length portrait, as recorded in the Life of Sir Joshua Reynolds by Graves and Cronin.—En.]

CHAPTER LXXIII

1837

Extravagance

December 17. Mrs. Hankin (late Mrs. D. Springhall) was Her nephew Danl. Wakefield had been 15 years with the young man who by the decision of Sir Wm. Scott, has been declared His wife. While the validity of the marriage was contesting ordered by the Court to allow Her a certain Sum weekly for Her support. For this He was obliged to apply to His Mother, who by work & by her pen for reviews, & for other publications, was enabled to supply Him with much difficulty & self denial even to wanting suitable Clo. Himself, which caused her Sister to prefer Cloaths to Her. Wakefield quitted His farm boasting of having £40000 but upon examination it has been found that He is not worth anything. He still reside with His wife, and their children, 5 or 6 are with Mrs. Wakefield & other friends. Danl. Wakefield* by the extravagance of the Wife has married is also greatly in debt.

Application

General Meeting at the Academy I went to.

I walked home with West. He told me that for 6 weeks at the Season of the year, He seldom does anything in Painting, but spends His time in writing and regulating various concerns. He said He is slow in bringing His mind to bear upon a subject but when once His mind is occupied by one He is a Child is everything else, till He has completed what He has undertaken; He then can go to another with * Daniel Wakefield (1776-1846), barrister and writer on political economy, second son of Edward Wakefield, a London merchant, and his wife Priscilla, daughter of John Bell (1751-1811). She, as a philanthropist, established several savings banks, called "gally banks." She was, however, most widely known as a writer of children's books, her most popular works including "The Juvenile Travellers."

Priscilla was his second wife, he having been married first to a Miss Elizabeth (see under November 18, 1837).

The Edward Wakefield (1771-1821) referred to was Daniel's brother, who was attention to it. He said, "That a Painter who does not possess His mind fully with His subject and proceed unremittingly upon it till it is finished, but on the contrary runs from one subject to another will do little."—He told me His usual time of rising in a morning at this Season is a quarter before 9 o'clock or at 9, and to breakfast a little before 10.—He is generally in bed about 12 o'clock. When the days become longer & the weather warmer, He rises sometimes at 6 o'clock.

December 18. Lawrence [said] Sir Francis Baring usually rises at half-past 9 in the morning, breakfast  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 10; dines  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 6,—eats grog at Eleven, and goes to bed, the last of His company, at half-past Eleven or towards twelve o'clock. He is an Advocate for long rest.—Sir Francis is an Advocate for His friend, the late Marquis of Lansdowne, who, He acknowledges, was suspected of duplicity & insincerity, but His manner which was courteous and His being solicitous to please arose, Sir Francis says, from the gratification He had in seeing others happy.—

A Nation of Traders

Lord Redbourn* has lately said to Lawrence. His Lordship is so perpetual a talker that Lawrence has felt Himself wearied by it.—He has spoken of the declaration published by Spence & Colbset, "That Commerce is not necessary to the prosperity of this Country."—He allows that the Commercial influence has been carried too far, & subjected us to be called a Nation of traders, but that Commerce has undoubtedly contributed to raise this country to its present importance. Lawrence thinks the Ministry are inclined rather to favor this new opinion so far as to revivify them to such privations & difficulties as must attend the present state of things. —

Lord Astrey

Lawrence read a letter recd. from a Lady a friend of Lady Crewe, giving a dreadful acct. of the profligate conduct of Mr. Crewe, only Son of Lord Crewe. It is stated that Lord Crewe can never see Him again, His vices & His expences have been unbounded. On his late marriage thousands were advanced to discharge His debts, but the money was applied by a Major James, an evil adviser & pander, to relieve Lord Moira from some of His distresses. James has acted a similar part to each, promising their profligate expences. Young Mrs. Crewe says Her Husband has hitherto behaved well to Her, and she believes He has rather been led into vice & expence than gone to it from disposition.† Lord Moira's estate in Ireland is no longer His own, but

* See Index, Vols. I., II. and III.

† John Crewe (who became the second Baron Crewe in 1829), baptised 1772, at St. George's, Hanover Square, was a Major-General in the Army in 1808, Lieutenant-General in 1811, and General in 1812. He married on May 5, 1807, Henrietta Maria Anne, daughter of George Walker-Hungerford, of Calne, Wilts, and died on December 4, 1835, at his château near Liège. To the present Marquess of Crewe belongs the well-known portrait of John Crewe as a child in fancy dress, a Henry VIII., by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

this at present is endeavoured to be kept a secret from His wife in London.

December 19. Wm. Wells (shipbuilder and picture restorer) said that He saw at Cronstadt Russians working upon the Fortifications there. He saw a Group of them at dinner which consisted of 40 anions; after which each of them drank a glass of train oil, which did with much apparent relish.

The Royal Family Leave

December 20. The newspapers of this day give the Gazette of the night containing information from Sir Salusey Smith dated Dec. 19 stating "That the Prince Regent of Portugal, with the whole Royal Family, consisting of 15 persons, had embarked for the westward with 7 sail of the Line. Five Frigates, Three armed Brigs, & a number of 30 Brazil Merchant Vessels. That, the Portuguese fleet is commanded by His Majesty's Ships Marlborough, London, Monarch, & Albion under the command of Captain Moore. One Line of Battleship is on her way to Plymouth. Only one respectable Portuguese Line of Ship and 3 Hulks had been left in the Tagus. Eight Russian Battle Ships remained in the Tagus, only 4 of which were in a condition for Sea." "Rear Admiral Sir Salusey Smith has remained the 16th of the Port of Lisbon with 5 sail of the Line, & will probably in time have been joined by an additional squadron of line of battle ships."

J. Offley's I dined at. Much satisfaction expressed at the news of the departure of the Royal Family from Portugal. The Lisbon and Oporto Club of Merchants trading to those places gave an entertainment on Friday last to the Portuguese Ambassador and His Secretary at the London Tavern where the Club J. & C. Offley, members of the Club, were there. The dinner was at 6 o'clock, abt. 18 sat down, & remained till past Eleven, when they retired to another room to Coffee &c. The dinner was sumptuous. Desert were Pines &c. Champagne, Burgundy, Hock, Tokay &c. were the wines. This Club is limited to 200 members, & the first meeting held the first Thursday in every month for 4 months, called the Winter Season. Each member subscribes 5 guineas annually, & 2 shillings each time of his dining at the Club.

Death of Angelica Kauffman

December 23.—[At the General Assembly of the Royal Academy of Arts] read the letter which was a translation of a letter recd. by me from Rome informing Him of the death of Angelica Kauffman at Rome, on the 5th of Novr. last, & mentioning many particulars of her life & resignation. It was resolved that a copy of the letter be entered upon the records of the Society. Hopkinson then observed that the death of Academicians had not hitherto been noticed with respect. He therefore moved & it was agreed to unanimously, that upon the death of an Academician, a General Assembly should be convened to receive a report of it.

* See Index, Vol. I., and entry under January 6, 1808.

Tresham then began to speak, Whether the vacancy made by the death of Angelica shd. be filled in Febry. next.—I replied that upon the death of Wm. Hamilton the Academy going only by the printed book, acted upon the original law & filled the vacancy made by His death; but the printed book is a false representation; the original Law made in 1769 was repealed on the 12th of Novr. 1770 and no further entry respecting it appears upon the records.—It stands then that 3 months notice shall be given to the Academicians of a vacancy of an Academician before it be filled up. I then referred to the books, showed them the law & the repeal of it, & they became convinced that it ought not to be otherways than that 3 months notice should be given & consequently that Angelica Kauffman's seat cannot be filled before Febry. 1809.—Smeane agreed with me strongly. Tresham was the only one that hesitated, but He agreed to it, & it was resolved unanimously to act agreeably to the Law of 1770.

Happner expressed to the President His concern that He shd. have listened to Richards as far as to have agreed to postpone appointing a Secretary in His room; sd. He had not been fit for the Office in the last 10 years; and perhaps never was.

It was a very amiable meeting. Copley found me in the room alone, & accosted me civilly, the first time in several years.—He appeared to me to have suffered much in His faculties; His mind seemed to be incapable of comprehending what was going forward.—

CHAPTER LXXIV

1807-1808

Pitt's Coat

December 24. Lawrence dined with — He told me Hugh so much pleased with his portrait of Mr. Pitt that He knew Bishop of London to see it, who, gazing at it said it was very like it wanted a Blue Coat [Lawrence had made it red] the only dress Mr. Pitt had worn from the time He was 14 years of age till, except a dress. We considered this a trait of the nervous feelings of this politician in matters of art.

Lawrence saw the premium pictures at the British Institution — He thought Power's,* which got the first prize as a very fine picture, a bad Westall.

Lawrence dined at Kemble's on Sunday last. Sir Gilbert Heathcote & His Brother, Mr. Robert Heathcote & His wife (late Miss de Columbine) were there. R. Heathcote is what is called a turn but has £10000 a year still remaining. He has been at London a

* Isaac Power (1788-1816), born in Bristol, was the eldest son of Richard, a marine painter, and brother of William James Power, also a marine painter. "Under Romney and Beechey, and Hoyle is a second referred to him as the 'big of an ingenious etc.' He began to exhibit at the Royal Academy in 1807, and member of the Liverpool Academy in 1810."

On inheriting some property from his uncle, Sir Isaac Power, he devoted himself to the drama. His first piece was a musical farce, Terence No. 2, which was put on the Haymarket on August 11, 1806, and which was his last success. His next most successful piece, the Miller and his Men, with music by Bellingham, For Paul, and he also dramatised several of his Walter Scott's novels. (Harriet Martineau, Veutis, Macready, Lawton, Charles Kemble, Fanny, and Wallack all appeared in it.)

† Sir Gilbert Heathcote, fourth baronet (1771-1841), M.P. for Exeter (1806), and for Rutland, 1801-1841. He married, first, on Aug. 10, 1791, Sophia, eldest daughter of John Manners, of Crazeham House, Lincolnshire, on August 10, 1815, Mrs. Elton, of Park Street, Manchester. His eldest son (John, fifth baronet), by the first marriage, who was created Lord Anson, in 1830 (in 1827, Clementina Elizabeth Hammond, Bateman Wallingford de Lauder, eldest son, Gilbert Henry, twenty-fourth Baron Mollough de Lauder, was at of Anson in 1891. The present Earl is the second of his line.

marriage & saw Batolozzi there employed in engraving plates from the pictures of Pellegrini who resides near Him, & this at 81 or 2 years of age.

December 25. Marchant sd. He never stood before Soane witht. thinking He had a deceitful man to look at. As to Tresham, He said that from knowing Him in Rome, He had, on coming to England, expressed His opinion of Him to many of His friends. He sd. while Tresham was aiming to be an Academician He had lost 2 years in running abt. & soliciting members for their votes, & that when He had an object in view He never ceased His attempts till He obtained.—While Tresham was writing His Poem of "The Sea-Sick Minstrel" in which He endeavoured to compliment all the Academicians,*—He said, "I am praising many who never were praised before & never will be praised again." So much for His sincerity.—

He Related a Joke

December 26. Dr. Reynolds said He had often heard, but did not know it from experience, that a tub filled with water placed in a room newly painted, wd. in a short time draw out the turpentine & take off the smell, but it wd. have the effect of making the paint of a less pure colour than it wd. otherwise.

He related a joke passed upon the Royal Society by Charles 2nd. soon after it was founded. He desired they wd. account to Him "Why a vessel filled to the brim with water should, upon having two fishes put into it, instead of the water, running over the brim subside & become less in quantity?" The Philosophers were puzzled at the question, when Mr. Boyle came amongst them, and desired, that before they attempted to account for it, they wd. ascertain the fact.—They proceeded to do so, & having filled a vessel with water introduced two fishes into it, & the water flowed over into their Shoes.—

Great Collectors

December 27. Baker called to invite me to meet Edridge at dinner on Sunday next, He proposed also to invite Marchi, which He wishes

* Henry Tresham (1741?-1814), R.A., wrote five volumes of verse, including "The Sea-Sick Minstrel," none of which is mentioned by Lowndes. It was said of Tresham, by the authors of "The Royal Academy and its Members," that "He also wrote poetry, but we do not know that his poetry has lived more than his painting."

† The Hon. Robert Boyle (1627-1691), the eminent natural philosopher and chemist, fourteenth child of Richard Boyle, the "Great" Earl of Cork. The "Philosophical" or "Invisible College," as Boyle called it, was incorporated after the Restoration as the Royal Society. One of its most active founders, he was elected the Society's president on November 30, 1680, but "declined to act from a scruple about the oath, and was replaced by Wren." Boyle was buried in St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

to do annually at least. He expects some Christmas tale from in the Country. He told me that Mr. Heber's land out near [700 Reid's] sale; and that Mr. Malone expended abt £180. For He had laid out too much, but thought it was property of such as Citizens do not much value, yet it had its value, & amused

Lord Melville's Nephew

December 29. [Heater] Wilson's I dined at Philip Dundas late Governor of Prince of Wales's Island died at Sea having Island with a hope of benefit from Sea air. His Uncle, Lord Melville had caused Him to be appointed Master attendant at Bombay. He had £10,000 a year & accumulated 20 or 25 years, with which he returned to England, & married a daughter of Sir John Wedd by whom He had 2 Children. He accepted the offer of Gov. Prince of Wales's Island, telling Wilson, that at His age, abt. He was too young to become idle. Accordingly He went to the carrying with Him his wife & Her Sister. The Climate disagreed them. Mrs. Dundas was sent down to Hergal attended by Mr Surgeon, & they both died. Philip Dundas disagreed with Members of the Council of the Island. Wilson concludes that & had air, brought on his complaints & caused His death.

Capt. Grey, late of the Duke of Montrose, Indianman, was the interest of Dundas appointed a Member of the Council of the & went with him but they disagreed & Grey left the Island in the helm Man of war & was lost in Her. Wilson sd. Grey was a hot fellow, unfit for any trust or confidence, adding that a fool managed while He is a dependant, but give Him power and become intractable. I remarked upon Dundas after having a fortune far beyond his original hopes, exposing Himself to the * Richard Heber (1771-1831), "Heber the Magnificent, whose library owned Sir Walter Scott, "are so superior to all others in the world," was the old Reginald Heber (Lord of the Manor of Mauston, in Yorkshire, and Heber, in his and half-brother to Reginald Heber, Bishop of Exeter, and a nobleman. "The land's ley Mountains." Heber, who graduated B.A. in 1792, and took his M.A. at Oxford, was one of the founders of the Athenaeum Club, and sat in Parliament University from 1811 to 1826. He was passionately fond of books, from early age of eight he compiled a catalogue of his collection, and two years later asked to buy books at a sale, where "there would be the best selection of the books went far afield in search of treasures to add to the collection he formed. In London, Paris, Ghent, Brussels, Antwerp, and other places abroad, and it was a magnificent library which he possessed in England and by the time of his death he had volumes, believed to have cost him about £100,000. When they were sold in the the collections realised about £37,500. "The Rev. Mr. Wye wrote of Heber man, he expired at Pimlico, in the midst of his late property, without a friend eye, and from all I have heard I am led to believe he died broken-hearted."

† Isaac Reed (1744-1807), well known as an editor of Shakespeare, was a collector and for upwards of forty years a collector of books relating mainly to English drama. The sale, conducted by King and Lamb, 18, King Street, Coventry, occupied the auctioneers for thirty-nine days, and the £997 lots brought £4,386 10 of such a situation. Wilson defended it saying, "That He was right to look to a larger fortune as in these times a man with a family could not go on with it." He said, He (Wilson) expends £3300 a year independent of what His House rent may be reckoned at.—

1808.

Pictures by Richard Wilson

January 1. Hearne entertained us with an account of His dining at Lord Essex's at Coddishury, where the Servants brought Him Alle for Beer, & from a side table a piece of Knuckle of Venison instead of a prime part.—

January 3. Mr. Booth of the Adelphi, who had 47 pictures sd. to be by Wilson, for a considerable time before His death, was accustomed to come to His rooms in the Adelphi once a week to dinner, & on those days His Son who died in Sept. last was accustomed to dine with him; the other days in the week it has now been shown He [resided] near London with a French woman who many years ago He brought from France. He has left Her a small income.—Mr. Booth, the Son, lodged at a House in Marybone where He found something agreeable to His disposition of mind, which was timid, in the daughter of the people who owned the House, & He resolved to marry Her, but His death prevented it, & He did not leave a Will. His Sisters, Heirs to His estate, Lady Ford & Misses Booth, have settled £4,000, 3 pr. cents upon Her for her life viz: an annuity of £120. Lady Ford has got all the pictures by Wilson & says she will not sell any of them, nor will she suffer Her House to be dirtied by permitting people to see them.—

Great Style in Painting

Columbini, the Printseller, is lately returned from the Continent, & told Mr. Baker that the Painters in Paris are now all mad for the great style in Painting. Nothing will do but what is upon the Model of Michael Angelo. Raphael &c. No prints sought for but those of Marc-antonio &c. —Columbini came to England by way of Holland & with great difficulty He got on board a vessel disguised in a Sailor's dress, & while a search was going forward hid himself among the Coals of the Ship, & was so blackened that He was not afterwards recognised by those who knew him.

CHAPTER LXXX

1808

An Artist's Income

January 4. Collins [just] [who became a Royal Academician] called to desire me to call on Hill to see His pictures painted in British Institution. Wm. Daniell [R.A.] called. He said, that first time He married He has never got less than Twelve hundred per a year, & sometimes £1200. That His expenses have been but 7 & 1/2 per a yr. that he has a bond for upwards of £5000 from Wm. Westall when He went His first voyage. That He has saved, all due to Him to be paid, towards £2000. He showed me Cas. Davis's acct. for the work of animals, & they make the total exp. of the publication to amount to £1400. & calculating upon the of all the impressions the clear profit to Wm. Daniell for His trouble engraving the plates will amount to abt. £750. He said, He employed upon it between 5 & 6 months. Wood, for collecting & arranging the letter press will have the same proportion of profit, & Cadell also, besides all that they will gain up on the paper, print & selling at retail prices what they allow to the work at Wholesale only, — so that probably they may get near 50 per cent up on the taking. —

Passing Rich

Mrs. Edwards called & brought me more papers belonging to Deceased Brother.* She said she now found she could live with comfort upon Forty pounds a year. Her calculation [is] as follows,

Dwelling, per annum	£ 6 6
Weekly Expense of eating, drinking, her candle &c. &c.
Eleven shillings	28 12

	34 18
Cloaths &c. &c.	5 12

£40 0

* E. Edwards, A.R.A. See Index, Vols. I, II, and III.

I then reckoned to obtain for her from the Royal Academy—

per annum .....	£25	0	0
She has £200 in Exchequer bills .....	10	0	0
also £100 3 per cent .....	2	0	0

---

£37 0 0

And by sinking £100 for an annuity for Her life she would obtain £5. more interest making Her income £12. 0. 0, annually. —

January 6. Dance & I dined with Daure sd. He thought the House at Coleorton which Sir G. Beaumont is finishing will cost Him with furniture, not less than £15,000. Sir George will not pay the least attention to the furnishing the House but leaves all to Lady Beaumont, who has shown a very bad taste in Her selection. While Dance was at Coleorton in October last, they generally rose between 7 & 8 oClock and breakfasted before 9, and dined rather before four oClock.—In the mornings Sir George painted or rode out with His Sketch book, & in the evenings He put on His Spectacles and again went on with His Sketching. I asked Dance what He thought of sketches of that kind,—He said They were very well to amuse an amateur,—and exhibited considerable dexterity in practice, but it was that sort of thing that Ten thousand persons might do it disposed to adopt the practise; that it was something like what is called striking in penmanship, a matter of execution more than of the mind. That in such sketches there is no attention to nature or to the peculiar character of the object, but all is made subservient to a particular practice. He then dwelt upon the excellencies of Claude where the appearances of nature are so deeply studied & so faithfully given.

The Lovers of Angelica Knuffman

Dance went to Italy by Sea. He sailed from Gravesend in December 1758, & did not arrive at Rome till the end of May following,—having had a tedious passage, & stopping at Florence where His Brother N. Dance, met Him. N. Dance (now Sir N. Holland) went to Italy in 1755, having before that period been sd. 2 years with Hayman* as a pupil, where He became acquainted with Gainsborough. At Rome He became acquainted with Angelica Knuffman, and became so enamoured of Her, she encouraging His passion, that when He came to England, whither she also came, it was settled between them that they shd. marry.—But in England she became acquainted with Sir Joshua Reynolds, who showed Her much attention, & it is supposed she looked to Him, expecting that He wd. offer Himself to Her. Her reception of Dance having now become more cold, & Her intercourse with Sir Joshua being noticed by Him. He remonstrated with Her in such a manner that she com-marry him. His passion for Her was extreme & He engaged Farber to write to Her, but did not do so. Her resolution remained unshaken. Dances & the like were beautiful, but there was something amiable & tender in Her appearance that engaged people to Her.

Napoleon in Germany

January 7. General Marmont & all his army having already left Noy with a considerable force to act in conjunction with Sir Smith against Portugal, it is certain, that the first resolution Prince of Brazil took to Brazil, to march off the 100,000, and unnecessary. Lord Frobenius who has lately returned from Paris to Vienna, reports that the popularity of Napoleon in Germany amounts to enthusiasm.

* General Marmont's army left Noy, Aug. 1. 1811.

INDEX

- Anna*, Charles (Speaker of the House of Commons, afterwards Lord Chancellor), 61
Abbotshurd, 105*n*
Abercrombie, Anne Jane, Marchioness of, 162
     John James, 1st Marquess of, 86, 151
Aberdeen, George, 3rd Earl of, 105*n*
     George, 4th Earl of, 26*n*, 161, 180
Albion, George, 5th Earl of (afterwards 9th Marquess of Huntly), 241
Abyssinia, 10*n*
Academy Rural, 10, 80, 180, 12, 35, 40*n*, 38-60, 61-4, 71, 71, 73, 82, 87, 90-1, 100-1, 108 and n, 109*n*, 111, 111 and n, 113 and n, 115-6, 116, 121, 124, 131-2, 134, 135, 140*n*, 140, 149, 170-2, 181, 188*n*, 201, 212 and n, 214-5, 218, 221, 222 and n, 230, 230, 235, 240, 25-31, 252*n*, 253, 257, Presidency of, 12, 31 and n, 41, 48-51, 51, 52, 59, 62-3, 112*n*, 113, professorship of painting, 45, 50, 54, 56, George III. and, 54, 59, 82, 24-1, 245, election of the first Chaplain to, 82-3, generosity of, 100-1 and the funeral, 123; Annual Dinner (1802), 135, 144; and promise to J. Storr, A.R.A., 145, and Rembrandt's "Susannah," 145 and n, dramatic allusion of, 124, Reynolds' picture by literary reading, 188, general meeting to decide premiums (1803), 238, premiums awarded, 211-4, professorship of perspective, 244, 246, relation of, 240, Smollett's candidature for Keepership of, 240, 245, law of filling vacancies, 250, "And no Members," by J. E. Hodgson and F. A. Eaton, 241*n*
     Schools, Royal, 22*n*, 214, 211, II, West lectures on Art to students of, 211-4 of Painting, Antwerp, 22*n*
Arland, Sir Thomas Dyke, 72*n*
     Lady, See Fintescur, Lady
Arloir, Sergeant, 153
Arloir, Robert, 210
Adams, John, President of United States, (1797-1801), 184
     William Darcie, 139 and n
Addington, Miss Anne, See Goodenough, Mrs. W.
     Anthony, 72*n*
     Henry (afterwards Viscount Sidmouth), 180, 55, 72*n*, 73
Adham, Joseph, 173
Adelphi, London, 31, 255
Admiralty, Court of, 190
Adolphus, Al. (grandfather of John Adolphus), 220*n*
     John, 220; histories written by, 221 and n, notice of, ib. n
     Mrs. 220 and n
     John Greywater, 220
     "Letters to Richard Heber," by, ib. n
Africane, a frigate, 83
Ahmad (or Achmet) IV., 175
Alder, John (Lord Mayor of London 1807-8), 220
Albany, Countess of. See Louisa Maximiliana, Princess
     The Piccadilly, 206
     New York, 217
Alderson, James, M.D., 117-121
Aldgate Ward, City of London, 55
Alexander I., Treaty of Russia, 106; and Dubril's Treaty with France, 60; dines with Napoleon, 184-5; breaks off communications with England, 229
     William, 221
     "Alexander's Feast," by John Dryden, 198
Alexandria, 370
Allan, Sir William, 45*n*
Allardier, Captain Barclay, his race with Wood at Newmarket, 202-3; notice of, 203*n*
Allen, H. Warner. Letter from, 148*n*

- Bankes, Mr. (eldest son of Henry Bankes), 111-2
 , George, 111 and n.; works by, 111-2
 , Henry, 91, 111-2; notice of, 111-2;
 "Civil and Unconstitution History of Rome," by, 76
 , Miss, 112
 , Sir John, 111-2
 , Sir Joseph, 101, 222
 , Lady, 222
 , Miss, 222
 , William John, 111 and n.
- Bankes, Mrs., 222
 , Sir Joseph, 192-3; his income, 192
 , Lady, 192
- Banti, Brigitta Giorgi, 212-2
- Barley, Captain (the Pedestrian). See Allartier, Captain Barley
 , George, M.P., 98-9
- "Bard, The," by Richard Cumberland, 108
- Barling, Charles, Lawrence's portrait of,
 19, 43, 53, 108, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117,
 118
 , Sir Francis, 19, 43, 45, 46, 53, 80,
 108, 112, 116, 118, 119, 120, 220,
 249; Lawrence's portrait of, 19-20,
 53, 108, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117,
 118
 , Lady Francis, Lawrence's portrait of, 20
 , George, 19
 , Mrs., 18-9
 , Thomas, Lawrence's portrait of, 2-9
- Barker, M. (a Government Counsel), 81
 , Benjamin (Artist), 212
 , Mr. (son of Robert Barker), 189
 , Richard, 212, "The Woodman,"
 by, 76
 , Robert, 189
- Barnard, Thomas, Bishop of Limerick, appointed Chaplain to R.A., 82-3
- Barnes, 82
- Barrett, Mr. (of Vauxhall), 184
 , George, R.A., 141
- Barrington, Hon. Shute (Bishop of Durham), 62-3
- Barry, James, R.A., 118, 121, 182, "Birth of Pandora," by, 11-4, 128; cause of his death, 11; his character, 14;
 his art, 128-9, "Jupiter," by, 128-9;
 "Venus Rising from the Sea," by, 129
- Barstow, James, 246-7, notice of, 246-8
- Bartholomew, Francesco, 451
- Barton, Messrs. (of Manchester), 209
- Basinghall Street, London, 81
- Bateman, John, and Viscount, 125, 214
 , William, 1st Lord, 41-2
- Bath, Thomas, and Marquess of, 33
 , 71 and n., 110, 114, 133, 180-1, 212,
 249, 242; H. West and scenery of,
 211-2; Artists encouraged in, 212
- Bathurst, Henry, 3rd Earl, 167
- Battrabie, Mr. (Banker), 69
 , Miss, 69
- Beaumont, Mrs. (mother of Sir George Beaumont), 47, 105
 , Sir George, 40-2, 44, 46-8, 101,
 104-5, 116, 122-4, 129, 133-7, 230, 257
 , Lady, 41-2, 111, 129, 257
- Beauvais, Mrs. (Dressmaker), 15
- Beckham, Kent, 71
- Beckford, Horace William (afterwards 3rd
 Lord Rivers), 196
 , Lady Margaret (wife of William Beckford), 211
 , Peter, M.P., 196
 , Mrs., 196
 , William, Alderman (father of William Beckford), 197-9
 , Mrs. (mother of William Beckford), 211
 , William (Author of "Vathek"),
 12 and n., 197, 241; his singularity,
 11; his fortune, 242; and persecution, 242-3; Lady Loughborough and, 213
 , The Mises, 13
- Bedford, John, 6th Duke of, 28, 61, 68
- Bedford, H.M.S., 250
- Bedfordshire, 212
- Bechey, Sir William, R.A., 50, 57, 78, 114, 171, 218, 228, 240, 252-3; his portrait of Lord Buckinghamshire, 111-4
 , Lady, 218
- Belasyse, Lady Anne, 62; notice of, ib. n.
 , Lady Elizabeth. See Lucas, Elizabeth, Countess of
- Bell, Miss (sister to Mrs. Priscilla Wakefield), 218
 , Daniell (father of Mrs. Priscilla Wakefield), 218-9
- Belle Isle, 180
- Bellingborough, Lincolnshire, 212-3
- Bellingham, John, 48-9
 , Lady (wife of Sir William Bellingham), 24-5
- Bell's Weekly Messenger, 42, 49, 52, 57, 59, 200
- Bellon, Miss (Actress), 161
- Belvidere, Robert Rochfort, 1st Earl of, 13-2
- Belvoir Castle, Leicestershire, 41
- Bengal, 13-2, 19, 157, 247, 254

- "British Gallery of Engravings," 107 and n., 210 and n.
- "British Gallery of Pictures," 107n
- Institution, The, 44, 64, 74n., 87, 113n., 119, 180, 221, 227 and n., 228, 252, 256
- Museum, 170n., 111n., 167n., 170, 221n., 232n
- Broadstairs, 81
- Brome, Charles, Viscount (afterwards 2nd Marquess Cornwallis), 2; notice of, ib. n.
- Londra*, Viscountess (afterwards Marchioness Cornwallis), 2n
- Bromley, William (Engraver), 8
- Brompton Park, Middlesex, 16
- Brome, Duke of New Nelson, Rev. William, 1st Earl
- Brooke, Mr., 128
- Mrs.*, 128
- Mrs.*, 128
- Lord Henry Picton (afterwards 3rd Earl of Warwick), 69
- Brooking, Charles, 22
- Brougham, Henry, 1st Lord, 170n
- Brown, Mr. (Coburnian), 18
- Brown, Miss Anne. See Trelawny, Lady Anne
- Rev. James*, 249
- Bruce, Frederick, 11 and n., 12, 21, 21, 25
- Mrs.*, 25
- James*, 17 n
- Brownwick, Charles William Ferdinand, Duke of, 16 n., death of, 22
- Brown, John (Actor), 61, 222n., 215
- Miss Emma*. See Craven, Louisa, Countess of
- Brown, 222n
- Bryan, Michael, "The Gallery of Painters," 14, 113n., 212n
- Breaston, Horace, 112n
- Square*, London, 112n
- Bull, J. C., his monument to Pitt, 1 and n., 25; notice of, 19
- Buchanan, W. (Picture dealer), 107n., 113 and n
- Buckingham Street, York Buildings, 16
- Buckinghamshire, Robert, 21st Earl of, Beecher's portrait of, 113
- Burns, Ayres, 24, 29, 9; effect of capture of, 24-6, 27n
- Burby, Henry William, 21; his portrait of Mrs. Atkyn (Miss Walpole) as Nancy in The Camp, 232n
- Burn, Benjamin, 166
- Burch, Mr. (Picture dealer), 116
- Burdett, Sir Francis, 45, 14; 195; and an Agrarian Law, 119
- Burdett, Lady, 195
- Burges, Sir John Bland, 126 and n
- Burke, Edmund, 135n., 157n., 162n., 166, 198; "Reflections on the French Revolution," by, 22; Sir J. Reynolds and, 110
- Burke's Extinct Pterage, 69n
- Burleigh-on-the-Hill, Rutlandshire, 210
- Burlington, New Jersey, 212n
- Burney, Charles, Mus.D., 237
- Miss Fanny* (Miss. D'Arbly), 156n., 157n
- Burnham Wind, 7
- Burns, Robert, 42
- Burroughs, Rev. Mr., 94
- William*, 61
- Bury, Lady Charlotte, "Court of England under George IV.," by, 141n
- Bushy, Charles A., 234
- Bute, John, 1st Marquess of, 196
- John*, 3rd Earl of, 210
- "Buzzard," a horse, 198
- Byng, Major George, M.P., 45 and n
- John*, Admiral, 94
- Byrne, Mr. (father of John Byrne), 179, 224
- Miss* (eldest sister of John Byrne), 179
- Miss* (youngest sister of John Byrne), 179
- John*, 149, 179, 224, 231
- Mrs.*, 179
- Miss Letitia*, 179
- Byron, George Gordon, Lord, 61n
- Cantel, Thomas, 230
- and Davis, Messrs., 140, 179, 223n., 25n
- Cadiz, 10n
- Calcutta, 13 and n., 19, 33, 38
- Calcutta (H.E.I. Co.), 75n
- Caldwell, Mr. (Land steward to Earl of Leicester), 118-9
- Callcott, Sir Augustus Wall, R.A., 36, 101, 107-8, 132, 176; "Evening," by, 111-4
- Calumet Collection, The, 123n
- Cambridge, Adolphus Frederick, 1st Duke of, 107, 191
- 126, 220-1; Statue of Pitt at, 56
- Cambridge (H.E.I. Co.), 75n
- University, 177; Trinity College, 6n.; King's College, 11n.; Chapel of, 224; St. John's College, 157n
- Cambridgeshire, 51
- Camden, John Jeffreys, 2nd Earl of (afterwards 1st Marquess), 85
- Camellion, Thomas, 2nd Lord, 225
- Camp, The, a play by R. Tickell, 232n
- Campbell, General, 184

- Christie, Mosses, (Auctioneers), 14 to 1, 155, 152-3
- "Civil and Constitutional History of Rome," by Henry Bunsen, 111n
- Clapham Common, 202
- Clare Market, Druce Lane, 8n
- Clarence, William Henry, Duke of (afterwards William IV.), 111, 211, and Mrs. Jordan, ib.; receives freedom of King's Lynn, 211-6
- Clarke, Captain, R.N., 177
 , Edward Daniel, L.L.D., 177
 , Mrs., 177
 , Rev. James Sturt, his "Life of Lord Nelson," 1-5 and n., 177
 , John Calvert, 20
- Claude, 50, 110, 210, 227; "Embarkation of Queen of Sheba," and "Marriage of Isaac and Rebecca," 152, 119n; "Landscape and Seascapes," by, 113 and n.; his art as compared with the Dutch Masters, 209
- Churchland Street, London, 179
- Childen House, 21
- "Clothing of the Naked," by J. Opie, 150
- Cobbett, William, 170, 222, 272; Opie's portrait of, 170
- Cockerell, Samuel Pepys, 16, 192
- Codrington, Christopher, (1.) notice of, ib. n
 , Sir Corbould William Henry, 120
 , Sir William (2d Baronet), 120
 , Sir William (3d Baronet), 120
- Coke, Thomas William (afterwards Earl of Leicester), 118, 145, 144, 1, 162, 205 n.; Lawrence's portrait of, 176 n., 179; Opie's portrait of, 177, as his own Lord Steward, 176 n.; and the Norfolk Election, 176, 144
- Cobbeville, 27
- Collection, 22, 23
- Coderidge, Samuel Taylor, 170, 211, 219
- Coleridge, "View of," See W. Smith, 124
- College of Physicians, 107n
- Collins, Mr. and Messrs. Barrett, 240
 , William, R.A., 240
- Columbo, Paul (Printer), 215
- Columboke, 174
- Combe Hatfield House, 55n
 , Harry Christian, 55, 117; notice of, 55n
 , William (author of "Pr. Syntax"), 44n
- Committee of Trade, 110, 91, 92, 100
- Comrie, Mr. (an Auctioneer), 30, 98
- Condé, Louis Joseph de Bourbon, Prince of, 108
- Conduit Street, London, 14
- Cungleton, Cheshire, 196
- Connaire, The, 63n
- Conolly, Arthur, 128n
- Constable, Gilling, 215
 , Mrs., 216
 , John, R.A., 108, 167, 188-9, 214-5, 220 and n.; 227, 238-9, 246-7
- Constantine Pavlovich, Grand Duke of Russia, 106
- Constantinople, 175
- Cook, Captain, 8n
- Cooke, Benjamin, M.D., 246n
- Coquette Grove, Epping, 75n
- Copenhagen, 206
- Copley, John S., R.A., 251
- Cornhill, Richard, 108 and n.; "The Bull," by, 108
 , George, 108n
 , Henry, 108n
- Cork Castle, 110n; "Story of," by George A. Bunsen, ib. n
- Cork, Richard, 1st Earl of, 253n
 Street, Burlington Gardens, 198-9
- Cornwall, Mrs., 116
 , 21, 114, 125, 126 and n., 157n; Methodists in, 29; John Smith's View in, 231
- Cornwallis, Charles, 1st Marquess, 20; Bayon's statue of, 99, 91 and n.
 , Mrs. C., 20
- Couragiu, "Virgin and Child," by, 143 and n
- Cowicks, The, 116
- Coway, Richard, R.A., 50, 154, 183, 201, 250
 , Mrs., 121
- Cotes, William, 170, 19
 , Mrs. See D'Oyley, Lady
- Couchet, J. Louis, 65n
 , Lady See Wodey, Lady
- "Court of England under George IV.," by Lady Charlotte Bury, 141n
- Courtesy, William, Viscount (afterwards Earl of Devon), 243 and n.
 Family, 243n
- Coutts, Thomas, 195-6; and Lawrence's Financial Affairs, 88, 125; and Reynolds, 88; and Miss Mellon, the actress, 195 and n.
 , Mrs., 195-6
- Covent Garden Theatre. See Opera House
- Cox, Rev. Thomas, 87
- Coxe, Edward, 121
 , Peter (Auctioneer), 123n, 132; notice of, ib. n
 , Peter, M.D., 132n
 , Venerable William (Archdeacon of Wiltshire), 132n

Crabbe, George, 162<sup>n</sup>
 Craven, Hon. Henry Augustus, 235
 —, Louisa, Countess of, 232, 234;
   notice of, 232<sup>n</sup>
 —, William, 1st Earl of, 232, 234
 —, Street, Strand, 183
 Creevy, T., 172<sup>n</sup>
 Creswell, Mr. (Actor), 161
 Crewe, Mrs., 161
 —, Hon. Miss Emma, 51, 172
 —, John, 1st Lord, 51, 181<sup>n</sup>, 249
 —, Lady, 172, 181 and n., 249
 —, Hon. John, General (afterwards 2nd Lord), 249; notice of, ib. n.; Reynolds' portrait of, ib
 —, Mrs. (afterwards Henrietta Maria Anne, Lady Crewe), 249 and n
 —, Robert Offley Ashburton, 1st Marquess of, 249<sup>n</sup>
 —, Hall, 51
 Crockatt [Crockett], Charles, 182
 —, Mrs. See Angerstein.
 Cromwell, Oliver, 180
 Cronstadt, 257; British ships at, 235
 Crossthwaite, Mr. (of Keswick), 224
 Crotch, Michael, 236<sup>n</sup>
 —, Mrs., 236<sup>n</sup>
 —, William, Mrs. D., 227, 246-7; on famous singers, 236-7; notice of, 236<sup>n</sup>
 —, Mrs., 246
 "Crown and Magpie," High Street, Aldgate, 226<sup>n</sup>
 Cumberland, Ernest Augustus, 1st Duke of, 191
 —, Richard, 85, 126-7, 149; notice of,
   126<sup>n</sup>.; "Memoirs," hy, 246<sup>n</sup>
 —, William Augustus, Duke of, 22
 Curacao, English capture of, 89
 Curley, Mr. (a Brighton Shepherd), 202
 Cust, Lionel, 77<sup>n</sup>
 Cuthbert, Mr., 144

DAMER, Mrs. A. S., 70 and n
 Dance, Charles, 46
 —, George (father of the two R.A.s), 258
 —, George, R.A., 46 and n., 47, 50, 59,
   86, 130, 146, 148-9, 152, 180, 191,
   209, 228, 257; his relations with Sir
   John Soane, 46 and n.; his portrait of Farington, 70
 —, Nathaniel, R.A. See Holland, Sir
   Nathaniel Dance-
 —, Sir Nathaniel (Commodore of East India Company's Fleet), 46 and n
 Daniel, George, 40<sup>n</sup>
 Daniell, Thomas, R.A., 37, 63, 87, 111, 134,
   and n., 135, 154, 164, 187, 196, 209,
   227, 245

Daniell, William, R.A., 140, 187, 256; his income, ib.; his plates for Wood's
   "Zoography," ib
 —, Mrs., 256
 Danube, 175
 Dardanelles, 175; British Fleet in, 125
   and n
 Dart, 'The River, 178
 Dartington, Devon, 178 and n
 Dartmouth, George, 3rd Earl of, 91
 —, 8 and n., 9, 177-8
 Datchet Bridge, near Windsor, 174
 David, Jacques Louis, 245
 Davies, Randall, "Thomas Girtin's Water
   Colours" by, 103<sup>n</sup>
 Davis, Mr. (of Cadell & Davis), 223, 230-1
 —, Richard Barrett, 187
 Davison, Alexander, 80 and n
 Davy, Sir Humphry, 44, 232-3; notice of, 44<sup>n</sup>
 Dawe, George, R.A., 227; notice of, ib. n.;
   his "Life of Morland," ib
 De Clifford, Lady (Governess to Princess Charlotte of Wales), 141; notice of,
   ib. n
 De Cort, Hendrick, 143, 154; notice of,
   143<sup>n</sup>.; Views of Salisbury and Exeter
   Cathedrals, by, 197
 Dec, Mrs. (from Lisbon), 4
 Defence Bill, 'The (1807), 185
 De La Warr Family, 'The, 158
 Denbury, 178<sup>n</sup>
 Dene, Kent, 72<sup>n</sup>
 Denmark, 224; attacked by England, 194,
   200, 202, 206; England declares war on, 211
 Dennis, Rev. Jonas, 209
 Derby, Edward, 12th Earl of, 209
 Derbyshire, 193
 Descans, Noel Joseph, 170<sup>n</sup>.; death of, 170-1; King of Poland and, 170; his fortune, 171
 —, Mrs., 170-1
 Des Hayes, Madame, 62
 "Designs for Cottages, &c." by J. M.
   Gandy, A.R.A., 77<sup>n</sup>
 De Villet (a French Priest), 22-3
 Devis, Arthur William, 109, 218; "Death of Nelson," by, 55, 109<sup>n</sup>, 151; notice of, 109<sup>n</sup>
 —, Mrs., 218
 —, Miss. See Marries, Mrs
 De Visse, Colonel, 38
 —, Mrs., 38
 De Vlieger, Simon, 209
 Devon, Earldom of, 243<sup>n</sup>
 Devonshire, Georgiana, Duchess of, Nollekens' death mask of, 145

- Devonshire, 166, 177, 1919, 2-80, 209
 "Diana and Her Nymphs," by Rubens, 188
 Dildin, Charles, 51 and n.
     , Rev. Thomas Foulger, 51 and n., 64, 82, 1119
 Dick, Dr., 454
 Dictionary of National Biography, 468,
     720, 1880, 1950, 220
 "Dictionary of Painters," by M. Bryan, 1119, 2179
 "Dido Building Carthage," by J. M. W.
     Turner, 1119
 Diction, The, 214, 111
 "Dionysus delivered at the R.A.," by Sir J. Reynolds, 6, 171
 "Dionysus Prophet," by John Graham, 459
 "Dixie's Emancipator," Blake's drawings for, 499
 Dixwell Oxenden, Sir Percy Dixwell
     Newell. See Oxenden
 Doctors' Commons, 219 Doughton, George Robt (Hann Mel-combe), 216, note of, ib. n.
 "Don Quixote," by Cervantes, 101 R.
     Smock's illustrations to, 21-4
 Douet, George John Frederick, 4th Duke of, 11 and n.
     , 114 and n., 1119
 Douat, 120
 Douglas, Admiral, 204
     , Alexander, Marquis of, afterwards
     5th Duke of Hamilton, 126, 219
     , Lady (wife of Major General Sir John Douglas), 96
 Douce, Military Engineers at, 81
 Downe, John Christopher Rector, Vicar, 162
     and n.
 Downton, John, A.R.A., 120, his nominature of Miss F. Metcalf, 100 n.
     , Mrs., 145 and n.
 Drury, Sir Charles, 199
     , Sir John Hall, 11, 150, 20, 22;
     note of, 119, his unhappy state, 18-9
     , Lady, 15 and n., 16, 19, 20, her portrait, 19
     , Miss Harriet Rochfort. See
     Rochfort, Mrs.
     , Miss Margaret Eliza. See Enghar, Mrs.
     Park, Hampshire, 110, 19
 Drogheda, Henry, 1st Earl of, 119
 Dropmore, 7
 Drummond, Samuel, A.R.A., 215 and n.
 Drury Lane Theatre, 81, 218
 Dryden, John, 86, 127, "Alexander's Feast," ib., 198
 Dublin, 15, 1119
 Duldin Castle, 61
 Duckworth, Sir J. T., Admiral, 1250
 Dudley, Sir Henry Kate, 55 and n.
 Duke, Sir Henry (President of the Divorce Court), 2199
 Duke of Monmouth, H. E. I. C. ship, 254
     Street, Portland Place, 160
 Dulwich Art Gallery, 1700
 Dutch Bell Inn, The, 24
 Dumoniez, Charles François, French
     General, 300
 Dumortier, General. See Dumouriez, C.F.
 Dundas, Philip (Governor of Prince of Wales' Island), 251-5; dies at sea, ib.
     , Mrs., 254
     , Hon. Robert, 103
     , William, 180
 Dunsin, 47
 Dundee, Mr., 83
 Duppa, Richard, 72 and n., 85, 214; his bank on Papal Power, 84 and n.
 D'Uley, Thomas, 36
 Dyer, Rev. Alexander, 2540
 Dyer's Hall, Essex, 200
 Dyart, Anna Maria, Countess of, 216
     , Lionel, 5th Earl of, 216
     , Louisa, Countess of, 216 and n.;
     Huguenot's Portrait of, ib. n.; 'Tom Moor's' verse to, ib.
     , Magdalene, Dowager Countess of 214, 216; Lawrence's portrait of, ib. n.
     , William, 6th Earl of, 214, 216 and n., 247
     , Family, The, 247
 Eaton, 150, 72
 East Court, Finchampstead, 26
     India Company, 460, 61, 214
     India Dock Office, Lane Street
     Square, 220
     Indice, 20, 36, 104
 Eaton, Fred A. See Hodgson, J. E.
 Edgcombe, Lord. See Mount-Edgcombe
 Edinburgh, 180, 330, 114, 121, 1720;
     'Trustees' Academy in, 44, 45 and n.
 Edinburgh Review, 1720, 173, 1740
 Edmunds, Mr. (an Undertaker), 58
 Edridge, Henry, R.A., 63, 70, 213, 253;
     his portrait of Farington, 60, 70;
     his portrait of Nollekens, 73
 Edward III., King of England, 72
 Edwards, S. M., Letter from, 910
 Edwards, Miss, 58, 63-4, 256-7
     , Edward, A.R.A., 43, 58 and n., 63-4,
     256; "Anecdotes of Painters," by,
     43, 58 and n.; death of, 58; funeral of, 63; "Practical Treatise of Perspective," by, 64

- [illegible]

- (Gillespie, John, L.L.D., "History of the World," by, 211
 Gilpin, Sawney, R.A., 88
 Gillingham, 146
 "Gipsy, The," by Romney, 197
 Girtin, Thomas, 161, 173, 241, 242; his "Water Colours," by Randall Hayes, 16-19
 Glauville Street, London, 163
 Glasgow, 18; Presbytery of, and church organ played, 7
 Gloucester, Maria, Duchess of, 401
     , William, Frederick, 2nd Duke of, and the R.A. Academicians, 401, 402; portrait of, 119
     , Bishop of. See Huntingford, Dr.
     , George, 183
     , 81, 222
 Gloucestershire, 177
 Glover, John, 178, 179
 Golden Square, 225
 Goldsmid, Abraham and Abraham Henry, 104; notice of, 158
     , Mrs., 164
 Goldsmid, Oliver, 178
 Goodall, Dr. Martin of Eves, 6
 Goodrough, Mr. nephew of Dr. Goodrough, 14
     , Dr. Samuel (afterwards Bishop of Carlisle), 14; notice of, 129
     , Mrs., 129
     , William, M.D., 129
     , Mrs., 129
 Gordon, Alexander, 4th Duke of, 19
     , Jane, Duchess of, 19, 20 and 21
     , Sir John Watson, 19
     , Mrs. Margaret (nee Foster), Mrs. Hunt, 19
 Gosfield Park House, 19
 Gould, Mr., 29
 Goussier, Sarah, 172; her portrait (French Market) and English Artists, 10
 Gower, Lord (afterwards Earl of Gower), 225
 Grafton Street, Port Street, 222
     , Street, 172, 173, 174
 Graham, Mr. a Magistrate, 79
     , John, 41, 42; notice of, 80
     , "The Hutchinsons' Portrait," by, 15
     , Thomas a Magistrate, 172
 Grant, A. A. Alfred, D.D., 173
 Grant, Mr., 173
 Grant, Mrs. Joseph, 173; notice of, 16
     , Mrs. Anne, Dr. Hunt's portrait of, 16
 Grassano, 21
 Grassano, Henry, 21, 161, 183
 Graves, Alexander, "Anecdotes," by, 173
 Gravesend, 194, 257
 Gray, Thomas, 168
 Great Britain. See England for affairs in common
     , Grimby, 151
     , Torrington, Devonshire, 156-7
 Great, 56; Art of, 211
 Great Street, 89
 Green, Valentine, A.R.A., 221, 227; his salary as keeper of the British Institution, 224
 Green's Lane, Norwich, 246
 Greenwich, 95
     , Hospital, 109
 Grenell, Miss (eldest daughter of Pascoe Grenell), 18
     , Pascoe, M.P., 17, 17, 214, 269
     , Mrs. (first wife of Pascoe Grenell), 17
     , Hon. Mrs. (second wife of Pascoe Grenell), 18
 Grenville, William Wyndham, 1st Earl, 23, 6, 12, 100, 81, 162, 166; and Lord Howick's successor at the Admiralty, 24, and the Catholic Emancipation, 141
 Greville, Mr. (brother to Dr. Greville), 89
     , Rev. Mr. (eldest son of Dr. Greville), 1
     , Master (youngest son of Dr. Greville), 1
     , Rev. George, D.D., 6, 7, 111; notice of, 29; notice of, 8 and 9
     , Mrs., 6 and 9, 1
 Greville, Hon. Charles Francis, 110, 247; "The 100," by, 111 and 9, and a portrait of Lady Watson, 247 and 9; notice of, 247; portraits of, by Reynolds and Romney, 16
     , F.R.S., 158
 Greville Minors, 17
 Grey, Captain, 174
     , Hon. Charles (afterwards 2nd Earl Grey) and Vincent Howick, 14, 79 and 80, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, and his successor at the Admiralty, 25, 27
 Grimaldi, Mr. 17
 Grimaldi, Giovanni Francesco (called Il Bolognese), 153
     , Joseph, 164
 Grout, Dr. Hildyard de, 139; "Catalogue of Dutch Painters," by, 111
 Grout, Robert, 2d Earl of (afterwards 1st Marquess of Westminster), 151, 173, 223
     , Family, The, 223, 226 and 9

- Helston Parish Church, 60
 Henderson, John (Acton), 1800
 Hendon, 1950
 Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, 31
 Henry IV., King of France, 2
     VIII. King of England, 1480
 "Henry VIII." by Shakespeare, 2329
 Heriata College, 221
 Hetat, Siege of, 1280
 Hevelius, 60
 Hewing, Alderman (of Norwich), 150
 Hefford, Francis, and Matques of, 32,
     60 and n., 191
     , Francis Charles, 3rd Matques of, 60
     , Francis George Hugh, 4th Matques
     of, 60
     , Isabella Ann, Marchioness of, 60
     and n., 191
     House, 60
 Heyman, Henry, 410
Hibernia, H.M.S., 146
 Hickey, William, "Memoirs of," edited by Alfred Spurgeon, 2370
 Higginson, Miss. See Banks, Lady
 Higham Freria, 111
 "High Cliff," near Ramsgate, 81
 Hill Street, Berkeley Square, 245
 Hilton, William, R.A., 215 and n., 228, 231
 "Histoire des Peuples Modernes," by
     M. Adolphus, 220
 "History of the World," by Dr. John Gillies, 211
His or Mrs., play by E. Pinck, 2520
 Hitcham, Bucks, 60
     House, near Taplow, 6
 Hoare, Miss Henrietta Ann. See Entreseur, Lady
     , Henry (of Stomhead), 201
     , Henry Isaac of Sir Richard Hoare,
     Kt., 21 and n.
     , Mrs., 21 and n.
     , Henry (son of Sir Richard Colt Hoare, Bt.), 21
     , Miss Mary. See Hoare, Miss Henry
     , Prince (Secretary of Foreign Correspondence of the R.A.), 214, 85, 80, 107, 117, 124, 126, 140, 171
     , Sir Richard, Kt., 210
     , Sir Richard, 1st Baronet, 21
     , Sir Richard Colt, and Baronet, 31 and n., 21; his work on Antiquities of England, 21 and n.
     , William, R.A., 21 and n.
 Hoare's Bank, 21
 Hobbema, M., "Wooded Landscape," by,
     121 and n.; his art, 121-4
 Hodges, Mr. (father of R.A.), 80
 Hodges, William, R.A., Dr. Gretton's story of, 8-11; notice of, 80
     , Mrs. (née Carr, third wife of R.A.), 80, 9, 11
     , Mrs. Lydia (second wife of R.A.), 80, 10, 11
     , Mrs. Martha (first wife of R.A.), 80 Hodgson, J. E., and Eaton, F.A., "R.A. and its Members," by, 2530
 Hogarth, William, his art, 14; "Works of," 70 and n., 80; his "Match to Finch-ley," 91, 92 and n.; "Fortunate Chance," by, 920
     , Mrs., 70 and n.
 Hohenzollern-Ingeltingen, Frederick Louis,
     Prince of, 37
 Holkham, 59, 138, 206
 Holland, Rev. Dr. (Precentor and Prebendary of Chichester), 76
     , Lady Francis, 76
     , Henry, Lord, 164
     , Henry Richard Vassal, 3rd Lord, 32
     , Elizabeth, Lady, 76
     , Sir Nathaniel Dance, 360, 128-9, 130, 146, 148-9, 152, 161, 206, 257;
     his acquaintance with Angelica Kauffmann, 257-8
     , Lady, 146, 161, 206
     , 15, 255; Duke of York's expedition in, 14
     Home, 44, 76
 Holmes, Sir Charles J., 1540
 Holstein, 109
 Holt, Rev. Mr., 50
     , Mr. (Art Critic of Bell's Weekly Messenger), 42, 60-1; "State of the Negotiation of Lord Lauderdale,"
     by, 60
 Holworthy, Miss. See Gardner, Mrs.
     , Samuel, 170
 Hoogstraet, Barn, Charles, story of his duel with Mr. Richardson, 93 and n., 94
 Hone, H., 153
 Houl, Captain, 161
     , Samuel, 1st Viscount, Admiral, 24, 49
 Hoole, John, 2080
 Hope, Henry, 40 and n., 149
     , Thomas, 146, 227
 Hoppner, John, R.A., 370, 45, 48-50, 57,
     70, 75, 78, 82, 85, 107, 111 and n.,
     133-4, 136, 137 and n., 142, 149,
     1610, 162, 168, 213, 215, 228, 233 and n., 234, 236, 250; his portrait of Lady Anne Culling Smith and family, 40; his quarrel with Shee, 40 and n., 400, 82; "Oriental Tales," by, 100, 70; and Farington, 43, 50, 57;

- Jeffries, Mrs., 192
 Jekyll, Joseph, 56
 Jenner, Dr. Edward, 209; House of Commons and a grant to Dr. E. Jenner, 185; receives £1000 from India, 221
 Jennings, Mrs., 92
 Jeremy Street, London, 21
 Jerningham, Edward, 161 and n
 John, Prince Regent of Portugal (afterwards John VI., King of), 211, 250, 258
     Street, London, 129
 Johnson, Mr. (of Calcutta), 19
     , Miss, 19
     , Mr. (Wooden shaper), 157
     , Mr. (eldest son of the Shaper), 157
     , Mrs. (sister to Sir Joshua Reynolds), 157
     , Mr. (Steward to Earl Ferrers), 185
     , Richard, 157
     , Dr. Samuel, 1459, 1579, 1629; his "Lives of the Poets," 85; and Mrs. R. L. Gwarkin, 1569
 Jordan, Mrs. and Duke of Clarence, 20
Journal, The, Paris, 1835
 Judd, Miss (Maid to Mrs. Pomou), 11, 22
     "Jupiter," by James Barry, R.A., 128-9
     "Juvenile Travellers, The," by Mrs. Phillis Wakelield, 1189

 K., 4, 165
 Kaiser Friedrich Museum, Berlin, 1359, 182
 Kauffman, Angela, 70 and n; death of, 1501; her acquaintance with Sir N. Hans Holbein, 2578; and Sir J. Reynolds, 16
 Kemble, Charles, 1520
     , John Philip, 41, 137, 167, 171, 181-2, 201, 2501, as "Humbert," 161
 Kemmery, Mr., 192
 Kensington, 51
     Gardens, 4
     Gravel Pits, 16
     Volunteers, 16
 Kent, Edward, Duke of, 11
     , 24, 94, 191
 Kenton, Mrs. (mother of Ben Kenton), 2269
     , Ben (Wine merchant), 2267, 216; notice of, 2269
     , Miss, 2269
 Kenyon, George, 2nd Lord, 160 and n
 Kerrieh, Thomas, 221; notice of, ib. n
 Ketteringham Hall, Norfolk, 212 and n
 Kew, 241
 Kibworth Beauchamp, Leicestershire, 849
 Kilkake, Bishop of — See Barnard, Thomas
     Bishop of Lincoln
 Kimbolton Park, 20
 King, Mr. (Actor), 1809
     , Mrs. Charles, 1909
     "King Madlad discovering the Virtues of the Bath Waters," by H. West, 212, 230
     King John, by Shakespeare, 2139
     "King Lear," a picture by B. West, P.R.A., 132 and Lochée, Messrs. (Auctioneers of King Street, Covent Garden), 84, 2539 King's Bench, Court of, 56-7, 232
     Bench Prison, 1491, 225
     College, Cambridge. See Cambridge University College, London, 189
     Lynn, 205; Duke of Clarence receives freedom of, 204-5
 Kingston, Somerset, 289
 Kinnaird, Charles, 8th Lord, 1079, 115 and n, 129
     , George, 7th Lord, 116
 Kirtley, Ralph (Servant to Sir Joshua Reynolds), 110
 Knatchbull, Sir Edward, M.P., 193
 Knight, R. Payne, 31, 91, 97, 109, 111, 123, 134, 168, 182; "Analytical Inquiry into the Principle of Taste," by, 31, 85, 1379
 Konigsberg, 95
 Koran, The, 175

 Langens Collection, The, 1239
 Lacey, Miss, 20
     "Lady and Her Family, A," portrait group, by B. Manfrin, 113 and n, 114
 Laffely, Battle of, 22
 Labotaine, M., 151 and n; sale of his collection of pictures, 143 and n, 150, 152-3
 Lahinch, near Enniskillen, 187
 Lamb, Hon. William (afterwards 2nd Viscount Melbourne), 166, 174; notice of, 1669
 Lambeth, 119
 Lancashire, 25
     "Landscaper and Seascape," by Claude, 143 and n
 Landseer, Sir Edwin, R.A., 739, 1799
     , John, A.R.A., 73-4, 152, 179 and n, 201; his "Lectures on Art of Engraving," 73 and n
 Lang, Samuel, 75, 142
 Langford, Edward (of St. Albans), 119
     , Mrs., 119
     , William, D.D., 11; notice of, 119
 Laudowne, William, 1st Marquess, 89, 249
     Manuscripts, The, intended purchase for nation, 179

- Lloyd, Mrs. (of Wincloerwre), 249
 Lloyd's (Underwriters), 79
 Locke, John, 162a
     , William, 24, 58, 88
     , Mrs. (née Jennings), 97
 Lockhart, as quoted by Mayr, 122a
 Lombardy, 247a
 London, 162, 2, 3, B-14, 18, 24-4, 26, 32
     and n., 16, 170a, 18, 40, 45 and n., 54,
     122a, 71, 74a, 76, 79, 80, 88, 94, 102-3,
     114, 126, 144a, 145, 155, 165, 162,
     169, 186, 188, 191, 194, 195a, 196,
     202, 204a, 218, 219, 220, 221, 226a,
     227a, 246a, 247a, 248a, 253a, 255;
     Common Council of City of, and monument to Pitt, 1, 55; Lord
     Mayor of (1807-8), 100; Ainsley,
     John, Recorder of, 100; Silver, 100,
     John
 London, H.M.'s, 240
     , Bridge, 138
 London Gazette, 26, 70, 76, 89, 94, 100, 211, 250
 "London Tavern," 240
     , Tower of, 142; guns of, 26, 89;
     Record Office at, 255
 Long, Earl of, 100; 100a, 212a
     , Charles (afterwards Lord Far-borough), 61, 85, 91, 92, 139, 162a, 180, 240
     , Mrs., 111
 Longman & Kerr, Messrs. (Publishers), 74, 102
 Longleat, James, 172; notice of, ib. n.;
     portraits by, ib.
     , William, 1st Earl, 167
 Longueville, Flora, Countess of, 250
 Loughborough, Charlotte, Lady, and
     William Beckford, 241
 Louis XVI, King of France, 2
     XVII, King of France, 149
     XVIII, King of France, lands at
     Yarmouth, 2-3
     Ferdinand, Prince of Prussia, killed at Saalfeld, 17
     , Sir Thomas, Rear-Admiral, furca passage of Dardanelles, 145; notice of, ib. n.
 Louisa Maximiliana of Stolberg-Gedern,
     Princess, granted a pension by
     George III., 2-4
 Louthburgh, P. J., R.A., 30, 37
 Lowndes, William Thomas, "Bibliographer's Manual," by, 253a
 Lowther, Mrs. See Gwatkin, Miss
     Throphila
     , William, and Viscount (afterwards
     1st Earl of Lonsdale), 47, 60, 150
 Lowther Hall, Westmorland, 47
 Lubek captured by the French, 52
 Lucan, Elizabeth, Countess of, 73 and n
     , Richard, 2nd Earl of, 73
 Luckley Park, Berkshire, 26n
 Ludlow, 214
 Luton, 196
 "Lycidas," W. Jackson's adaptation of,
     145a
 Lyons, Rev. Daniel, 51, 61; "Magna Britannia," by, 140, 179, 221, 223-4, 231
     , Mrs. D. L., Lawrence's portrait of, 30
     , Samuel, 50, 40, 43, 44 and n., 45, 51,
     53, 61, 87, 95, 177-8, 192-3, 197, 220-1, 223, 225, 231; his salary as Keeper of Tower Records, 127;
     "Magna Britannia," by, 140, 179,
     221, 223-4
 Lyttleton, Lady Sarah, 172a
     , Hon. William Henry (afterwards 3rd Lord Lyttleton), 172; notice of,
     ib. n.
 Macao, 109a
 MacArthur, John, 14, 11, 177
 Macchell, Mr., 200, 108
 Mackay, Dr. Charles, 168a
     , John, 219
     , Mrs., 219
 Mackintosh, Sir James, 91a, 114 and n., 115
 McNeil, Sir John, 128a
 Macready, William Charles, 252a
 Madden, Captain, R.N., 97
 Mahid, 62
 Maly, Rev. Mr., 76 and n
 Magdeburg, 76
 "Magna Britannia," by Rev. D. and S.
     Lysons, 140, 179, 221, 223-4, 231
 Makins, Miss. See Welch, Mrs
 Maldonado, 27a
 Mallock, William, 178a
     , Mrs., 178a
     , W. H., "The New Republic," by,
     178a
 Malone, Edmund, 90, 130, 208a, 254
 Malpas, George Horatio, Lord (afterwards and Marquess of Cholmondeley), 204;
     notice of, ib. n.
 Malta, 217, 233
 Malby, Mrs., 169
 Manby, Thomas, Captain (afterwards Rear-Admiral), 84a, 165; and Princess of Wales, 48, 84
 Manchester, William, 5th Duke of, 28
     , 26, 158

- Manfredi, B., "A Lady and her Family," hy, 113 and n., 114; his "Galatea," 113n
- Mann, Sir Horace, 185n
- Manners, Lord Charles Henry S., 41
- , Hon. Charles (afterwards Hon. C.
Tollemache), 216n
- , John, M.P., 216
- , John (of Grantham Grange, Lincolnshire), 252n
- , Hon. John (afterwards Hon. J.
Tollemache), 216n
- , Hon. Laura (afterwards Lady Laura Tollemache), 216n
- , Lady Louisa. See Dysart, Louisa,
Countess of
- , Sir William (afterwards Lord Hun-tingtower), 216
- Manning, Mr., 220
- Mansfield, Mr. (a Leicester Banker), 41
- Mara, Mme. Gertrude E., 237
- Marc-Antonio. See Rainondi
- Marcellus, Mr. (a Tailor), 9
- "March to Finchley," by Hogarth, 91,
92 and n
- Marchant, Nathaniel, R.A., 111, 162, 171, 180, 253
- Marchi, C. F. L., 140, 180, 208, 253
- Margate, 55n
- Marie Antoinette (of Austria), Queen of France, Consort of Louis XVI., 232n
- Marienburg, 79
- Marjoribanks, Captain, 196
- , Mr. (Partner in Coutt's Bank), 196
- Markham, William (Archbishop of York), 133
- Marlborough Street, London, 23
- Marlborough, H.M.S., 250
- Marlow, 2
- "Marriage of Isaac and Rebecca," by Claude, 113n
- Marris, R., 108 and n., 109
- , Mrs., 109
- Martin, Rev. Mr., jun., 201
- Mary, Princess (daughter of George III.), 14
- (of Modena), Queen of England
(Consort of James II.), 2
- Maylebone, 112n., 255
- Masquerier, John James, 64n.; his portraits of Napoleon and of Lady Worsley, 64-5
- Mauritius, 26
- Maxwell, Lady Stirling- (of Keir), 167n
- Mayr, Johann Simon, his opera Lodoiska,
62n
- Meadows, Robert Mitchell (Engraver), 133
- Medici, Lorenzo di, Roscoe's "Life of," 231
- Melbourne, Elizabeth, Viscountess, 62
- Melbourne, Peniston, 1st Viscount, 62 and n
- Melcombe, Baron. See Dodington, George
Bubb
- , Regis, Dorsetshire, 246n
- Mellish, Mr. (M.P. for Middlesex), 45
- Mellon, Miss Harriot (afterwards Duchess of St. Albans), 252n.; and Thomas Countess, 195 and n
- Melville, Henry, 1st Viscount, 103, 196, 254
- "Memoirs," by Richard Cumberland, 246n
- "Memoirs of Paintings," by W. Buchanan, 115n
- Mercury, Buhl's statue of, 1n
- Meredith, Amos, 185
- , Sir William, 185
- Merton, Horatio, Viscount, of Trafalgar, 83
- , College, Oxford. See Oxford University
- "Messiah," oratorio by Handel, 237
- Metcalfe, Philip, 90, 149; Prince of Wales and, 5, 190; notice of, ib. n
- , Miss Frederica, 149, 190n.; Down-man's miniature of, ib.
- Meyer, Henry, 247n
- Michaelson, General, 175
- Middlesex Election, 45
- Milan, 237n
- Milbourne, Mr., jun., 58
- Miles, Mrs., 139
- Miller, Mr. (Bond Street Bookseller), 107
- Miller and His Men*, play by I. Pocock, 252n
- Milman, Sir Francis, 189, 190
- Milner, Sir William, 115
- Milton, Charles William, Viscount, 138, 140, 145
- , John, 36, 127, 198
- Minet, Isaac, 35n
- , James, 35n
- , Mrs. (née Dupont), 35n
- , Joseph, 35, 98-9; notice of, 35n
- , Mrs., 35n
- , Thomas, 35n
- , William (of Fountain Court
"Huguenot Family," by, 35n
- Minorics, The, 226n
- Mint, The, 167
- Minto, Gilbert, 1st Lord (afterwards Earl), 166
- Miranda, Francesco (a Spanish-American General), 30; notice of, ib. n
- "Miseries of Human Life," by Sir James Beresford, 84 and n
- "Miss Sydney Bidulph," a novel by Mi-
Frances Chamberlaine, 90 and n
- Moët and Chandon, Messrs., 148n
- Moir, Elizabeth, Dowager Countess of,
—, Francis, 2nd Earl of (afterwards Marquess of Hastings), 68, 249-50

Maiza, Countess of. See Landman, Flora.
 Countess of
Manarch, H.M.S., 250
 Mann, Dr. Thomas, 74 and n
     Henry, 74 and n
 Montcalm, Gordon de Saint-Véran, Louis
     Joseph, Marquis de, French General, 167
 Monte Video, 270
 Montrose, James, 3rd Duke of, 6
 Mount, Captain, R.N., 250
     Lady Elizabeth. See Rochford,
     Lady Elizabeth
     Thomas, 1740
     Sir John, General, 258
     Tom, his sister to Linnæa, Countess of Dorset, 2109
 "Mount's Almanack," 125
 Mount, Sir Robert, Admiral, 104
 Morgan, Sir Charles, 108
 Montaul, George, Howe's "Life of," 2270
Morning Chronicle, The, 58, 104
Morning Herald, The, 580, 104, 150, 210
Morning Post, The, 3, 580, 1500, 1710, 2170
 Morington, Garrett, 1st Earl of, 30 Mounsey, Lord (afterwards 6th Earl of Carleton), 10
 Moutier, Humphrey, 1100
 Morris, Mr. (sophist of Mrs. Descentia), 100
     J. P., M.P., 186
 Moutier, Edmond A. C. J., Duc de Tervise, Marshal of France, takes Hamburg,
     52
 Mount, Shute George, 10th Earl of, 2110
 Mount, 140
 Moss, Dr. Charles (afterwards Bishop of Oxford), 60 and n, 100
     Charles (Bishop of Bath and Wells), 60
     The Mirror, 100
 Mostyn, Mr., 115 and n, 1480
     Mrs. (see Thrale), 1450
 Mountain, Rev. Jacob (Bishop of Quebec), 178
     Mrs., 178
 Mountcashell, Earl of, 78
 Mount-Edgcombe, Richard, 2nd Lord, 208
 Mountbath, Charles Henry, 7th Earl of,
     101; notice of, 150
 Muges, Rev. C. A., 104
Muse, The, and the Janitoria, 175
 Mulgrave, Henry, 3rd Lord (afterwards
     1st Earl of), 40-2, 48, 100-3, 122, 110-7, 164, 188, 198, 219, appointed First
     Lord of the Admiralty, 104
     Lady, 104

Mulgrave, Lepell, Lady (who died in 1780), 239
     Castle, 101-3
 Mulready, William, R.A., 450, 215 and n,
     Mrs., 215
 Munden, Joseph (Actor), 161
 Mundy, Edward Miller, 1620
     Miss Georgiana E. See Newcastle,
     Duchess of
 Mure, Lord (of Caldwell), 1900
     James, 1900
     Mrs. See Metcalfe, Miss Frederica
 Murray, Mr. (Bookseller in Fleet Street), 85
     Lord Charles, 1610
     Charles (Actor), 161
 Murshidabad, India, 10
 Mustapha IV., Ottoman Sultan, 175
 Nares, 62, 183, 211, 2170
 Napoleon I., Emperor of the French, 24, 30,
     36, 48-9, 52, 60, 79, 83, 95, 106, 108,
     145, 171, 183, 185, 211, 230-1, 245;
     Coalition against, 17; his overwhelming power, 36-7; 431 issues a proclamation to his troops, 52; blockades
     British Isles, 57, 60; Masquerier's portrait of, 64; and English power in India, 171; allies with Alexander I.
     of Russia, 184-5; his popularity in Germany, 258
 Nares, 81
 Nash, Frederick, 224
 National Gallery, London, 1130, 1150, 1410, 1540
     Gallery, Marlborough, 450
     Portrait Gallery, London, 1720, 183
 "Nativity, The," by Rembrandt, 154
     and n
 "Natural Theology," by William Paley,
     D.D., 245
 Naval Courts-martial, procedure at, 104
 Navenbergh, 37
 Neer, Arnold Vander, 104
 Nelson, Rev. James, 157
     Moratin, Vicarini, 83, 106, 151, 158,
     205, 2470; cost of his funeral, 13
     Devlin's picture "The Death of," 55,
     1000, 151; monument to, 100;
     Clarke's "Life of," 100, 177; "Death of," picture by B. West, 150, 236; and England's power at sea, 201
     Rev. William, 1st Earl, 83, 158
     Countess, 156-8
Neptune, H.M.S., 37
 Nesbit, Miss Martha. See Hodges, Mrs.
     Martha (first wife of R.A.)
 "New and Original Drawing Book," by Joshua Shaw, 2120

- Orchard Street, Moxleyton, 1128
 Oriel, John, Lord, 181
 College, Oxford. See Oxford University
 "Oriental Tales," by, John Hoppner, R.A., 400, 70
 Osborne, George, 1st Earl of, 4
 , Anne, Countess of, 4
 , Mary, Countess of (first wife of 1st Marquess of Thomond), 4
 Orleans, Collection, The, 1240
 Ostade, Adrian Van, 100, 110
 Ostrobrk (Ostroborka), defeat of French at, 20
 Otley, William Young, 107
 Oubli, Count (Russian Minister), treaty with France, 60
 "Our Budget," picture by J. Farington, 70
 Owen, William, R.A., 57, 110, 121-3, 140, 142, 144, 146, 148
 Oxenden, Sir Henry, 720
 , Lady, 72 and n
 , Sir Percy Maxwell Nowell Dixwell, 720
 Oxenbury Street, London, 115
 Oxford, Edward, 5th Earl of, 11, 111, 162
 , Jane Elizabeth, Countess of, 31 and n, 162
 , 2540
 University, 21, 2160, 2540. St. John's College, 51, 2160. J. Weston College, 2160. Christ College, 1280
 Packe, Charles James, 411; notice of, 16, n
 , Mr. (son of C. J. Packe), 410
 Pashington, 181, 442
 Patlow, 124
 Paillard, Al. (of Bouzy), 1480
 "Palmer," musical composition by Dr. Croft, 2160
 Pater, William, D.D., "Evidence of Christianity" and "Natural Theology," by, 224
 Pall Mall, 31, 16, 100, 110, 181, 170
 Palmer, Mr. (Theatrical proprietor of Bath), 18 n
 , A. H., 440
 , Charles, 200
 , Charles Lysshe, 20, 28 9, notice of, 200
 , John (of Bath), 184, and his mail carrying scheme, 180 and n.; notice of, 18, n
 , Mrs., 18
 , Mr. (son of John Palmer), 18
 , John (father of Lady Thomond), 150, 150
 , Mrs., 150
 Palmer, Joseph (Dean of Cashel), 156
 , Lady Madeline Eysshe, 26; notice of, 260
 , Samuel (Artist), 450
 , Mrs., 450
 , Miss Theophila. See Gwatkin, Mrs. R. L.
 Paul, Pasquale de', Corsican General, 147
 Papal Power, R. Duppa's book on, 81 and n
 "Paradise Regained," Blake's drawings for, 450
 Paris, 2, 24, 310, 60, 62 and n., 68, 103-4, 130, 2040, 208, 2300, 2540, 255
 Parment, Mlle. (afterwards Mrs. Hughes), 62 and n., 225
 Parker, Mr., 70
 Parliament, 25-6, 50, 60, 101, 144, 161, 162, 166 and n., 1800, 1850, 254
 See also House of Commons and House of Lords
 Street, London, 94
 Parr, Dr. Samuel, 115
 Partington, Mr. (Dentist), 50, 13, 23
 , Mrs., 5 and n., 6, 13, 15-20, 22-3
 Patent Office, The, 550
 Paternoster Row, 73, 84, 107, 1650
 Paul, Mr. (Tailor), 40
 , Mr. (Candidate at Westminster Election), 49, 107
 Paxton, Mr. (Wine merchant), 36
 , John (Portrait painter), 36 and n
 , Sir William, 36
 Payor, Major-General, 128
 Peacock, James, 460
 Pearce, Mr., his walk from Pinlico to Datchet and back, 171
 Pelew Islands, The, 1090
 Pellegrini, Antonio, 253
 Pembroke, George Augustus, 11th Earl of, 32, 258
 Penn, John, 171
 Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, 2120
 Penn, Henry, 13-4, 22; notice of, 130
 , Mrs., 14, 22
 Street, London, 130
 Pentonville, 130
 Penwarne, Mr., 124-5
 Penzance, 440
 Perceval, Hon. Spencer, 48, 96, 103, 108, 165-6, 181, 185-6; notice of, 480
 Perry, James, 55, 104
 Perry and Wells, Messrs. (Ship builders), 137
 Perma, 1280, 171
 Perth, 49
 Peterborough, Earl of, 650
 Petersham, Charles, Viscount, 5
 , 196

Querry, 167, 178-9
 , Bishop of. See Mummie, Rev. J.
 Queen Street, Mayfair, 10
 Queen's Regiment, The, 72
 Quigley, Mr. (an Associate of Roger O'Connor), 145

R, Mr., 61

Raburn, Sir Henry, B.A., portrait of Sir Walter Raleigh by, 180; his portrait of Francis Bacon, 1720

Ragley, near Stratford-on-Avon, 60, 191

Ragosa, 211

Rainaldi, Marc Antonin, 255

Randal, Miss Katherine. See Standart, Miss

Rankin, Captain, 111

Ransom and Muband, Messrs, 69

Raphael, 20, 121, 141, 197, 255; O. Humphrey copies his "Francisco Maria della Rovere," 216 and n

Rav, Mr. (of the Temple), 87

Reade, John, 1st Lord, 249; Lawrence's portrait of, 219

Redford, George, "Art Sale," by, 1970

Red Sea, The, 18

Reed, Isaac, sale of his library, 254 and n.; notice of, 16, n

"Reflections on the French Revolution," by Edmund Burke, 22

Regency Bill, The, 480

Reynolds, Thomas Richard, B.A., 78, 188-9; notice of, 188n

, Philip, B.A., 188n, 190

Rendall, 146; "Susannah," by, 122, 145 and n., 152; "Boats," by, 141 and n.; "Woman taken in Adultery," by, 141 and n., 150, 152-3, 154 and n., 161, 169, 172, 180, 219; 180-1, 150-2, 172; "The Nativity," by, 154 and n

Reedlesham, Peter Isaac, 190

"Rent Day, The," by Sir David Wilkie, B.A., 100, 104-5, 122

Renner, John, 191-2

Repulse, H.M.S., 125

Reynolds, Miss Frances, 191; death of, 208; notice of, 16, n

, Henry Revell, M.D., 219, 254; and effect of drinking port wine, 219-20

, Sir Joshua, 20, 14, 145n, 147, 149, 158, 160n, 16, n., 2 and n., 211, 214n, 216; his "Dissever," 60, 171; his portrait of Nelly O'Brien, 69n; and the Presidency of the R.A., 82-3; his money matters, 88; monument to, 90, 150; and P. Burke, 110; "Laughing Girl," by, 150; his relatives, 156

Reynolds, Sir Joshua--continued.

and n., 157 and n.; "Strawberry Girl," by, 156n; "Simplicity," by, 157n; sketch for his portrait of Mrs. Siddons, 16; his pictures in Mr. J. R. G. Sivatkin's Collection, 16; portrait of Lady Thomond, by, 16; sale of his pictures, 188-9; "Theory," by, 188; Taylor's "Life of," 208n; story of his portrait of Emily Warren as "Thais," 247 and n.; Graves and Croxin's "Life of," 247n; his portrait of John Creve (2nd Lord), 249n; and Angelica Kauffman, 257-8; S. W., his engraving of Mme. Grassini, 237n

Rhin, Confederation of the, 15

"Rhymes on Art," by Sir Martin Archer Shee, P.R.A., 190n, 126-7

Richard III., by Shakespeare, 232n

Richards, John Inigo, R.A. (Secretary to the Royal Academy), 54, 112-4, 133, 175, 240, 245, 251; his neglect of R.A. affairs, 130

Richardson, Lieutenant, story of his duel with Baron Hombach, 93 and n., 94; Mr. (Publisher), 90n

Richmond, Charles, 4th Duke of, 128

, Charlotte, Duchess of, 128

Rigall, John Francis, R.A., 133, 214

Rimick, 175

Rimler, Frank, 450

Rin de la Plaine, 270, 28-9, 97

Rivers, George, 2nd Lord, 196

Roberts, William, 1610, 233n; Letter from, 40n, 41n

Rubmann, Mr. (Bookseller in Paternoster Row), 81

, Mrs. ("Pyrdita"), Romney's portrait of, 69

, Crabbs, 44

and Fisher, Messrs. (Auctioneers), 216n

Rochdale, Lancashire, 25

Rochester, Kent, 73

Rochlout, Miss. See D'Oyly, Lady

, Lady Elizabeth, 130

, George, 130

, Gustavus, 15

, William (father of Lady D'Oyly), 130

, William (brother to Lady D'Oyly), 15, 20

, Mrs., 20 and n

Rockavage, George Horatio, Esq. of. See Malpas, Lord

Rockville, Alexander, Lord, 1950

- St. Vincent, John, Earl of, 84; proposed as successor to Lord Howick at the Admiralty, 25; and Sir H. R. Popham, 25, 27
- Saintsbury, Professor, "Notes on a Cellar Book," by, 148<sup>n</sup>
- Salisbury, Bishopric of, value of, 142
- Cathedral, De Cort's "View of," 197
- Salmon, William Broome, Lieutenant-General, 157<sup>n</sup>
- Salt, Dr. (father of Henry Salt), 37<sup>n</sup>, 38
- Dr. (brother to Henry Salt), 38
- Henry, 38; his tour in India and Abyssinia, 37 and n., 38; notice of, 37<sup>n</sup>
- Salisbury, Richard (of Castle Park, Lancaster), 205<sup>n</sup>
- , Sir Robert, 94
- "Samson and Delilah," by Vandyck, 188
- Sandby, Paul, R.A., 124, 201, 234
- , Thomas, 106
- Sandeman, Mr. (Wine merchant), 168 and n., 169
- Santa Lucia, Convent of, at Gubbio, 62<sup>n</sup>
- Saunders, Mr. (Income Tax collector), 156-7
- , Joseph (Miniature painter), 45
- Saunderson, Robert, 167
- Schiavonetti, Luigi (Engraver), 55
- Schleiz, Prussian defeat at, 37
- Scotland, 6, 18<sup>n</sup>, 38, 44-5, 168, 196
- Scots Greys at Laffeldt, 22
- Scott, Rev. Dr. (Rector of Simonburn), 22
- , Mr. (son of Sir William Scott), 190
- , Miss (daughter of Sir William Scott), 190
- , Sir Walter, 84<sup>n</sup>, 195<sup>n</sup>, 252<sup>n</sup>, 254<sup>n</sup>; "Heart of Midlothian," by, 168<sup>n</sup>; "Waverley," by, 220<sup>n</sup>
- , Sir William, 17, 29, 190, 219, 248
- , Lady, 29
- Scottish Expedition, The (1385), 226<sup>n</sup>
- Scottowe, Captain (in East India Company's service), 61
- Scrope, Sir Henry, 226<sup>n</sup>
- , Richard, 1st Lord (1327?-1403), the case with Sir Robert Grosvenor recalled, 225, 226 and n.
- Seal, Mr., 9
- "Sea-Sick Minstrel, The," poem by Henry Tresham, R.A., 253 and n.
- Sedelmeyer, Charles, 135<sup>n</sup>
- Seguier, David, 129, 142 and n., 143
- Selim III., Ottoman Sultan, deposed and murdered by the Janissaries, 175
- Seraglio, Constantinople, 125, 175
- Sergisson, Colonel, 158
- , Mr. (father of the Colonel), 158
- Sergisson, Mrs., 158
- Serle Street, London, 169
- Shah, Mahomed, 128<sup>n</sup>
- Shairpe, Sir Stephen (British Consul in Russia), 235
- Shakespeare, 195, 254<sup>n</sup>; Messrs. Boydell's edition of, 45<sup>n</sup>; King John, by, 213<sup>n</sup>; As you Like It, Henry VIII., and Richard III., by, 232<sup>n</sup>
- Sharp, Richard ("Conversation Sharp"), 135, 137, 174, 181, 227, 233; notice of, 135<sup>n</sup>
- , W. (Engraver), 18<sup>n</sup>
- Sharpe, Sutton, death of, 37
- Shaw, Joshua, 212; notice of, ib. n.; "A New and Original Drawing Book," by, ib.
- Shee, Sir Martin Archer, P.R.A., 121, 136, 228; his quarrel with Hoppner, 40 and n., 41<sup>n</sup>, 82; "Rhymes on Art," by, 40<sup>n</sup>, 126-7; his art, 149
- Sheffield, Anne, Countess of, 24, 159
- , John Baker, 1st Earl of, 158-9
- Sheldon, John, R.A., Professor of Anatomy, 236
- Sheridan, A. Brinsley, Letter from, 173<sup>n</sup>, 174<sup>n</sup>
- , Richard Brinsley, 32, 43, 45, 89, 90, 167<sup>n</sup>, 168-9, 173, 186, 233; neglected by the Fox Party, 45-6; elected for Westminster, 49; his talents, 53; and women, 173 and n., 174<sup>n</sup>; Vachell's "Life of," 173<sup>n</sup>
- , Mrs. (née Ogle), 173<sup>n</sup>
- , Thomas, 90<sup>n</sup>, 167 and n.
- , Mrs. Sec Chamberlaine, Miss Frances
- Sherwood, near Battersea, 184
- Shipley's Drawing School, 8<sup>n</sup>
- Shobdon Court, Herefordshire, 214
- Sicily, 83, 111, 258
- Siddons, Mrs. Sarah, 180<sup>n</sup>; Reynolds' sketch for her portrait as "The Tragic Muse," 157<sup>n</sup>
- Sidmouth, Henry, 1st Viscount. See Addington, Henry
- Sillwood Lodge, Brighton, 145<sup>n</sup>
- Silvester, John (afterwards Sir John, Recorder of the City of London), 80
- Simeon, Rev. Charles, 169, 198
- "Simplicity," by Reynolds, 157<sup>n</sup>
- Sinclair, Sir John Gordon, 26<sup>n</sup>
- , Lady Madelina. See Palmer, Lady Madelina Fysshe
- , Sir Robert, 26<sup>n</sup>
- Sinigaglia, 62<sup>n</sup>
- Sixth Dragoons, 128<sup>n</sup>
- Slade, Mr., 114

- Slave Trade Act, Wilberforce's, 138
 "Sleeping Nymph," by R. Westall, R.A., 111
 Smallwood, John Henry, 219<sup>n</sup>
 Smart, Christopher, "Student" by, 92<sup>n</sup>
 Smirke, Richard, 164-5, 240
 —, Robert, R.A., 48-9, 59, 70, 78, 86, 162, 167<sup>n</sup>, 196, 209, 230, 233, 245; his illustrations to Don Quixote, 230-1; George III. and his candidature for R.A. Keepership, 240-1, 245
 —, Sir Robert, R.A., 31, 47, 162, 167 and n.; his design for Lowther Hall, 47
 Smith, Dr., 159
 —, Mr. (Judge Advocate in India), 186
 —, Mr. (of Piercefield), 110<sup>n</sup>
 —, Adam, 162<sup>n</sup>
 —, Lady Anne Culling, 4; notice of, 4<sup>n</sup>.; Hoppner's portrait of, ib
 —, Charles Culling, 4<sup>n</sup>
 —, John (known as "Warwick" Smith), his views of the Coliseum, 134, and in Cornwall, 231
 —, Joseph, 85
 —, J. T., "Nollekens and His Times," by, 5<sup>n</sup>
 —, Miss Polly. See Bruce, Mrs. Crawford
 —, Sir Sydney, 165
 —, Rev. Sydney, 44, 76 and n., 135<sup>n</sup>, 168, 172
 —, Sir William Sidney, British Admiral, 250, 258; blockades port of Lisbon, 250
 "Smith's Catalogue Raisonné," 123<sup>n</sup>
 Snell, Mr. (Auctioneer), 188
 Soane, Sir John, R.A., 77<sup>n</sup>, 192, 197, 250, 253; his relations with G. Dance, 46 and n — Museum, The, 46<sup>n</sup>, 77<sup>n</sup>
 "Social Day, The," a poem by Peter Cox, 132<sup>n</sup>
 Society of Antiquaries, 29, 53 and n., 61, 87, 111<sup>n</sup>.; N. Carlisle appointed Secretary, 87
 Soho Row, 41
 Somerset, Jane Georgiana, Duchess of, 167<sup>n</sup>
 —, 246<sup>n</sup>
 Somerville, John Southey, 15th Lord, 132, 240
 "Son of God creating the Universe," ascribed to Leonardo da Vinci, 107 and n
 Sophia Matilda, Princess (daughter of 1st Duke of Gloucester), 107
 Sotheby, William, 135 and n., 136-7, 239
 Sotheby's, Messrs. (Auctioneers), 37<sup>n</sup> South Audley Street, London, 141<sup>n</sup>
 — Street, London, 210
 Spain, war with England, 25-6, 27 and n., 89, 90; affinity of the language of Portugal and of, 35; amount of wool produced in, 197
 Spedding, Miss Margaret. See Froude, Mrs. R. H.
 Spence, Thomas, 249
 Spencer, George John, 2nd Earl, 55, 172<sup>n</sup>, 205<sup>n</sup>
 —, Hon. William, 172
 —, William Robert, 137, 168 and n
 —, Mrs., 173
 Spenser, Edmund, 198
 Spring Grove, Hounslow, 193
 — Grove, Richmond, Surrey, 43<sup>n</sup>
 Springhall, Mrs. D. See Hankin, Mrs.
 Spurgeon, Mr. (a Yarmouth Attorney), 203-4
 —, Rev. Mr., his mode of living, 203-4
 —, Mrs., 203
 Spurling [Sperling?], Mr., 15-6
 — [Sperling?]. See Rochfort, Mrs. William
 Stafford, Granville, 1st Marquess of, 91, 115
 —, 174<sup>n</sup>
 — Election, 43
 Standard H.M.S., 125
 Stanislaus (II.) Augustus Poncatowski, King of Poland, 170
 Stanton, Admiral, 5<sup>n</sup>
 —, Mrs., 5<sup>n</sup>
 "State of the Negotiation of Lord Lauderdale," a pamphlet by Mr. Holt, 60
 Steers, John W., 142
 Sterling [Stirling], Charles, Vice-Admiral, 88
 Stewart, Charles Edward, the Young Pretender. See Charles Edward Stirling-Maxwell, Lady. See Maxwell
 Stoddart, Miss, 128
 —, Charles, 128; notice of, ib. n
 —, John (afterwards Sir John), 233
 —, Stephen, Captain (afterwards Major), 128; notice of, ib. n
 —, Mrs., 128 and n
 Stone, Mr. (of Leominster), 214
 Stothard, Thomas, R.A., 167, 227
 Stourhead, 71
 Strahan and Strong, Messrs. (Long Acre), 209
 Stralsund, 186
 Strand Panorama, The, 188
 "Stranger in Holland," by Sir John Carr, 140
 "Stranger in Ireland," by Sir John Carr, 61, 68
 Stratton Park, Hampshire, 30, 39, 209
 "Strawberry Girl, The," by Reynolds, 156<sup>n</sup>
 Strawberry Hill, Devonshire, 193<sup>n</sup>

- Stubbs, George, A.R.A., 31, 143, 146
 "Stubbs," by Christopher Smart, 920
 Sturges, Rev. John, 1810
 Sturges Bourne, William, 181; notice of,
     ib. n.
 Suffolk, John, 15th Earl of, 153
     ib. n., 155, 191
 Sullivan, Luke (Engraver), 920
 Sully, M. de B., Duc de, 2
 "Sun Rising Through Vapour," by J. M. W.
     Turner, 111 and n., 114
 "Sunrunch," by Remondt, 113, 115 and
     n., 152
 Sussex, Augustus Frederick, Duke of, 149
     158; coat of arms, 158
 Swale House, Northumberland, 23
 Swiss Island, The, 211
 Switzerland, 211
 Swedenborg, 140

 TABLE DIV. 220
 Tager river, Russian battleships in, 23
 Taphu, G. 1, 8, 21, 180
     ib. n., 150
     ib. n., 151
     ib. n., 152
     ib. n., 153
 Tasquerra, Cheshire, 180
 Taux, Timpato, 198
 Tate Gallery, London, 119 Taverock, Francis, Marquess of (afterwards 6th Duke of Bedford), 23, 20
 Tash, Mr. of the Opera House, 80, 190 208
     ib. n., Letter from, 910
     ib. n., Herbert, 910
     ib. n., Mrs. Mary, 100
     ib. n., Mr. Robert, 101
     ib. n., "Late of Reynolds," by, 208
 "Tash Paper Book," 910
 Tassan, John, 1st Lord, 91
 Temple, The, 20, 111
 Templeton, Mary, Vicarage, 58
 Tenon, David, 1, 136
 "Teth," Reynolds' portrait of Lady
     Watson, 21, 22 and n.
 Thoms, The, 112, 113
 Thurst, Sir John, 9th Earl of, 144
 Thatched House Tavern, 221, 223
 Threlton, Peter, 111
     ib. n., 169
 "Thurs," design for painting on R.A.
     Library ceiling, by Reynolds, 153
 Thomond, Mary, Marchioness of, 1, 50,
     16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27,
     28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38,
     39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50,
     51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63,
     64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76,
     77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90,
     91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102,
     103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112,
     113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122,
     123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132,
     133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142,
     143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152,
     153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162,
     163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172,
     173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182,
     183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192,
     193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202,
     203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212,
     213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222,
     223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232,
     233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242,
     243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252,
     253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262,
     263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272,
     273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282,
     283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292,
     293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302,
     303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312,
     313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322,
     323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332,
     333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342,
     343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352,
     353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362,
     363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372,
     373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382,
     383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392,
     393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402,
     403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412,
     413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422,
     423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432,
     433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442,
     443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452,
     453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462,
     463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472,
     473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482,
     483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492,
     493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502,
     503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512,
     513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522,
     523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532,
     533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542,
     543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552,
     553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562,
     563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572,
     573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582,
     583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592,
     593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602,
     603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612,
     613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622,
     623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632,
     633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642,
     643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652,
     653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662,
     663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672,
     673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682,
     683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692,
     693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702,
     703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712,
     713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722,
     723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732,
     733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742,
     743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752,
     753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762,
     763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772,
     773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782,
     783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792,
     793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802,
     803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812,
     813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822,
     823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832,
     833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842,
     843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852,
     853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862,
     863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872,
     873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882,
     883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892,
     893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902,
     903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912,
     913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922,
     923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932,
     933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942,
     943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952,
     953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962,
     963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972,
     973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982,
     983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992,
     993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000
 Thomond, Murrrough, 1st Marquess of, 2, 3,
     5-6, 13-5, 17, 21-6, 29, 95, 130, 133,
     1570, 158, 161-2, 180, 188-91; and Farrington, 2-3, 13, 23-1, 26, 29;
     and George III., 3; at the Battle of Laffeldt, 22; has charge of Admiral
     Byng, 95; and Prince of Wales, 191
 Thomson, Captain, 81
     ib. n., Mr. (father of R.A.), 121
     ib. n., Mrs. (of Hrompton), 210
     ib. n., Henry, R.A., 40, 49, 57, 77-8, 107, 117, 120-1, 123-4, 132, 176, 183, 206;
     his account of Opie's death, 117-9
     ib. n., Mrs., 62
 Thonhill, Sir James, 790
     ib. n., Miss. See Hogarth, Mrs
 Thornton, Mr., 209
     ib. n., Mr. (British Minister at Hamburg), 57
 Thrale, Mrs. Henry, 1450, 1620
 "Three Generations of Beautiful Women," by Constance, Lady Russell, 260
 Thurler, H.M.S., 125
 Thurlow, Edward, 1st Lord, 186, 243;
     "Th. Phillips" portrait of, 113; Lawrence's portrait of, 133
 Thurston (formerly Willis), Framington
     Lake, 17 and n. ib. n., Mrs. See Gardner, Mrs
 Tickell, Richard, The Camp, a play by, 2320
 Tierney, George, 143
 Tiffin, Mr. (Frame maker), 110
 Times, The, 44; editorship of, 44 and n.
 Titchfield Street, London, 179
 "Tithan," Racine and Ariadne," by, 115 and n., 116, 120; his art, 115-6, 129
 Tivoli, The, Rome, 212
 Tullamack, John, 1st Lord, 203
 Toulmin, Right Rev. Sir George Pretynman (Bishop of Lincoln), 18, 85, 252
     ib. n., Lady Pretynman, 18
 Tooke, Horne, 91, 105, 195
 Topham, John, 181
 "Topographical Dictionary of Great Britain and Ireland," by N. Carlisle, 61
 Torrida, 89
 Totnes, Devon, 178 and n.
 Townshend, Mr. (of the Herald's Office), 223
     ib. n., Anne, Marchioness, 96, 202
     ib. n., George, 1st Marquess of, and his Barony of Ferrers and Earldom of Leicester, 202; and dispute with his son, 223
 Tower of London, See London
 Towne, Charles, 152

- Trafalgar, Viscount. See Merton, Horatio, Viscount
- , Battle of, 109<sup>n</sup>
- "Travels in India," by William Hodges, R.A., 8<sup>n</sup>
- Trelawny, Lady Anne, 28<sup>n</sup>
- , Rev. Sir Harry, 28; notice of, ib. <sup>n</sup>
- Tresham, Henry, R.A., 107, 133, 214, 228, 236, 251; appointed Professor of Painting at R.A., 234; "Sea-Sick Minstrel," by, 253 and n.; notice of, 253<sup>n</sup>
- Trieste, 145
- Trinity College, Cambridge. See Cambridge University
- Hall, Cambridge, 236<sup>n</sup>
- Trotter, Alexander, 196
- , Counts (afterwards Sir), 94-5, 125, 195-6; notice of, 195<sup>n</sup>
- , Mrs., 195<sup>n</sup>
- Troward, Mr. (Picture dealer of Pall Mall), sale of his pictures, 107 and n., 108
- Truro, Cornwall, 28, 124, 156 and n., 157<sup>n</sup>
- Tuffin, Mr., 165
- Turin, 145
- Turkey, war with England, 125 and n
- Turner, Charles, his engraving of Hoppner's portrait of Louisa, Countess of Dysart, 216<sup>n</sup>
- , Sir John, 6, 17, 22, 29
- , Lady, 17, 22
- , J. M. W., R.A., 41<sup>n</sup>, 74, 100, 108<sup>n</sup>, 136, 153, 228, 233<sup>n</sup>, 236; "Fall of the Rhine at Schaffhausen," by, 101; "Sun Rising Through Vapour," by, 113 and n., 114; "Dido Building Carthage," by, 113<sup>n</sup>; "A Farrier's Shop," by, 113, 133, 140; his art, 132; first plates of his "Liber Studiorum," 153 and n.; A. J. Finberg's "History of Liber Studiorum," by, 153<sup>n</sup>; "Fifth Plague in Egypt," 197; his drawings of Harewood House, 233<sup>n</sup>; appointed Professor of Perspective at R.A., 234
- Tuscany, 211
- "Twenty-four Views of St. Helena and Egypt," by Henry Salt, 37<sup>n</sup>
- Twickenham, 5<sup>n</sup>
- Twiss, William, General, 81
- Tyburn, 185
- UNITED STATES of America, 212<sup>n</sup>, 217, 223, 231; and peace with England, 183-4, 245; ports closed against British, 187; shows a partiality towards France, 231; finances of, ib.; desires to remain neutral, 245. See also America
- Upham, Hampshire, 84<sup>n</sup>
- Upper Charlotte Street, 33<sup>n</sup>
- VALENTIA, Arthur, Viscount, 177; tour of India, 37 and n., 38
- Vancouver, Mr. (agent to Lord Liverpool, Warwick), 69
- Vandyck, Sir Anthony, 132; "Susannah and Delilah," by, 188
- Varley, John, 215, 233<sup>n</sup>
- Vasari, George, "Lives of the Painters," by, 60
- Vatican, The, 134
- Vaughan, Dr., 117-8
- Vauxhall, 108
- Gardens, 184
- Venice, Canaletto's "View of," 111
- Venus de Medici (Statue), 12<sup>n</sup>
- "Venus Rising from the Sea," by Barry, R.A., 129
- Vere, Lady Jane de, 31
- Vernet, Claude Joseph, 197
- Vestris, Madame (Actress), 252<sup>n</sup>
- Vicars, Colonel (of the Horse Grenadiers), 11
- Victory, H.M.S., 109<sup>n</sup>
- Vienna, 121, 175, 258
- "Villa Madame," by R. Wilson, 111
- "Village Politicians," by Sir D. Wilkie, 11
- Pille de Paris*, H.M.S., 136
- Vincent, François André, 245
- Vinci, Leonardo da, Mr. Troward's pictures ascribed to, 107
- "Virgin and Child," by Correggio, 11 and n
- Volunteers, Leicestershire, 41
- "Voyage in Abyssinia," by Henry Salt, 37
- "Voyages and Travels in India," by Valentia, 37<sup>n</sup>
- WAKEFIELD, Daniel, validity of his pictures, 219, 248; notice of, 248<sup>n</sup>
- , Mrs., 219, 248
- , Edward (father of Daniel Wakefield), 236<sup>n</sup>
- , Mrs. (first wife of Edward Wakefield), 236<sup>n</sup>
- , Edward, the younger, 216
- "Ireland, Statistical and Political," by, 16
- , Mrs. Priscilla (mother of Daniel Wakefield), 248; notice of, 248<sup>n</sup>
- "Juvenile Travellers," by, 16
- Walcheren Expedition, The, 209<sup>n</sup>
- Waldeck, Prince of, 22
- Waldron, Mr. (father of the Duke of Devonshire), 83-4
- , Mr. (Shoemaker), 83-4
- , Mrs., 83-4

- Wales, Augusta, Princess of, 21
 —, Caroline Amelia Elizabeth, Princess of, 24, 94, 107, 135, 141 and n., 191; her sensibility, 21; and Lawrence, 48; indiscretions of, 48, 84, 96, 101, 165; George III. and, 96; and Fuseli, 196
 —, Frederick Lewis, Prince of (father of George III.), 21
 —, George Augustus Frederick, Prince of (afterwards George IV.), 18*n.*, 22-3, 51, 61-2, 84, 94, 96, 98, 101, 106-7, 141-2, 190 and n., 191, 235; his accomplishments, 2-4; and Philip Metcalfe, 4, 190; and Prince of Orange, 14; reported death of, 54; Nolckens' bust of, 73; his weight, 98 and n.; attends R.A. Annual Dinner (1807), 130; Hoppner's portrait of, 131; and Lord Thimond, 191; his behaviour, 222. See also George IV
 Walker-Hungerford, George. See Hungerford
 Wall, Charles, 108; Lawrence's portrait of, 39, 40, 53, 108, 110, 114, 130, 132, 134, 136
 —, Mrs., Lawrence's portrait of, 209
 Wallace, Sir Richard, 69*n.*
 —, Collection, The, 69*n.*, 156*n.*
 Wallachia, 175
 Wallack, James William, 252*n.*
 Wallis, John William, 77 and n., 78; his conduct in Rome, 77-8
 —, Mrs., 78
 Walmer Castle, 128
 Walpole, Miss Charlotte (Actress). See Atkyne, Mrs
 —, Horace, 164, 185*n.*; "Anecdotes of Painting in England," by, 64; "Letters of," 65*n.*
 —, Rachel, Lady, 202
 —, Sir Robert, 205
 Walsby, Rev. Dr., 52
 Walter, John (of Bearwood), 26*n.*
 —, John, jun. (II.), and directorship of The Times, 44 and n.
 Ward, James, R.A., 132, 176, 224
 Warren, Miss Emily (alias Bertie, alias Bet Coventry), story of her portrait as "Thais" by Reynolds, 247 and n.
 Warsaw, 79
 Warwick, Francis, 1st Earl of, 111*n.*, 247*n.*
 —, George, 2nd Earl of, 69, 77
 —, Castle, 69
 Wasdale, Dr. John, 162
 Washington, George, 184
 —, 187
 Water Colour Society, The, 134
 Waterloo Bridge, 191*n.*
 Watson, Mr. (a Preston Manufacturer), 209-10
 Watt, Robert, "Bibliotheca Britannica," by, 220*n.*
 Watts, Miss, 246
 —, David Pike, 226 and n., 227, 236 and n., 239-40, 246
 "Waverley," by Sir Walter Scott, 220*n.*
 Weasenham, Norfolk, 201, 206
 Webster, Wedderburn, 198
 Wedderburn, Miss Jean (sister to Mrs. P. Dundas). See Oliphant, Mrs
 —, Sir John, 254
 Welch, Justice, 92*n.*
 Wellesley, Lady Anne. See Smith, Lady Anne Culling
 —, Richard, 1st Marquess, 13, 33, 38, 103, 202
 Wells, Mr. (a West Indian Merchant), 110 and n.
 —, Mrs., 110
 —, Miss (daughter of Mr. Wells), 110 and n.
 —, Miss (sister to Mr. Wells), 110*n.*
 —, Mrs., sen., 182
 —, William, 182, 186 and n., 213, 220, 250
 —, Street, Bath, 212*n.*
 Welsh, Colonel, 104
 —, Mrs., 104
 West, Benjamin, P.R.A., 54-5, 57, 59-60, 63, 79, 82-3, 100, 108, 114-6, 123, 130-2, 134, 139, 150-1, 170-1, 212, 224, 227-8, 230, 237, 239-40, 242, 250-1; his art, 40, 42, 150; and Presidency of the R.A., 40, 43, 50-1, 54, 57, 59, 82, 132*n.*, 133; "Pyrrhus and Orestes," by, 42; indiscretions of, 48-9; his works in St. George's Chapel, 54; and Farington, 49, 50, 54, 59-60, 82-3, 100, 133, 150, 211, 240, 242-5, 248-9; and George III., 48-9, 54, 59, 82, 240, 246; "King Lear" and "Ophelia," by, 132; his financial difficulties, 133; sketch of "Institution of the Order of the Garter," by, 150; "Death of Nelson," by, 150, 236; and R.A. domestic affairs, 174; his visit to Bath, 211-2; "King Bladud Discovering the Virtues of the Bath Waters," by, 212, 230; "Christ Healing the Sick," by 212*n.*; and British Institution, 227; his art lecture to R.A. students, 233-4; visits William Beckford, 242-3; on art in France, 245; his taxes, 246
 —, Mrs., 100, 114, 133, 211-2
 —, Ralph, 60

- Westall, Richard, R.A., 68, 97, 100, 113-4, 124, 134-5, 158-9, 228, 252, 256;
 "Sleeping Nymph," by, 111; "Flora,"
 by, 134, 140, 168
 —, William, A.R.A., 256
 West Indies, 89, 167, 217
 Westmacott, Sir Richard, R.A., 91, 97, 100, 176
 Westminster, 45, 49, 80*n.*, 140; result of election, 49
 — Abbey, 53, 149, 173*n.*, 246*n.*; Handel Festival at, 236*n.*; Choristers' School at, 246*n.*
 — Hall, 149
 — Hospital, 53
 — School, 6, 59
 West Norfolk, 205*n.*
 — Norfolk Militia, 202
 Weston, Mr. (Bond Street Tailor), 98
 —, Miss Maria. See Plindyer, Lady
 Weymouth, 88
 Whalley, Rev. T., 41 and n.
 Wheatley, Mrs. Francis, 107, 160; marries Pope the Actor, 199
 Whig Club, The, 31
 Whitbread, Samuel, M.P., 32, 87, 90; insists on a seat in the Cabinet, 25
 Whitby, 102
 White, Mr. (Auctioneer, Storey's Gate), 246*n.*
 —, Mr. (Leather breeches maker), 186
 White's Club, Bourke's "History of," 247*n.*
 Whitechapel, 226*n.*
 Whiteford, Caleb, 171, 188, 197; and Benjamin Franklin, 183
 White Hart, St. Albans, 11*n.*
 Whitehurst, Mr. (of Bolt Court), 10
 Whitworth, Charles, Earl, 126
 Wilberforce, William, 108, 140, 146, 158, 186; his Slave Trade Act, 138; becomes unpopular, 158
 Wilkie, Sir David, R.A., 42, 44, 45 and n., 48, 91, 104, 151, 213, 230, 239;
 "The Blind Fiddler," by, 41-2, 44, 47-8, 101, 116, 122, 124, 133-4, 140, 149-50; his art, 41-2, 44, 48, 101, 116, 136, 238; "The Rent Day," by 101, 104-5, 122; "Village Politicians," by, 122; "Card Players," by, 238
 William III., King of England, Scotland and Ireland, and Prince of Orange, character and abilities of, 15
 Williams, Solomon, 114; notice of, ib. n.
 —, Thomas, 12
 Williamson, Dr. G. C., "Life of Ozias Humphry, R.A.," by, 216*n.*
 Willis, Francis, M.D., 36, 53, 87
 —, Mrs., 36
 Willis, Rev. Mr., 36
 Willoughby de Eresby, Clementina Elizabeth Drummond, Baroness, 252*n.*
 Wilson, Captain (of H.E.I. Co.), 109
 —, Mr. (Keeper of the Hunter Museum), 236
 —, Lestock P., 75-6, 139, 254-5; notice of, 75*n.*
 —, Richard, R.A., 8*n.*, 72*n.*, 129, 143, 168, 213, 214*n.*, 220, 255; "Niobe," by, 123; "Villa Madame," by, 133; a sketch of Rome, by, 178
 Wiltshire, Earl of (son of Lord Scrope), 226*n.*
 —, 33
 Winchester, 13*n.*, 14, 18*n.*
 Winchelsea, George, 9th Earl of, 210;
 C. Woodforde's portrait of, ib.
 Windham, William, 25, 29, 59-60, 130, 186, 230; and Norfolk election, 138, 144
 Windsor, 11*n.*, 73, 174
 — Castle, 25, 54, 82, 96, 141, 149;
 Wyatt's alterations to, 54
 Windsor Castle, H.M.S., 125
 — Forest, 26
 Winter, Peter Von, Zaire, opera by, 237*n.*
 "Wisdom of Solomon, The," by W. L. Hoppner, 228, 233, 236
 Wodehouse, Colonel, 138, 144
 —, Hon. and Rev. Armine (Rector of Litcham), 202
 —, John, 1st Lord, 202
 —, Hon. John (afterwards 2nd Lord), 202
 —, Hon. Philip, Captain R.N. (afterwards Vice-Admiral of the White), 202
 —, Hon. and Rev. William, 202
 —, Mrs., 202
 Wolcot, John, M.D., 94, 124
 Wolfe, James, General, 151, 167; Woollett's engraving of "The Death of," 55
 Wolff, Jens (Danish Consul in London), 184
 Wolverhampton, 6
 "Woman taken in Adultery, The," by Rembrandt, 143 and n., 152-3, 154 and n., 164, 168, 172, 180, 230
 Wombwell, Sir George (2nd Baronet), 62*n.*
 —, Lady. See Belasyse, Lady Anne
 Wood, Colonel, 110*n.*
 —, Mr. (a Lancashire Pedestrian), his race with Captain Barclay at Newmarket, 202-3
 —, William, "Zoography," by, 256
 "Wooded Landscape," by M. Hobbema, 123 and n.
 Woodforde, Rev. James, 70*n.*
 —, Dr. Robert E. H., 70*n.*

- Woolforde, Samuel, R.A., 70 and n., 71,
     82, 113, 210; his portrait of Lord
     Winchilsea, 210
 Woodlands, Blackheath, 153, 193
 "Woodman, 'Thou," by R. Barker, 212 Woodthorpe, Mr. (Town Clerk of City of London), 55
 Woollett, William, "Death of General
     Wolfe," engraving by, 55
 Woolwich, 93, 192
 Worcester, Frederica, Marchioness of, 4*n*
     —, 53
 Wordsworth, Miss (sister to the Poet), 132
     —, William, 42, 135 and n., 238;
     "Growth of the Poet's Mind," by,
     42; his poetry, 86, 239; as an art critic, 129, 132; his high opinion of himself, 239
     —, Mrs., 132
 Worsley, Sir Richard (of Appuldercombe),
     65; notice of, ib. n
     —, Lady, 65 and n
 Wouvermann, P., 168
 Wren, Sir Christopher, 253*n*
 Wright, Mr. (a Banker), 34
     —, Miss Lydia. See Hodges, Mrs.
     Lydia (second wife of R.A.)
 Wrotham, 95
 Wyatt, Benjamin Dean, 33
     —, James, 32-3, 53, 77*n.*, 78, 201, 241,
     242; and Presidency of the R.A., 32, 40, 43, 50, 54, 59; irregularity of his habits, 32; his alterations to Windsor Castle, 54
     Wyatt, Jeffrey, 32-3
     —, Matthew, 33
 Wyck Rock, Bath, 211-2

 YARMOUTH, 208
 Yarnold, J. W., 188*n*
 Yart, Mr. (Drawing master), 72-3
     —, Miss, 72
     —, Joseph Farington, 72
Yrs or No, play by I. Pocock, 252*n* York, Frederica, Duchess of, 4; notice of,
     ib. n
     —, Frederick, Duke of, 4 and n., 158;
     Prince of Orange and his expedition to Holland, 14
     —, 108; election, 138-140, 145-6
 Yorkshire, 41-2, 108, 144, 158
 Yonge, Sir George, 89
 Young, Rev. Mr. (of Great Torrington), 157
     —, Rev. Mr. (Archdeacon of Norfolk), 157
     —, Mrs. (née Johnson), 157
     —, Mr., 64
     —, Mr. (father of the Actor), 158
     —, Charles Mayne (Actor), 158; acts
     "Hamlet" at Haymarket Theatre,
     ib., 160
     —, Sir William, 97
 Yverdon, 2*n*

 ZEELAND, Island of, 206
 "Zoography," by William Wood, 256

ERRATA

- P. 140. Footnote. Delete "afterwards first Earl of Harewood."
 P. 158. Footnote should read "See Index, Vols. I. and III."
 P. 173. Footnote. For Dean of Westminster, read Dean of Winchester.
 P. 220. Fourth Footnote. Full stop after Frederick the Great, then read "John Adolphus was, author, etc."
 P. 237. Last footnote. For Vigée's, read "Vigée Lebrun's."